A once well known individual who had lived every day of his life and gained from it a great experience left the following advice—and little else—to his sons: "Drink slow; do not mix your liquor; never sit with your backs to the fire." It was an excellent precept for the era in which it was given—the times when the dining room door was kept locked that there might be no shirking the claret and when the only chance at the circuit mess of escaping intoxication was to drop under the table "like the rest," as Lord Cockburn tells us he did, and lie quiet—nay, even when our judges resented that discredit should be brought on drinking by misconduct. Everybody drank, and much too much, in those days, but especially the upper classes. A well known politician discharged his coachman for overturning him in his carriage. "I had certainly drunk too much, sir," urged the poor man, "but I was not very drunk, and gentlemen, you know, sometimes get drunk." "I don't say you were very drunk for a gentleman," returned his master, "but you were exceedingly drunk for a coachman!"—London Illustrated News.

Prairie Fire Raging

During the past week numerous prairie fires have been reported from all directions and in some instances considerable damage has been reported. On Sunday last a bad fire swept over a big strip of Mayfield township and did quite a lot of damage to property. The heaviest losers in this fire were Charley Kjellen and Dan Carroll so far as reported. Mr. Kjellen lost his barn and all his hay. The barn was valued at about $200 and he had about eight or ten tons of hay which was completely destroyed. Dan Carroll lost about sixteen tons of hay, all that he had, and the fire burned within a rod of his dwelling house. This fire is alleged to have been set by a resident of the same township and there is talk of the guilty barty being prosecuted to the limit of the law if he fails to make settlement for the loss sustained by his neighbors.

From other directions where fires are burning the loss reports are very slight, being for the most part confined to isolated stacks of hay.

On Monday A. T. Bergedahl was coming to town from his farm near the Mayfield township line and when close to H. E. La Plante's place he noticed that a fire was burning dangerously close to the hay and buildings. He turned off the road and went to put out the fire. Mr. La Plante was busy cleaning some seed grain in his granary and had not noticed the fire until Mr. Bergdahl arrived. They both fought fire for about two hours and succeeded in saving all the building but a small stack of hay was burned. It was a very close call and but for Mr. Bergdahl's promqt action the loss would probably have run into thousands of dollars as Mr. LaPlante has some very fine large buildings which would likely have peen destroyed.

Mill Site Not Settled.

J. C. Parker, of the S. P. K. Lumber, Cedar & Tie Co., was here on Tuesday to attend to some business matters connected with their lumber yard and also to meet and confer with the Superintendant of the Soo line regarding the site for the new saw mill which will shortly be installed here. The railroad man was unable to be here on that day so Mr. Parker returned home to Bemidji.

It seems that the railroad company wants the mill site to be located near the railroad bridge while the lumber company is desirous of having it at the west end or Central Avenue, where it was located last year. This last named location gives the lumber company a good pond for their logs and a convenient landing place and also a good high site for the mill. At the other place it would be practically necessary to construct a new dam and the ground on which the mill would stand would be much lower and far more remote from the business center of the town. It seems to us that the business men of Plummer are interested to some extent in the location of this mill and we would suggest that they make their preference known to both sides. This mill will be a prominent institution in Plummer for years to come and it would seem to us that it would be better for the general business interests of the town and convenience of the public to have it located at the same place it was last year. It would make very little difference to the railroad company in constructing sidetracks and would help materially in the general upbuilding of the town. Mr. Parker says that the mill will be fully equipped with a planer, re-saw, etc., and that about 1.000,000 feet of logs will be sawed here this year. Next year the cut will probably be more than double that amount. The working force of the mill means several new families for Plummer and we think the new buildings necessary for their accomodations should be located on the present townsite. If the mill is placed east of the railroad bridge the tendency will be for these residences to be built in the vicinity of the mill and remote form the present business center.

Needed Improvements.

In the very near future Plummer will have a saw-mill estaplished and possibly some other new industries which will be permanent institutions in our village and which will bring quite an increase in our population and add to our business development. Should not the village counsil see to it that the village is improved to keep up wite its development?

At different times in the past we have advocated the installing of a suitable system of street lights, and we would again call attention to the deficiency of the village in this respect. We would also suggest that more and better sidewalks be built. If we had a good system of street lights the puplic might be able to follow the sidewalks we have now as far as they go but they don't go very far. There is all kinds of room for more sidewalks and room for improvement in what we have got.

And then we should have a village hall. If any kind of public meeting is to be held there is no place in Plummer for people to meet. We have practically no fire protection and, if we're very lucky, we may not need any. But we mention these few different improvements as being matters that every visitor to the village expects us to have. These things are necessary in an up-to-date village and we dont think any of the people here like to have the Village of Plummer continue much longer without them. It's up to the village council.

For New Telephone Line.

After many days there comes to us a report of a meeting of the farmers out in Equality on Saturday, the 11th inst, for the purpose of starting an organization for the building of a new telephone line between Red Lake Falls and Lillo by way of Plummer. A second meeting was held on last Saturday, the 18 th inst, at which the organization was practically completed. The capital stock of the concern is to $2,500 and the first set of officers are as follows.

Chas. Sall, president; J. W. Lynch, vice-president; J. A. Walker, secretary; Henry J. Enderle, treasrer. Directors: John A. Duffy, Con Short, Nels P. Johnson, Thos Veitch, Olaf Tande.

The title selected for the new organization is the Clearwater Farmers Telephone Co. and shares are to be sold at $25 each. A large number of the farmers along the proposed route have signed for stock and a number of the business men in Plummer and Red Lake Falls have also subscribed for shares. It is the present intention of the promoters to have the line built and ready for use by the middle of July provideq enough shares of stock can be sold at once to cover the cost of construction.

This proposed telephone line, if constructed, will do much to build up the business interests of Plummer and Red Lake Falls, and the live business men of both towns who get the trade from the territory covered should subscribe liberally for stock. The establishment of this line will also be a material factor in the development of the farming districts and will add materially to the value of farm lands along the line. Those deriving the direct benefits in the way of trade from the country served and in the increased values of farm lands should willingly suscribe with sufficient liberality to make a sure thing of the project.

Also for the purpose of designating a resident of said county to be recommended to the state convention for election as a member of the state central committee, and transact such other business as may properly come before the said convention.

FEED ON POND LILIES.

Moose Are Exceedingly Fond of These Pretty Flowers.

At first thought it would appear impossible that such large, gaunt denizens of the forest as moose could in any way be interested in flowers They are, however, exceedingly fond of all kinds of water lilies. Few people know that these flowers grow from thick snake-like root stocks which are so firmly attached to the bottom that the strongest man cannot loosen them. It is from these firmly moored root stocks that the much admired leaves and flowers strive toward the light.

A well known naturalist who studied the habits of the animals in northern Minnesota, where moose are more numerous than in any other part of the world, often found two or three big bulls engaged in gathering their morning meal on the lake bottom The great beasts would slowly stalk about in three or four feet of water, and often their heads would be under water for half a minute at a time, so that their backs would look like bowlders just protruding from the stream; then a pair of magnificent antlers would come up, and the water would be shaken out of the big ears with a flapping noise that could be heard for a quarter of a mile, and then the big, long muzzle would be leisurely chewing a dripping mouthful of water lily leaves and other plants gathered from the bottom.

So intent were the huge animals on gathering flowers that several times the naturalist could row up close enough to secure a good photograph before they splashed noisily back to the shore and disappeared in the black spruce. When the moose find a good lily pond they continue feeding in it until the plants are almost exterminated.—Minneapolis Journal.

His Feelings Were Hurt.

It is strange how unreasonable some people are in business—how unreasonable and how inconsiderate of the feelings of others. As an example, there is the case of a fidelity company in New York which suddenly and arbitrarily canceled the bond it had issued for a man attached in a fiduciary capacity to an important concern. It was the most natural thing in the world for the man to display some feeling and to demand to know the reason for such action. And the inconsiderate head of the bonding company wrote him to this effect:

"Because you were convicted of forgery under another name in the year —— and served a term in the state prison at ——."

The recipient of the note felt so hurt that he couldn't reply. He still is silent.—New York Globe.

A Singer's Avarice.

We hear a great deal about the enormous salaries paid to famous prima donnas nowadays, and we also hear a great deal about their charity and good nature. In the reign of Queen Anne one of the most celebrated singers was Mrs. Tofts, who had a veritable craze for money making as well as a great deal of personal conceit. Pope, who never spared any persons or objects that he satirized, wrote an epigram that must have greatly annoyed the avaricious singer:

So bright is thy beauty, so charming thy song,
As had drawn both the beasts and their Orpheus along.
But such is thy avarice and such is thy pride
That the beasts must have starved and the poet have died

—London Standard.

He Was a Judge.

One of the consuls to Persia during a visit home said at a dinner in Chicago:

"Lady Drummond Wolffe once got permission to visit the late shah's harem. She took a friend with her who was about to be married. The two Englishwomen wandered over the palace, and presently the shah encountered them.

"'Come here,' he said to Miss Blank in his crude French.

"'You are about to be married?' he said.

"'Yes, your highness.'

"'It's late!'"—Boston Post.

Not in His Line.

"They tell me," said the new reporter, who was doing an interview, "that you have succeeded in forging your way to the front."

"Sir," replied the self made man coldly, "you have been misinformed. I'm no forger."—London Globe.

Foresight.

"Talk about foresight!"

"Well?"

"Old Gotrox left a thousand tons of coal in trust, not to be touched until the youngest child is of age."—Kansas City Journal.

How to Be Strong.

Man is strong only by union; happy only by peace. Be firm, not obstinate; courageous, not turbulent; free, not undisciplined; prompt, not precipitate.—Comte de Mirabeau.

I would not enter in my list of friends a man who needlessly sets foot upon a worm.—Cowper.

THE PAINTING SEASON.

Good results in painting at the least cost depend largely upon the material chosen. Paint is a simple compound and the ingredients can be easily tested. The solid part or pigment should be White Lead. The liquid part should be Linseed Oil. Those best informed on painting always buy these ingredients separately and have their painter mix them fresh for each job. Before the mixing the test is made.

Place a pea-sized bit of White Lead on a piece of charcoal or piece of wood. Blow the flame against it and see what it will do. If it is pure White Lead, little drops of bright, pure metallic lead will appear, and with patience the White Lead can be completely reduced to one globule of metallic lead. This is because pure White Lead is made from metallic lead.

You may test dozens of other so-called White Leads and not be able to reduce one of them to lead. If they will not change wholly to lead but leave a residue, it is clear that some adulterant is present.

If you should have your painting done with such materials, no matter how cheap they might seem, it would be costly in the end.

National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York City, are sending on request a blowpipe free to any one about to have painting done, so that the White Lead may be tested. With it will be sent a handsomely printed booklet having as its frontispiece the "Dutch Boy Painter," reproduced from the original painting. This little painter has become noted as the guaranty of pure White Lead.

Losing a Tenant.

A landlord in the Highlands of Scotland had a "crofter" tenant, who paid him ten shillings a year as rent for the little farm. At the end of the second year the tenant came to the landlord and said that he was not able to pay more than five shillings a year, as crops had been poor. The landlord agreed to this.

At the end of the third year the tenant appeared before the landlord again and complained that things were going so poorly with him that he was not able to pay any rent. The landlord agreed to let him remain rent free. At the end of the fourth year the tenant once more appeared before the landlord, and said:

"Colonel, if you don't build me a barn I'll have to move."

The Farmer's Retort.

"What do you call yeour red automobile, mister?" drawled the old farmer at the drawbridge.

"The 'Fool Killer,'" bantered the man in goggles. "I call it that because it kills all the fools who happen to cross in front of it.

The old farmer cleaned his pipe with a straw and then replied, evenly:

"That so, mister? Wall, is there any chance of it blowing up and killing the fool inside?"

A Boy on Clergymen.

Bishop Potter, at an ecclesiastical dinner in New York, read a Cooperstown schoolboy's essay on "Clergymen." The essay, which created much amusement, was as follows:

"There are 3 kinds of clergymen bishups, recters and curates. The bishups tell the recters to work and the curats have to do it, a curate is a thin married man, but when he is a recter he gets fuller and can preach longer sermons and becums a good man."

Explicit.

"This is an age of steel," said the after-dinner speaker.

"Permit me to suggest," interrupted the chairman, courteously, "that for the benefit of the reporters present you spell that last word."

COFFEE EYES.

It Acts Slowly But Frequently Produces Blindness.

The curious effect of slow daily poisoning and the gradual building in of disease as a result, is shown in numbers of cases where the eyes are affected by coffee.

A case in point will illustrate:

A lady in Oswego, Mont., experienced a slow but sure disease settling upon her eyes in the form of increasing weakness and shooting pains with wavy, dancing lines of light, so vivid that nothing else could be seen for minutes at a time.

She says:

"This gradual failure of sight alarmed me and I naturally began a very earnest quest for the cause. About this time I was told that coffee poisoning sometimes took that form, and while I didn't believe that coffee was the cause of my trouble, I concluded to quit it and see.

"I took up Postum Food Coffee in spite of the jokes of Husband whose experience with one cup at a neighbor's was unsatisfactory. Well, I made Postum strictly according to directions, boiling it a little longer, because of our high altitude. The result was charming. I have now used Postum in place of coffee for about 3 months and my eyes are well, never paining me or showing any weakness. I know to a certainty that the cause of the trouble was coffee and the cure was in quitting it and building up the nervous system on Postum, for that was absolutely the only change I made in diet and I took no medicine.

"My nursing baby has been kept in a perfectly healthy state since I have used Postum.

"Mr. ———, a friend, discarded coffee and took on Postum to see if he could be rid of his dyspepsia and frequent headaches. The change produced a most remarkable improvement quickly."

SENATOR HALE TO INTRODUCE NAVAL AMENDMENT PROVIDING MEN-OF-WAR.

PLANS TO START WORK ALMOST IMMEDIATELY

Department Decides to Construct New Vessels on Plans of Those Recently Built—Appropriation to Be Sought at Once—Navy Gives Estimates.

Washington, Apr. 23.—On estimates supplied by the navy department, Senator Hale, chairman of the senate committee on naval affairs, has prepared and will introduce an amendment to the naval appropriation bill, appropriating about $5,000,000 for the immediate commencement of work on the two battle-ships, the torpedo boats and other vessels provided for in the bill. The appropriation for next year's work on these vessels was omitted.

Time for Preparations.

This was done by the house on the theory that some time would be required for the preparation of plans for the new vessels, and the senate committee on naval affairs accepted the bill as it came from the house. Now, however, the department has decided to construct the new vessels on the plans of those recently built and an appropriation to be immediately available will be asked.

Washington, Apr. 23.—The house judiciary committee Wednesday decided as unconstitutional the Lever-Currier bill appropriating $5,000,000 for the acquisition by the government of forest lands in the Appalachian and White mountain chains for the preservation of stream supply and the regulation of stream flow. The committee, however, has decided by a substantial majority to report to the house that if forest reserves are an aid to the navigability of streams the acquirement of such reserves by the government is constitutional.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

"Minnesota."

Mendota.—There probably is not one man in twenty good, patriotic residents of the state who can tell why Minnesota was named Minnesota and what the name really means.

"Minnesota is a Sioux Indian word, meaning 'muddy water,' 'cloudy water' or 'skytinted water.' Hennepin and La Salle saw the Minnesota river in 1680 and La Honton, Le Sueur and Carver later."

Mendota is rich in historical interest. This is the oldest town in the state, having been started in 1830. The name is an Indian word meaning in one language 'the junction of two trails' and in the Sioux tongue 'the mouth of a river.' As the Dakota Indians, a tribe of the Sioux, frequented these parts, it is believed that their meaning of the word should apply, as just above Mendota the Minnesota river enters the Mississippi. As early as 1835 Gen. H. H. Sibley had an Indian trading post here, and in 1837 erected a stone dwelling house that still stands and is in good preservation. Near by is Fort Snelling. This fort was built by Col. Josiah Snelling in 1820-23, and was named Fort Anthony, from the falls of that name. In 1824 the name was formally changed by the United States secatary of war, and was named for Col. Snelling, who erected the post.

An Easter Bonnet.

Washington.—The "Black Eagle of Minnesota" has been presented with an eagle war bonnet with authority to wear it either on or off the reservation, and so he is now a "heap big Indian" chief of the Crows. The tall and swarthy Senator Moses E. Clapp of Minnesota, chairman of the Indian committee of the senate, has often been described by his friends as "The Black Eagle of Minnesota." Whether the senator likes the appelation or not, it is evident that he is not wholly pleased with the presentation to him of a war bonnet by the Crow Indians as a manifestation of the kindly feeling toward him. He was given a great surprise by Chief Plenty Coos and his fellow tribesmen, who have been witnesses before the Indian committee for the last three weeks, when the chief marched into the committee room at the head of the band and through an interpreter phlegmatically informed the senator that the treatment that had been accorded the Indians was highly appreciated and that an appropriate gift was due the white chief of the committee.

A Brave Woman.

Plummer.—This section is ringing with praise of Mrs. A. R. Harris, wife of a Soo section foreman, who rescued her 4-year-old son from drowning in an unused well near the Harris home.

The mother was startled by her little son Clarence, who rushed in crying that Roy, aged 4, had fallen in the tank. She hurried out and looked in the railroad ditches and water barrels, and Clarence followed and pointed out the old well. She could not see the child, as he had sunk from sight.

The mother got into the well and down to the water level, a distance of about twelve feet. Just then the boy rose to the surface and she caught him by the hair. How she got out of the well with the unconscious form of her little son, she is unable to tell, and that they were not both drowned seems a miracle.

She carried the boy into the house and by rolling and artificial respiration treatment removed the water out of his lungs and stomach and he soon regained consciousness.

Improving Dairies.

St. Paul.—In order to insure better sanitary conditions in the dairies of the state and to reduce, if not stop, the importation of cattle which have not been inspected, the state live stock sanitary board will make provisions for a more strict enforcement of the laws relating to tuberculosis among cattle and attempt to secure the co-operation of cattle breeders.

These subjects were taken up at the quarterly meeting of the board, held in the old capitol. A strict enforcement of sanitary regulations in dairies was shown by statistics to work a reduction in percentage of tuberculosis among cattle. The board decided to have one of the field veterinarians inspect the dairies throughout the state and to take such steps as may be necessary to enforce strict compliance with the regulations.

The evolution of the Swedish-American type of drama is shown in the latest addition to the list of Swedish plays, "Tillie Olson," which is underlined for presentation at the Bijou Opera House, Minneapolis, the week of April 26th. The play should prove especially interesting to Minnesota people, as its earlier scenes are laid in the northern part of this state and the later ones in Minneapolis.

Crookston.—E. A. Dunham, who is said to have passed forged checks on Crookston business men and to have been operating through northwestern Canada and to have left there after having forged $500 paper, was located by the police at St. Vincent.

Ada. — Articles of incorporation have been filed with the register of deed of the Security State bank of Borup with a capital of $10,000.

St. Peter.—A new site has been selected for the hospital for the criminal insane, which is to be made a part of the St. Peter state hospital.

THE LIVING ROOM.

It Should at All Times Be a "Livable" Room.

What to do with the living room is a problem that confronts every housekeeper. The living room should be in fact as well as in name a living room—a livable room. It is the room in which the most of our time at home is spent, the hours we have for leisure, the time we have for play, the place where we entertain our friends and it is absolutely essential that the walls and furnishings of the living room should be harmonious in color, suitable in texture, and durable in material.

The rich, soft, solid colored walls are the ideal walls for the living rooms. They make a better back ground for pictures, throw the furniture out in better relief, are less discordant with rugs and carpeting, and indicate a higher degree of taste and culture than do the colored monstrosities which we paste on when we apply wall paper.

Who ever saw roses climbing up a plastered wall growing out of a hardwood floor? Yet, that is what we suggest to the imagination when we paste paper covered with roses on our walls. They are neither artistic nor true. Roses are all very beautiful, but they were never made to climb up interior walls and they do not grow from hardwood flooring. The set figures of wall paper are also tiresome and equally disagreeable and repellant.

The alabastined wall is the only correct form of a tinted or solid colored wall. Fortunately it is the only clean way, and more fortunately it is the only permanent way; the only way that does not involve the endless labor in the future.

In lighting the walls some thought must be given the color. Light colors reflect 85% of the light thrown upon them. Dark colors reflect but 15%. Lighting bills can be saved by choosing a color which will reflect the largest degree of light. In north rooms use warm colors or colors which reflect light. In south and west rooms sometimes the light can be modified by the use of darker colors. Dark greens absorb the light; light yellows reflect it; browns modify it, and so on, through the scale of colors. The color scheme of a room not only is dependent upon the color of the carpetings but it is also dependent upon the light of the room.

The Way of the Trangressor

By J. C. Plummer

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The steamer Juliet lay in the river off San Nicola, outward bound from Rosario to London. A true specimen of the genus tramp was the Juliet. Run for dividends she was, like her crew, overworked and starved, for if the crew had little to eat, and that bad, the poor old craft had so little paint on her sides that great splotches developed as if she had a promising case of eczema.

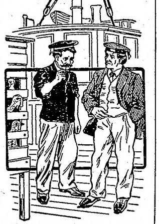
Forward of the quarter deck she was a hungry ship. Since the day she had steamed out of Cardiff for Las Palmas the crew had lived on rank beef and petrified Liverpool pantiles. At the start three potatoes had been served to each man daily, and when the men en masse petitioned for more the supply had been cut down to two, one, and finally none.

"Faith," said Hennessy, "at home Father John used to prache from a tex' 'Ask and ye'll recave,' but on this bloody hooker if ye ask ye git less."

Of course there were shore days at Las Palmas and Rosario, but then, after the men had filled up with rum, there was no money left for edibles.

What added to the discontent of the crew was that the cabin lived well, and when they saw and sniffed chicken pie, etc., going aft it made the beef nastier and the biscuit harder.

At Rosario the skipper had bought ten turkeys for cabin delectation. They were in a coop abaft the fiddly house and were to be sacrificed when we were at sea. At these fowls the crew glared with concupiscent eyes.



"I Could Eat One of Them Feathers and All."

"I could ate one ov 'em, feathers and all," said Hennessy.

"Ye might as well be contented with salt horse and stone biscuit," laughed Clark, the donkeyman; "it's all ye'll get."

"Hi'm sick of the eatin' aboard this bloody ship," growled a man.

"Whist," warned Hennessy; "not a wurrd. If the old man catches a whisper about the atin' he'll cut it off altogither."

That night the steamer lay in the river with both anchors out and steam up. All vessels lie so in a river where steam at a moment's notice may be required to save going aground. It was Clark's watch in the engine room from eight o'clock to midnight. The second engineer had halloed down from above if all was right and Clark, after testing the steam power, had hailed back that all was right and that he could go to bed.

Bye-and-by a voice came down the tube:

"Clark, me boy?"

"Aye, aye," went back.

"Whist!" It was Hennessy's voice. "Tukkey for late dinner, Clark, if ye'll be after doin' the cookin'."

"What ails ye, you Irish ass?" snapped Clark up the tube.

"Ye know that two av the tukkeys died last night. They were found did in the coop this mornin'. The skipper ordeerd me to t'row thim overboard. I hid 'em in me bunk and we'll ate 'em to-night."

"You bloody beast," snarled Clark, "do you take us for buzzards that we'll eat things that die natural?"

"The disease that they died av, me boy, was a sail needle nately put troo their eyes by a man named Hennessy durin' the airly mornin' watch. They died daycently widout a drop of blood spilt. If ye'll cook 'em we 'll ate 'em to-night."

"What's for me to do?" asked Clark, now interested.

"Kape your ears open about tin o'clock," replied Hennessey; "ye may hear somethin'."

Clark sat for an hour on watch before his engine and then he started, for two somethings had bumped down the ventilator on to the iron deck floor. Inspection revealed two well-grown turkeys lying amid the coal dust, and then the donkeyman met the situation.

Summoning the assistance of the dago coal passer the feathers were promptly snatched off the birds and every bit or refuse cast into the furnace. Then the carcasses were placed in two buckets and set to boil before the furnace doors.

The provider of the feast was impatient, as Clark had several times to reply to a whispered inquiry down the tube, "if it was riddy?" and finally announced that the savory stew had reached the eating point.

The whole crew ate of the mess, some sneaking to the engine room and carrying portions to those who could not come. Hennessy, especially, ate heartily.

"There's pipper and there's salt in it," he said, between mouthfuls, "but the best flavor av all is gittin' ahead of the old man."

The next morning the skipper was on deck before sunrise and counted the turkeys. There was a cold wind blowing and the fowls were huddled together in a droopy fashion.

Capt. McTavish eyed them a moment, and then cried out to the steward, loud enough to be heard all over the ship:

"I'm swindled. These turkeys have cholery and that's the reason that dago sold 'em so cheap. Don't cook any of them, steward; they're deadly poison. They'll all dee one after anither. I'm sweendled."

Then he turned fiercely on Hennessy, who was standing under the bridge.

"Mon!" he cried," "Are ye sure ye did na' eat those turkeys instead of throwing 'em overboard?"

Hennessy glanced at Clark, who was peeping from behind a ventilator, and both looked troubled.

"I troo 'em overboard," said Hennessy faintly.

"Ye lee!" thundered Captain McTavish, "Ye ate 'em ye parcel of carrion crows and ye'll be all dead by the night. I'll have the lives of all of ye on my head, ye puir greedy souls."

Then he stalked into the cabin.

"I wonder if he means it?" whispered Clark, looking askance at the turkeys in the coop.

"I dunno," replied Hennessy, "but the burruds certainly look sick."

"Then ye've pizened the whole bloody crew," cried Clark, savagely.

"'Ow could I tell the burruds were sick, bein' they come aboard in the night time?" growled Hennessy. "Faith, I fale sick now."

The sailors stole alarmed glances at the droopy fowls and scowled at Hennessy.

Captain McTavish reappeared on deck, accompanied by the mate, chief engineer and the steward, the latter bearing the medicine chest.

"All hands aft," bellowed the mate.

"Eet's a guid thing I found out what ye ha' done," said the skipper, addressing the assembled crew. "I ha'-na' call to help men that steal from the sheep, but I'll na' tak the responsibility of the lives af all of ye. Eet's a sair thing to use up all the medecine on the ship, but I'll na' ha' ye dee. How do the men look to you, Meester Somere?" he said, addressing the mate.

"They look bloomin' sick to me," he replied, wagging his head.

"The disease won't come out on the men before night," put in the chief engineer, with solemnity, "then they'll curl up in a knot and die."

"They will na' dee if I can help it," exclaimed Captain McTavish, "though they don't deeserve that I move ma feenger for 'em. Come aft, men, one at a time, and tak' this medecine."

The first man to walk up and swallow a small cup of medicine was Hennessy. Clark and the others followed him.

"Howly saints," groaned Hennessy. "Batween the pizen burrude and the midicine I fale that sick I'd as lave be did as alive."

"Eet's a Christian act I have done," cried the skipper as he dosed the last man. "Not a mither's son of ye 's fit to dee and I ha' geeven ye time to repent."

In a quarter of an hour the whole crew was leaning over the rails as sick as a lot of lady passengers on a liner in the first blow. That night the frugal supper of strong beef and stone biscuit went down into thoroughly cleansed stomachs.

The turkeys were removed to a place safe from hungry sailors and sail needles. As soon as the weather became warm the fowls became as gay as crickets and were all eaten in the cabin.

When he left the boat in London Hennessy paused on the wharf and shook his fist at the steamer.

"Bad luck to ye, ye iron pot. If a man asks innything on ye he don't get it, and if he takes it he has to give it up with his own belongin's. Bad luck to ye!"

Old Boots Made Valuable.

The Gaulois of Paris has been entertaining its readers with a patent leather boot story. It seems that every six months each sewer man of Paris receives a pair of heavy boots. At the end of the period these articles are worthless as far as the original purpose is concerned, but they have actually increased in value. The old boots are sold to the leather dressers, it is said, as the conditions under which they have been used make the leather peculiarly adapted for conversion into patent leather for dress shoes.

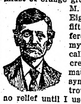
FROM SUNNY ORANGE GROVES.

The Twice-Told Experience of a San Bernardino, Calif., Man.



From Sunny San Bernardino, in the midst of orange groves, writes Lionel M. Heath, of 158 Eighth Street; "For fifteen years I suffered with pains in my back, frequent calls to pass the secretions, dropsy, rheumatic aches and other symptoms of kidney trouble. I could get no relief until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me five years ago, and this is twice I have publicly said so. The cure was thorough."

TOOK TIME.

A Scotsman, having hired himself to a farmer, had a cheese set before him that he might help himself. After some time, the master said to him:

"Sandy, you take a long time to breakfast."

"In truth, master," said Sandy; "a cheese o' this size is na sae soon eaten as you may think."

CURE AT CITY MISSION.

Awful Case of Scabies—Body a Mass of Sores from Scratching—Her Tortures Yield to Cuticura.

"A young woman came to our city mission in a most awful condition physically. Our doctor examined her and told us that she had scabies (the itch), incipient paresis, rheumatism, etc., brought on from exposure. Her poor body was a mass of sores from scratching and she was not able to retain solid food. We worked hard over her for seven weeks but we could see little improvement. One day I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and we bathed our patient well and gave her a full dose of the Resolvent. She slept better that night and the next day I got a box of Cuticura Ointment. In five weeks this young woman was able to look for a position, and she is now strong and well. Laura Jane Bates, 85 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y., Mar. 11, 1907."

Might Be Sure of That.

Bobby is the son of a minister and has had the experience of "moving" four times in the space of his eight years' life. Some time ago an elderly minister was visiting Bobby's father and the course of the conversation turned to Heaven and Bobby was asked concerning the abode of the blest. "Yes," said the youngster, with a sigh of deep weariness, "I know. It's the last place we're going to move to."

The Poet's Error.

"Of course," said the poet's friend, "he has his faults, but he's a true poet. He gives his life to the service of the muses—"

THE CALL OF THE SOIL.

DAYS OF FINANCIAL STRESS MAKE FARM LANDS LOOK RICH.

A staff contributor of a southern newspaper has taken up the question of the return to the farm of many who had forsaken it for the glitter of the city. He says: "It is a well known fact that the history of this Government shows that those men who have been most successful in life and who have left their impress upon its people and its institutions as statesmen, soldiers, financiers—have as a rule been those whose youth was spent on the farm, and it is to such as these that there comes with overmastering power THE CALL OF THE SOIL. More especially does it come with redoubled persuasiveness, greater power and sweeter pleading to the man of affairs when the clouds of financial unrest begin to darken the sky; when the cry of panic causes people to lose their wits and act like stampeded cattle; when with reason or without reason there arises before him the specter of ruin, grinning in his face and waving its gaunt arms in threatening gesticulation.

The pitiable state into which some men were brought by the recent financial flurry, which happily is now passed, suggests these reflections. Some were ruined and a very few became insane because of their losses. Two or three took their own lives.

It is when such times come that the statesman, the great financier, and the man of affairs becomes tired of the struggle. He lays down his pen, turns from his desk and listens to the CALL OF THE SOIL.

There are hundreds of cases throughout the United States of those who have money in the banks and are looking for investment in lands. No investment is better or safer. Take, for instance, the lands in Western Canada that can be bought at from $10 to $15 per acre which yield a revenue equal to and often greater than their original cost. Those lands make a certain investment. During the past two months large investments in these lands have been made, some intending to use the lands for farming purposes of their own. Others to resell to farmer friends. The agents of the Government of Canada located at different points throughout the United States have in their possession particulars of districts in which there are free homestead grants of 160 acres each accessible to railways, markets, schools, churches, &c. These are valuable lands. These agents will be pleased to give information to any desirous of securing, and will tell all about the railway rates, &c.

During the last year the exports of this country have grown greatest in the items of cars, carriages and automobiles.

THE COME AND SEE SIGN

PUBLIC INSPECTION INVITED
FROM 8 A.M. TO 4 P.M.
SATURDAYS EXCEPTED
LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

This sign is permanently attached to the front of the main building of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

What Does This Sign Mean?

It means that public inspection of the Laboratory and methods of doing business is honestly desired. It means that there is nothing about the business which is not "open and aboveboard."

It means that a permanent invitation is extended to anyone to come and verify any and all statements made in the advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Is it a purely vegetable compound made from roots and herbs — without drugs?

Come and See.

Do the women of America continually use as much of it as we are told?

Come and See.

Was there ever such a person as Lydia E. Pinkham, and is there any Mrs. Pinkham now to whom sick woman are asked to write?

Come and See.

Is the vast private correspondence with sick women conducted by women only, and are the letters kept strictly confidential?

Come and See.

Have they really got letters from over one million, one hundred thousand women correspondents?

Come and See.

Have they proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured thousands of these women?

Come and See.

This advertisement is only for doubters. The great army of women who know from their own personal experience that no medicine in the world equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female ills will still go on using and being benefited by it; but the poor doubting, suffering woman must, for her own sake, be taught confidence, for she also might just as well regain her health.

OFFICIAL PAPER of RED LAKE COUNTY

Subscription price, $1.50 per year
If paid in advance, $1.00.

Entered at the Post-office in Plummer, Minn. as Second Class Mail Matter.

According to a statement issued from the Taft headquarters at Columbus, O., under date of last Saturday there has now been chosen 542 of the total of 724 delegates to the Republican National convention. Of these 542 thers is 267 instructed for Taft, 207 instructed for all other candidates and 68 uninstructed. According to these figures it really pegins to look as though the big war secretary was certainly a general favorite all over the country.

It is reported quite generally that the very powers that so bitterly fought Jacobson's nomination two years ago, are for him this year. This if true, means that the railroads and other corporate influences including the liquor interests are for Jacobson for governor. Should such be the case it would present the very remarkable spectacle of those influences being cast on the side of the one man whose career for many years past has been consistently opposed to them. We suggest friend Jacobson can make his position clear by public announcement as to where he stands in regard to the pressing and weighty issues of the day. To refer to his past record is hardly enough—in our estimation—for that record is getting old now, and men change their views sometimes. Speak out in meeting, old war-horse, and you'll arrest attention!—Roseau Region.

The Volstead drainage bill was passed by the lower house of congress on Tuesday last under suspension of the rules and there is every chance that it will become law. This bill gives the state the right to construct drainage ditches on the unsettled goverment lands in Minnesota, but we fail to see wherein it will prove of any benifit to this section of the state particularly to the eleven towns of the ceded Red Lake reservation in this county This land was opened for entry subject to cash sale and the state does not own a foot of either school or swamp lands in the entire eleven towns. The Volstead bill gives the state the right to drain the lsnds, but we do not understand it to confer the right of levying taxes on the unsettled lands to pay for the work done. Consequently if the actual settlers want any drainage done under the state laws they will have to pay for a whole lot more than they would under the proposed Steenerson law. So far as this territory is concerned we opine that the Volstead law will be a detriment instead of a benefit.

Decision of character is one bright golden apple which every young person should strive in the beginning to pluck from the tree of life.

John Mahla was in yesterday from his home a short distance west of town. He has had a well digger at work on his place for some time and reports that he has now obtained a plentiful supply of water at a depth of 140 feet.

Albert Pufahl, of Garness, left on Wednesday evening for Faribault in order to attend at the bedside of a brother who was so ill as to be not expected to recover. This brother's wife died about a week ago and since her death he has been very low. A telegram received by Albert on Wednesday morning announced that the sick man was slightly better and Albert expected to see him alive and possibly help pull him through to a safe recovery.

Percy Taggert, the Soo agent here, on Sunday received the sad news of the death of W. J. Alcott at Lakefield Minn., on the 23rd inst. Mr. Alcott was a brother-in-law of Mr. Taggerts and the man under whom he learned the business of telegraph operating. He had been in the employ of the Milwaukee road for the past twenty-three years as agent and was forty-six years old at the time of his death. His death was caused by an obstruction of the intestines aided by Brights disease and diabetes.

Equality Echos.

Spring work is pretty well commenced but the rain of the last few days will set it back a while.

A week ago the big Ditching Machine of the Standard Drainage Co. was nearly burned up. There was several tons of coal in the dredge and they had been doing some blacksmith work work near the coal bin, and it is thought that some sparks must have fallen into the coal and started the fire. The crew went to dinner about twenty rods distant and when thew came back the coal was on fire, The blaze started in the east end and wind from the west helped save the machine. A number of farmers came and helped fight the fire. The jacket on the boiler was burnt, and so was all the coal and some other things. When the fire was extinguished they hired some teams and sent to Brooks for lumber to fix up the damage.

About the telephone to run from Red Lake Falls via Plummer to Lillo I will ask, will it pay us farmers to have shares in it? I hardly think it will pay us because we dont really need it; we get our mail every day and that ought to be enough. The phone is a handy thing to have but I dont think we will get benefit enough out of it to pay for the expense we will have. It's another thing for the companies that have ladd to sell as it will serve to advertise the country better. Maybe I am mistaken, but I would like to have others write and tell us all about the good of the telephone line to this country as yet.

(Our corrispondent invites criticism on the telephone question and we will be pleased to publish any communications on the subject provided the writers make their liters short and to the point. Personally we believe that every farmer residing close to the proposed telephone line would get amply repaid by the service for the cost of a share in the company. Relatively speaking the "companies that have land to sell" would be benefited far more as our correspondent states, and if these "companies" would invest in stock pro rata with the farmers the telephone company would be amply insured against any financial difficulties for years to come.—Ed,

Which is The Donkey?

I noticed that W. G. Hunt, editor of the Sunbeam, and the estimable (?) Has-Been-Buttermaker-at-Plummer both take quite an interest in what they call "rotten cream". When I read the article in the Sunbeam I was reminded of an old proverd. Here it Is:

"When Balaam could not speak, his ass spoke for him."

Can you see the ass?

Stephen Bank Robbed.

At an early hour on Wednesday morning the Scandia State Bank, of Stephen, in Marshall county, was broken into by a gang of six desperate robbers who dynamited the vault and safe and secured about $8,000 in cash. Wm. Merdink, a merchant who resides upstairs in the building adjoining the bank, was awakened by the first explosion and he took his revolver and climbed to the cement roof of the building from where he opened fire on the robbers as they were leaving the bank. That at least one of the robbers was severely wounded is proved by the fact that a lot of blood was spattered on the sidewalk from bank to the stable of A. Dickerman, manager of the lumber yard, where three of the robbers stole a horse and buggy and made their escape to-wards the Canadian line. The other three robbers headed for Strandquist on the Soo line. Mr. Merdink was uninjured though the robbers returned his fire. The robbers walked away coolly after Merdink's supply of ammunition gave out.

Reports received yesterday are to the effect that the men who committed the robbery succeeded in making their way into Canada where they were arrested on Thursday afternoon by mounted police. It is said that one of the men arrested has an ugly bullet wound in his thigh and it is hoped to secure a confession from him. Quite a lot of the stolen money and several dynamite caps were found on the men arrested.

Theo. F. Blomburg, an experienced barber from Belgrade, Minn., arrived here last Saturday and has opened up a shop in the front part of the Wichterman restaurant. Mr. Blomburg intends to remain here permanently and to remove his family here as soon as he can find suitable living rooms.

Martin E. Fo'doe was up from Erskine on Monday and Tuesday transacting business and calling on old friends. He is one of our old time subscribers and paid us a dollar which places his subscription account considerably more than a year ahead. He says the PIONEER is his favorite paper and the first item he looks for when he gets it is—Sunny Brook John's "ads". Which proves that intelligent advertising is certainly read by the public.

Chamois Maker Is a Magician.

Most everybody uses chamois, and everybody imagines it comes from the graceful goats of the Swiss Alps, but it doesn't. It really hails from the cavernous depths of tanneries of Peabody, in New England. Peabody tanners make beautiful leathers of sheep pelts. The chamois maker is a magician of the leather trade. To his door he draws sheepskins from the great ranches of Montana or their possible future rivals on the plains of Siberia, the pampas of Argentina or the fields of Australia. Mary's little lamb, masquerading as brave Swiss chamois, has a wonderful career.

Natural Anxiety.

A very talkative little boy was allowed to accompany his father to a friend's house on the understanding that he should not speak until somebody asked him a question. He remained silent for half an hour. "Father," he then murmured, "when are they going to begin asking me questions?"

That Telephone Line.

It now looks very much as though the proposed new telephone line from Red Lake Falls to Lillo via Plummer would be built within the next ninety days. We were favored with an inspection of the list of subscribers a few days ago and we found that in the neighborhood of $1,200 had already been subscribed toward the project. This is sufficient to insure the construction of the line but some more will be required for its equipment. We predict that the rest of the money necessary will be forthcoming in a hurry. The board of directors are to meet to day to close the contract for the construction of the line and arrange for the delivering of the material on the ground. If no unforeseen delays occur it is the intention of the company to have the line in working condition within ninety days.

The proposed ditch is to be four feet wide at the top; two feet deep and two feet wide at the bottom, and the dirt removed therefrom shall be placed in the center of the roadway. ## Lauritzon's Mouthpiece.

A couple of weeks ago Mr. Haslerud, buttermaker at the Plummer creamery, wrote and had published in the PIONEER an article on how to procure good cream. It was an able and intelligent article, written by a gentlemen who understood what he was writing about. The ex-buttermaker, Wm. Lauritzon, who was canned from this creamery in January and who was helped to stay here for the past two years by the efforts of local business men who had mistaken ideas about him, thinks he has some glory coming because he had never published anything about improving cream, and from his new location at Highlanding he enlists The Sunbeam, which, in a labored and senseless article last week, says:

"Funny they never had any of this trouble last year when they had our present buttermaker, Mr. Lowerson, making their butter."

The record of the Plummer creamery for the months of February and March last year show that it paid patrons for their butter fat about four or five cents per pound less than the St. Hilaire creamery paid, while this year the Plummer creamery paid one cent per pound less than St. Hilaire. This looks to us as if our new buttermaker was considerable of an improvement over "Mr. Lowerson" and it is the plain duty of a buttermaker to do all he can to improve the grade of cream brought by his patrons. We presume that even "Mr. Lowerson" would have made an effort to improve the grade of cream if he had been competent to judge it or write an article that could be intelligent and beneficial.

It is too bad that all of us cannot be an near perfect as Bro. Hunt and "Mr. Lowerson" but we are willing to wager a new hat that, after Mr. Hunt gets as well aqrainted with "Mr. Lowerson" as the people here are, he will not be wearing out many lead pencils telling of his wonderful merits.

Brooks Budget.

H. L. Premo ships another carload of cattle Saturday.

Sheriff Nelson was around Tuesday looking after his political fences.

The barn on the Cheshire & Premo farm was struck by lightning last Tuesday and one end of the building was badly shattered.

Z. Bray is agitating a telephone line nowadays and we predict that he will soon have Brooks "Hello" with the other progressive villages.

Brooks has a brand new Woodman Camp which was organized on the 23rd inst with 12 members. The first set of officers are: J. E. Buskirk, counsel; Arthur Laniel, clerk; W. B. Cheshire, advisor; T. Suprie, banker; John Ramsey, escort.

On the Verge.

He considered it a parental duty to see that his daughter kept only the very best marriageable company.

"Mary," said her father, "you have been going with that Mitchell fellow for more than a year now. This courtship must come to a termination."

"Oh, pa, how can you talk so? He is, oh, so sweet and nice!"

"Ah!" And the fond father arched his eyebrows. "Sweet and nice, eh? Has he proposed?"

"Well, pa, not exactly." And the girl hung her head and fingered the drapery of her dress. "He hasn't exactly proposed; but, then, last evening, when we were out walking, we passed by a nice little house, and he said, 'That's the kind of cottage I am going to live in some day,' and I said 'Yes,' and then he glanced at me and squeezed my hand. Then, just as we got by, I glanced back at the cottage, and—and I squeezed his hand, pa."

"Oh, ah, I see! Well, we'll try him another week or two."—London Tit-Bits.

Banquets In Elizabeth's Time.

In Queen Elizabeth's time the first course of a banquet is given as wheaten flummery, stewed broth or spinach broth, or smallage, gruel or hotch pot. The second consisted of fish, among which are lampreys, poor John, stockfish and sturgeon, with side dishes of porpoise. The third course comprised quaking puddings, black puddings, bag puddings, white puddings and marrow puddings. Then came veal, beef, capons, humble pie, mutton, marrow pasties, Scotch collops, wild fowl and game. In the fifth course all kinds of sweets, creams in all their varieties, custards, cheese cakes, jellies, warden pies, suckets, sillibubs and so on, to be followed perhaps by white cheese and tansy cake; for drinks, ale, beer, wine, sack and numerous varieties of mead or metheglin.—New York Tribune.

Candidate For Sheriff.

That part of Red Lake county known at present as "the reservation" will have a live candidate for the sheriff's office in the person of Herman Lillo, of Lillo, who informed us the other day that he will make the run for that office this year.

It is our opinion that Mr. Lillo will prove a very strong candidate. He is a young man who is well and favorably known and has all qualities that go to make a good public official. He has been a resident of the east end ever since the old resevation opened in '96 and at present owns a fine claim north of the Clearwater river some two or three miles from Lillo postoffice. Mr. Lillo will enter the game without any county seat strings tied to him and this, in itself, ought to be a strong recommendation to the intelligent voter who should want to see public officers able and willing to do all their duty without fear or favor to any clique or party. Mr. Lillo has not filed as a candidate yet, but after the fight starts he will make his opponents go some.

Mayfield Murmurs.

Jens Bolstad is busy putting up a new house for himself on his claim in Deer Park township.

Sever Maaren, Carl Magnell and Charley Johnson were over to Sam Lovaas place on Monday evening to transact some business in which the town clerk was necessary.

Price Will Be Raised.

Notice is hereby given that on and after June 1st, 1908, the price of Shares of Stock in the Clearwater Mercantile Co., of Plummer, Minn., will be advanced in price. Any person wishing to purchase stock in this company at the former price of $10 per share should do so before June 1st. The price of such shares will be advanced in accordance with a resolution of the stockholders passed at the Annual meeting held in January 1908,

P, S. MEDCHIKL, President.
A. J. HEMSTAD, Secretary.

All such cleaning up must be done before the 10th day of May, 1908, and in any case where any such rubbish or unwholesome matter may be found on that date the cleaning will be done by the Board of Health and collected from the parties owning or occupying he premises as provided by law. This order will be strictly enforced.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Increase of Creameries.

Brainerd. — Figures compiled by Secretary W. W. Wall of the state dairy and food department show that in sixteen counties which in 1908 had no creameries there are now sixty-four in operation. All these counties are in the northern half of the state, showing that the farmers in the comparatively newer counties are awakening to the advantages from a financial point of view of the dairy business.

The success of creameries in the southern counties in which creameries have been in operation for a number of years has resulted in a great increase in the number of creameries and the quantity of the output and a consequent improvement in the financial condition of the farmers furnishing the milk and in many cases owning an interest in the creameries.

The number of creameries in each of these sixteen counties at present is as follows: Kittson, 7; Roseau, 3; Marshall, 13; Red Lake, 7; Hubbard, 1; Cass, 1; Aitkin, 1; Crow Wing, 2; Carlton, 1; Pine, 4; Mille Lacs, 5; Benton, 6; Wadena, 5; St. Louis, 1; Kanabec, 2; Clearwater, 5.

Cost of Prairie Fires.

Crookston.—As a result of the many prairie and forest fires in this part of the state, State Auditor Iverson will have a heavy expense acccount this season on moneys to be paid to fire fighters. The number of fire fighters might be conservatively estimated at 10,000 in the northern part of the state this month.

Each of these, if assisting, will receive $1.50 a day and the fire wardens will receive $2 per day.

Minnesota statutes prescribe that mayors of cities, presidents of village councils and supervisors of townships are ex-officio fire wardens and must take the responsibility of looking after fires in their districts.

The fire fighters make application to the state auditor after making out verified claim to which they have sworn before a town clerk, justice of the peace, notary public or other persons authorized by the state to administer oaths.

The expenditure by the state for extinguishment of public fires this month will go up to near $30,000.

Cresceus Sold.

Savage.—For the first time in harness horse history, Russia has come to Minnesota to secure speed. After several weeks of cabled negotiations, Cresceus, 2:02¼, champion trotting stallion of the world, has been sold by M. W. Savage to one of the most prominent of Russian horsemen, Tshemerzin by name, and a resident of St. Petersburg, for $25,000. The famous stallion will be shipped across the water some time during the first part of May.

The closing of this deal is the culmination of a series of interesting incidents extending over the past three years, and is the result of very persevering efforts on the part of a group of Russian horsemen to get possession of the great son of Robert McGregor.

Getting Pike Spawn.

Towner.—The state game and fish commission now has five crews in the field gathering pike spawn to be taken to the fish hatcheries and used for stocking the streams throughout the state. A report received from one of the crews was that in one day they had gathered 2,000,000 pike but no reports have been received from any of the other crews.

Last year the total haul was about 200,000,000 pike, and it is expected that this year's crop will be at least as large as that of last year.

BORAX IN THE DAIRY

A Matter of Profitable Interest to the Farmer and Dairyman

The problem of keeping sweet all the utensils used in connection with milk and cream selling, and butter making, has been a serious one with the farmer.

He has come to realize fully that the slightest taint or hint of staleness left in a can, tin or churn may ruin a whole output; that the taint which is left is in the form of bacteria which grow and multiply in milk or butter, producing disastrous results.

The farmer has learned that hot water won't rinse away the greasy residue in dairy utensils.

He has learned that soap leaves a residue of its own which is, if anything, worse than the milk or cream residue, and it is little wonder that that there has been a constant clamor for a dairy cleanser and sweetener that will meet modern requirements.

A few of the largest creamery establishments have called experts into consultation on this problem and have with this scientific aid hit upon a product of nature which exactly fills the bill—borax.

Scientists have long known borax as a cleanser, a sweetener and an antiseptic destroyer of bacteria and germ growths. Destroys all that is harmful and promotes and preserves freshness, sweetness and purity, relieving the dairyman and dairy housewife of drudgery and of needless work and worry.

Its cheapness and value should give it first place in the necessities of every dairy.

The cow's udder is kept in a clean, healthy and smooth condition by washing it with borax and water, a tablespoonful of borax to two quarts of water.

This prevents roughness and soreness or cracking teats, which make milking time a dread to the cow and a worry to the milker.

THE GREAT MAN'S OCCUPATION.

Nothing Very Serious in His Mind Just at That Moment.

The multi-millionaire was being shaved. As he lay back in his chair, looking upward, his grave face gave the impression that he was in deep study.

"Ah," whispered one of the barber shop loiterers, "I'll wager a dollar against a toothpick that he is thinking of railroad mergers."

"No," said another, "he is thinking about bear raids in Wall street."

"Bet he is pondering over the rebate system," echoed a third.

"I'll ask him."

Walking over to the chair, he said politely:

"Beg your pardon, sir, but to settle an argument, would you kindly tell us what mighty question you are studying over?"

The multi-millionaire turned his lathered face around and smiled. "I was just studying two flies doing handsprings on the ceiling," he chuckled, and the trio of guessers looked so sheepish they failed to hear "Next" when it was called to them.

How I Cured Sweeny and Fistula.

"I want to tell you how I saved one of our horses that had a fistula. We had the horse doctor out and he said it was so bad that he did not think he could cure it, and did not come again. Then we tried Sloan's Liniment and it cured it up nicely.

"One day last spring I was plowing for a neighbor who had a horse with sweeny, and I told him about Sloan's Liniment and he had me get a bottle for him, and it cured his horse all right, and he goes off now like a colt.

"We had a horse that had sweeny awfully bad and we thought it was never going to be any good, but we used Sloan's Liniment and it cured it up nicely. I told another neighbor about it and he said it was the best Liniment he ever used.

"We are using Sloan's Sure Colic Cure and we think it is all right."

Easy Victory for Pat.

An Englishman, an Irishman and a Scotchman were one day arguing as to which of the three countries possessed the fastest trains.

Said the Englishman, "Well, I've been in one of our trains and the telegraph poles have been like a hedge."

"I've seen the milestones appear like tombstones," said the Scot.

"Be jabers," said Pat, "I was one day in a train in my country and we passed a field of carrots, a field of turnips, a field of parsley, one of onions and then a pond of water, and we were going so fast that I thought it was broth!"

Perversion of Type.

The Sunday school teacher was entertaining her class with what she had fondly planned to be a "social evening." To her disappointment she found that all spontaneity had been left at home with the boys' everyday clothes, and conversation dragged hopelessly until her bull terrier came into the room. He sniffed about from one shy hand of welcome to another, when suddenly a boyish voice, gruff with embarrassment, burst forth: "I had a bull pup like that oncet, but he growed up into a bloodhound."

No Occasion for It.

"My dear," said the old man to his only daughter on the morning of her wedding day, "I don't see how I am going to get along without you."

"Now, don't let that worry you, papa," replied the fair maid, as she adjusted her bridal veil. "George confessed to me last night that he hadn't enough money even to buy a second-hand stove, so instead of losing me it looks as if we were going to stay right with you."

A Gentle Hint.

"Life at best is but a gloomy prison," said the moralizing bachelor.

"So much the worse for men who deliberately choose solitary confinement," remarked the girl who had her trap set.—Bohemian.

BUILT RIGHT.

Brain and Nerves Restored by Grape-Nuts Food.

The number of persons whose ailments were such that no other food could be retained at all, is large and reports are on the increase.

"For 12 years I suffered from dyspepsia, finding no food that did not distress me," writes a Wis. lady. "I was reduced from 145 to 90 lbs., gradually growing weaker until I could leave my bed only a short while at a time, and became unable to speak aloud.

"Three years ago I was attracted by an article on Grape-Nuts and decided to try it.

"My stomach was so weak I could not take cream, but I used Grape-Nuts with milk and lime water. It helped me from the first, building up my system in a manner most astonishing to the friends who had thought my recovery impossible.

"Soon I was able to take Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast, and lunch at night, with an egg and Grape-Nuts for dinner.

"I am now able to eat fruit, meat and nearly all vegetables for dinner, but fondly continue Grape-Nuts for breakfast and supper.

"At the time of beginning Grape-Nuts I could scarcely speak a sentence without changing words around or 'talking crooked' in some way, but my brain and nerves have become so strengthened that I no longer have that trouble." "There's a Reason."

PRESIDENT AGAIN URGES CONGRESS

CHIEF SENDS SPECIAL MESSAGE ASKING ENACTMENT OF SEVERAL LAWS.

DWELLS UPON ABUSE OF THE INJUNCTION

Legislation to Put an End to the Practice Is Sought—Titled American Woman Comes In for a Rap In Concluding the Document.

Washington, Apr. 28.—Still another special message from President Roosevelt to congress was read in both branches late Monday afternoon. Sentiments expressed by the document were perhaps less heated than those in former messages, the president merely going on record in favor of laws which the senate and house have not touched as yet.

The president expressed pleasure at the passing of the employers' liability bill, rapped the injunction abuse, commended efforts to secure a child labor law, asked a statute trending toward national incorporation and in conclusion aimed a shaft at the "wealthy citizen, whose theme is extravagance, whose son is a fool and whose daughter is a foreign princess."

He also decried efforts to construe labor unions as violators of the anti-trust law and advised strengthening of that statute. Alleged suspicious corporation practices, uncovered by Boston officials, were dealt with at length.

The message in part:

In my message to the congress of March 25, 1908, I outlined certain measures which I believe the majority of our countrymen desire to have enacted into law at this time. These measures do not represent by any means all that I would like to see done if I thought it possible, but they do represent what I believe can now be done if an earnest effort toward this end is made.

Asks Injunction Legislation.

First, as to the power of injunction and of punishment for contempt. In contempt cases, save where immediate action is imperative, the trial should be before another judge. As regards injunctions, some such legislation as that I have previously recommended should be enacted. They are blind who fail to realize the extreme bitterness caused among large bodies of worthy citizens by the use that has been repeatedly made of the power of injunction in labor disputes. Those in whose judgment we have most right to trust are of the opinion that while much of the complaint against the use of the injunction is unwarranted, yet that it is unquestionably true that in a number of cases this power has been used to the grave injury of the rights of laboring men. I ask that it be limited in some such way as that I have already pointed out in my previous messages, for the very reason that I do not wish to see an embittered effort made to destroy it. It is unwise stubbornly to refuse to provide against a repetition of the abuses which have caused the present unrest. In a democracy like ours it is idle to expect permanently to thwart the determination of the great body of our citizens. It may be and often is the highest duty of a court, a legislature, or an executive, to resist and defy a gust of popular passion; and most certainly no public servant, whatever may be the consequences to himself, should yield to what he thinks wrong.

Decries Overuse of Injunction.

But in a question which is emphatically one of public policy, the policy which the public demands is sure in the end to be adopted; and a persistent refusal to grant to a large portion of our people what is right is only too apt in the end to result in causing such irritation that when the right is obtained it is obtained in the course of a movement so ill considered and violent as to be accompanied by much that is wrong. The process of injunction in labor disputes, as well as where state laws are involved, should be used sparingly, and only when there is the clearest necessity for it; but it is one so necessary to the efficient performance of duty by the court on behalf of the nation that it is in the highest degree to be regretted that it should be liable to reckless use; for this reckless use tends to make honest men desire so to hamper its execution as to destroy its usefulness.

Would Strengthen Trust Law.

The strengthening of the anti-trust law is demanded upon both moral and economic grounds. Our purpose in strengthening it is to secure more effective control of the national government over the business use of the vast masses of individual, and especially of corporate, wealth, which at the present time monopolize most of the interstate business of the country; and we believe the control can best be exercised by preventing the growth of abuses, rather than merely by trying to destroy them when they have already grown. In the highest sense of the word this movement for thorough control of the business use of this great wealth is conservative. We are trying to steer a safe middle course, which alone can save us from a plutocratic class government on the one hand, or a socialistic class government on the other, either of which would be fraught with disaster to our free institutions, state and national. We are trying to avoid alike the evils which would flow from government ownership of the public utilities by which interstate commerce is chiefly carried on, and the evils which flow from the riot and chaos of unrestricted individualism. There is grave danger to our free institutions in the corrupting influence exercised by great wealth suddenly concentrated in the hands of the few. We should in sane manner try to remedy this danger, in spite of the sullen opposition of these few very powerful men, and with the full purpose to protect them in all their rights at the very time that we require them to deal rightfully with others.

Need National Incorporation.

No judicial tribunal has the knowledge or experience to determine in the first place whether a given combination is advisable or necessary in the interest of the public. Some body, whether a commission, or a bureau under the department of commerce and labor, should be given this power. My personal belief is that ultimately we shall have to adopt a national incorporation law, though I am well aware that this may be impossible at present. Over the actions of the executive body in which the power is placed the courts should possess merely a power of review analogous to that obtaining in connection with the work of the interstate commerce commission at present. To confer this power would not be a leap in the dark; it would merely be to carry still further the theory of effective governmental control of corporations which was responsible for the creation of the interstate commerce commission and for the enlargement of its powers, and for the creation of the bureau of corporations. The interstate commerce legislation has worked admirably. It has benefited the public; it has benefited honestly managed and wisely conducted railroads; and in spite of the fact that the business of the country has enormously increased, the value of this federal legislation has been shown by the way in which it has enabled the federal government to correct the most pronounced of the great and varied abuses which existed in the business world 20 years ago—while the many abuses that still remain emphasize the need of further and more thoroughgoing legislation.

Labor Unions Exempted.

So far as labor is engaged in production only, its claims to be exempted from the anti-trust law are sound. This would substantially cover the right of laborers to combine, to strike peaceably, and to enter into trade agreements with the employers. But when labor undertakes in a wrongful manner to prevent the distribution and sale of the products of labor, as by certain forms of the boycott, it has left the field of production, and its action may plainly be in restraint of interstate trade, and must necessarily be subject to inquiry, exactly as in the case of any other combination for the same purpose, so as to determine whether such action is contrary to sound public policy. The heartiest encouragement should be given to the wageworkers to form labor unions and to enter into agreements with their employers; and their right to strike, so long as they act peaceably, must be preserved. But we should sanction neither a boycott nor a blacklist which would be illegal at common law.

The measures I advocate are in the interest both of decent corporations and of lawabiding labor unions. They are, moreover, preeminently in the interest of the public, for in my judgment the American people have definitely made up their minds that the days of the reign of the great law-defying and law-evading corporations are over, and that from this time on the mighty organizations of capital necessary for the transaction of business under modern conditions, while encouraged so long as they act honestly and in the interest of the general public, are to be subjected to careful supervision and regulation of a kind so effective as to insure their acting in the interest of the people as a whole.

Hits Titled American Women.

Among the many kinds of evil, social, industrial and political, which it is our duty as a nation sternly to combat, there is none at the same time more base and more dangerous than the greed which treats the plain and simple rules of honesty with cynical contempt if they interfere with making a profit; and as a nation we cannot be held guiltless if we condone such action. The man who preaches hatred of wealth honestly acquired, who inculcates envy and jealousy and slanderous ill will toward those of his fellows who by thrift, energy and industry have become men of means, is a menace to the community. But his counterpart in evil is to be found in that particular kind of multimillionaire who is almost the least enviable, and is certainly one of the least admirable, of all our citizens; a man of whom it has been well said that his face has grown hard and cruel while his body has grown soft; whose son is a fool and his daughter a foreign princess; whose nominal pleasures are at best those of tasteless and extravagant luxury, and whose real delight, whose real life work, is the accumulation and use of power in its most sordid and least elevating form. In the chaos of an absolutely unrestricted commercial individualism under modern conditions, this is a type that becomes prominent as inevitably as the marauder baron became prominent in the physical chaos of the dark ages. We are striving for legislation to minimize the abuses which give this type its flourishing prominence, partly for the sake of what can be accomplished by the legislation itself, and partly because the legislation marks our participation in a great and stern moral movement to bring our ideals and our conduct into more accord.

HOW TO TEST LINSEED OIL

There is nothing that will make paint go wrong on the house more quickly than poor oil. It is as bad in its way as adulterations in the white lead. Petroleum oil cheapeners may be detected by placing a drop of the oil on a black painted surface. If one sees the characteristic iridescence or play of colors which kerosene exhibits, it is evidence of adulteration. Corn and fish oil can be detected by the smell.

Adulteration in white lead can best be discovered by the use of a blowpipe, which National Lead Company will send with instructions free to anyone interested in paint. Address, National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York.

Entered at the Post-office in Plummer, Minn. as Second Class Mail Matter.

It'll soon be up to Harry Ives to announce his platform as a candidate for the legislature. We presume it will contain a plank providing for the highest notch of taxes allowed by law; such high taxes to be enforced by injunction proceedings—financed by other people's money.

The president has sent another urgent message to Congress calling their attention to the laws that the people demand shall have immediate action. Congress has only about fifteen days remaining to do these things and we fear it will be hard to make Joe Cannon loosen his grip on the house in that time.

For over three and one half years the Pioneer has, according to our opinion, been working faithfully for the development and upbuilding of the town and the surrounding country. During part of the time we had some support from the business men but for over a year now we have had none. This condition is mere foolishness for the business men and for the best interests of the town. Now is a time when conditions are most favorable for boosting the village and the PIONEER stands ready to do its share provided the other business institutions of the town will do theirs.

Work on Sawmill Will Begin Next Week.

J. C. Parker, of the S. P. K. Lumber Cedar & Tie Co. arrived here yesterday accompanied by Birt Evritt, the man who will put in and run the company's sawmill here. They state that the mill has been already loaded on the cars and will arrive here on Monday or Tuesday next when it will be put in working shape just as soon as skilled hands can do the job. The big drive of saw logs, cedar and pulp wood has been on its way down the Clearwater river for over two weeks and the first logs are expected to be at Plummer tomorrow or Monday.

The people of Plummer are glad to know that the mill will be located at the same place as the small mill was operated last year, just oposite the creamery. The sawmill will commence work as soon as possible and the planer and other departments will be put in in the near future. Mr. Evritt, the man in charge of this work, has had lots of experience and knows his business thoroughly. He says he expects that sawdust will be flying in about two weeks.

The advent of this mill marks the beginning of a period of developement in Plummer. It will mean that we will soon have more business houses and more business in all lines; that houses will be built and permanently occupied and in short that the village will develope rapidly into a thriving business center with an abondance of pleasent homes. The proprietors of this mill are worthy of the good-will of every citizen of Plummer and they should be given every encouragement in the establishment and maintenance of the industry.

Frank Jeffers of Red Lake Falls has entered the race for register of deeds of that county. He thoroly appreciates what has been done for him by friends in Crookston and Red Lake Co. since his accident. His friends in Red Lake County realize that he can attend to the duties of the register of deeds there in good shape, regardless of his present affliction and it is certain that his many friends in this city and throughout the northwest would like to see him elected to the office for which he aspires.— Crookston Journal.

Mailing Post Cards.

The mailing of Post Cards has become almost universal but the rules of the Postoffice Department concerning them seems to be very little understood by the general public.

Anyone mailing Post Cards to their friends should get posted on these rules and follow them and by so doing will save their post-masters and them selves a lot of unnecessary annoyance and perhaps trouble with the Department.

Under the rules of the Postoffice Department Post Cards whichare tinseled are unmailable, unless enclosed in envelopes, and in case they are found in the mails without any covering they must be withdrawn by the postmaster or clerk so finding them and sent to the Dead Letter Office. Any Post Card, or other communication in writing, enclosed in an envelope, sealed or unsealed, must be fully prepaid at the first-class rate of two cents for each ounce or fraction thereof. If not fully prepaid at this rate they must be held for postage and the sender, or addressee if the sender is unknown, be notified and required to send stamps to make up the deficiency in postage. If this be not paid the matter so held must be sent to the Dead Letter Office. In all cases where Cards are enclosed in any envelope the stamp must be affixed to the envelope, not to the card. A stamp on a card inside an envelope cannot be counted in prepayment of postage. Un-tinselled Post Cards may be written on both sides, in the spaces provided for correspondence, and sent through the mails with a one-cent stamp affixed in prepayment of postage. It is particularly to be remembered that Post Cards in envelpes must have the stamps affixed to the Envelope, not the card, and that tinselled Cards must not be mailed except in envelopes.

President Haugan On Creamery Question.

The following article has been handed in for publicatirn by David Haugan, president of the Emardville Creamery Association;

May 7, 1908

When shall the Plummer Creamery war cease? We are longing for peace but there always seems to be someone ready to renew the fight.

It appears to me from a couple of articles published in the last issue of the Pioneer, and other information, that Mr. Lauritzon, our former buttermaker, or his acting agents, have been firing off their gun or "mouthpiece" against our creamery and present buttermaker, Mr. Haslerud.

I expected Mr. Lauritzon to know better than to try and run down a creamery that he claims the credit for building up to its present standing, and of which he is a stockholder. And besides that he ought to know that it is not right to run down one creamery in order to build up another one, because that does not build up the dairy industry at large, which it ought to be every buttermaker and dairyman's aim to do.

In regard to our buttermaker, Mr. Haslerud, I must say that he has not been here very long and I dont think that either Mr. Lauritzon, or any one else around Plummer, knew much about him before he came here, whether he was a street-sweeper or an expert buttermaker. As to his capability of running a creamery I believe Mr. Storvick, the dairy Inspector, knew what he was talking about when he said that Mr. Haslerud understood his business and knows what he is doing every day; and I can add that he knows how to get a good large over-run which means more dollars into the pockets of the creamery patrons.

I will say further that it is not fair to try to blame the buttermaker for the little trouble we had about patrons bringing poor cream. I remember that Mr. Lauritzon complained about poor cream after his butter was graded down in New York and sold for less than market price.

I think that every buttermaker should make his complaint when the cream is delivered at the creamery and give instructions how to improve it, and if the patron had the least bit of common sense he would not turn away angry but would try to live up to the instructions and bring his cream in an improved condition.

Yours for peace and co-operation towards the up-building of our creamery and the dairy industry.

D. HAUGAN.

A farmer's Opinion.

Editor PIONEER:

Just a word about that telephone line from up our way. To begin with we are all farmers but we are all in for that telephone, you bet. As to the benefits, don't mention them at the present time; it's for time to come that we are mostly concerned. In times when there is sickness, and also when there is things you would like to get in a hurry, why the privilege of sending just one single message will repay you, yes many times, if you will consider the matter from a practical standpoint. But as a matter of investment, without considering the direct benefits, why you should perhaps, do better if you held the same amount of stock in some gold mine. But, on the other hand, if you are looking out for your interests and the welfare of yonr comunity let's have the telephone. This is all the editor will stand for this time.

Yours in a hurry,
RHODA FARMER.

THE BIG FLEET AT SAN FRANCISCO

IMPOSING LINE OF THE NATION'S NAVAL FORCE COMES TO ANCHOR.

Completes the First Great Stage of World's Tour. Admiral Evans is in Command. Enthusiastic Welcome is Accorded.

San Francisco, May 7.—Through the towering rocky portals of the Golden Gate, into the harbor of the City of a Hundred Hills; into a new San Francisco, risen from the ruins of two years ago, the Atlantic battleship fleet steamed yesterday in review before a great multitude, estimated at fully 1,000,000 people.

San Francisco, Oakland and other cities nearby all took a holiday to witness the coming of the fleet. There was a complete cessation of business and the downtown section was deserted.

The sixteen veterans of the Atlantic cruise, augmented by two battleships recruited here for the remainder of the trip around the world—the Nebraska and Wisconsin—occupy the two inside lines of the four columns of ships now in the harbor. The armored cruisers of the Pacific fleet have the line nearest the Oakland shore, while the little black destroyers of both the Atlantic and Pacific fleets are berthed close in toward the San Francisco water front.

The excursion fleet was kept out of the warships' pathway by a patrol of revenue cutters, and all ferry service was suspended during the parade.

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet and just now in command of the assembled fleets, stood on the after bridge of the famous flagship Connecticut and led the way through the harbor's gate. His active naval career is to close on Sunday, when he formally will be relieved from command.

Because of illness and the death of a favorite grandchild Admiral Evans will be unable to participate in any of the functions planned in honor of the officers.

The ships as they sailed into the bay were dressed only at the mastheads, big American flags flying at the fore and after trucks and at the peak of the gaffs. The blue flag of Admiral Evans on the Connecticut was followed by the red flags of six subordinate rear admirals, even Admiral Dayton himself pulling down his blue flag as commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet and substituting the ensign of red as Admiral Evans' ship came in view.

Passing to anchor the ships steamer in review before Secretary Metcalf, and the Connecticut fired a salute of seventeen guns.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

B. R. Smith, in Jail Hangs Himself in His Cell.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 4.—Benjamin R. Smith, who was foiled in an effort to escape from the county jail a few days ago, tried to commit suicide by hanging.

Smith and Applin, two alleged mail robbers, have been laying plans to break away all winter, and as the federal court convenes here both are being watched very closely. During the night Smith tore up his blankets and made a stout rope, which he fastened to the bars at the top of his cell, standing on a chair while adjusting it about his neck, and then kicked the chair from under him. His feet swung clear of the floor, and he was strangling when Night Watchman Albertson, hearing and unusual noise, rushed in and cut him down. He now refuses to eat.

YEGGMEN INVADE FARGO

A Street Car Crew Held Up and Robbed at Pistol's Point.

Fargo, N. D., May 6.—A safe blown, a streetcar held up and robbed and a residence entered is a summary of crimes committed in Fargo the past twenty-four hours. There is every indication that an exceptionally desperate gang has invaded the city.

Most daring was the robbery of a street car at the terminal of the Sacred Heart academy line at 11:30 p. m. The robbers sprang from among some trees when Conductor Carlson was swinging his trolley pole for the return trip. Only the company's money was demanded, the watches and valuables of the crew being passed. A total of $9.55 was secured.

One of the robbers took command of the car, with a cocked revolver in hand, and commanded the crew to run towards the city two blocks. He then jumped off, while another robber disappeared in the opposite direction.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

More Shortage.

St. Paul.—An additional alleged shortage of $4,755.20 in the accounts of John A. McDermott, former state oil inspector, and of $3,526.92 in the accounts of F. G. Warner, his predecessor in that office, were reported by Public Examiner Anton Schaefer in his final report on the examination of the accounts of that department during the incumbency of these two men.

This report covers the entire period from February, 1903 to November 19[illegible], being from the begining of Mr. Warner's term to the close of Mr. McDermott's.

The first report on Mr. McDermott's accounts covered only the collections in Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis counties, and disclosed an alleged shortage of $6,190.75, which was turned into the state treasury by W. E. McEwen, the present oil inspector, through his monthly reports, except the last payment of about $3,400, which was turned in separately. The present report makes the total alleged shortage in his accounts for the entire state $[illegible].

First Street Car Runs.

Mankato.—The electric street car line which has been under construction since last July, began operations. The business men and others united in making the day a partial holiday, and a baseball game, band concerts, street festivals and such were among the features of the day. Rain, snow and sunshine, [illegible] northwest wind, had [illegible] crowds, [illegible] surrounding towns [illegible] in the city. [illegible] packed most of the [illegible]

The electric car line was entirely constructed by home capital, with no watered stock or inflated valuation, and its active operation is the culmination of twenty-five years of work and hoping on the part of the commercial organizations and citizens in general.

Burned to Death.

Rochester.—Miss Bessie Mae Tracy of Minnesota Junction, Wis., a nurse at the state hospital in this city, was burned to death by her clothes catching fire from a small alcohol stove.

Miss Tracy has been a nurse for two years and was doing night duty in the west annex. At 1:30 in the morning she found it necessary to use a small alcohol stove. In lighting the stove her clothing caught fire. She screamed and ran out into the ward hall, where she fell unconscious, remaining in that condition until the other nurses came to her assistance.

An alarm of fire was turned in and the local fire department responded. No damage was done to the property.

Homesteader Wins Again.

Washington.—The supreme court of the United States decided the case of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway company vs. John R. Donahue, involving a conflict over the possession of land in the Cass Lake land district of Minnesota, in favor of Donahue. The land was settled by a homesteader through whom Donahue made claim in 1893, before it had been surveyed, but no effort was made to enter it until 1896, after the survey had been made. In the meantime the tract had been included in the list of land grants to the railroad. The Minnesota supreme court decided in favor of the homesteader and the federal court affirmed the decision.

Convicted.

Minneapolis.—The state dairy and food commission has secured the conviction in Minneapolis of a grocer on a charge of misbranding goods. The grocer recently suffered a fire loss and after the settlement with fire insurance companies, it is charged, new labels were placed on some of the canned goods. Complaints were received by the commission from people who had purchased the goods with the new labels over the old and after an investigation the proprietor was arrested and pleaded guilty, insisting, however, that his goods were as good as new.

NEWS NOTES.

Stephen.—Hearings of alleged robbers of the bank fail to develop any strong evidence against the men.

St. Paul.—Out of the total increase of 101 in the deaths last year over the previous year, 68 were caused by tuberculosis. The increase over 1906 is more than proportional to the growth of the city. The number in 1906 was 254 and in 1907, 422, an increase of 68.

There are "pony ballets," "broilers," and all that sort of thing with the various musical shows, but the newest bunch of show girls are "The Frisky Bronchos," the youthful, graceful and comely chorus seen in a series of evolutions and fancy steps in "The Cowboy Girl" which will be the attraction at the Bijou Opera House, Minneapolis, the week of May 10th.

Winona.—A man asks judge to send son to reformatory for a year rather than give youth ten days sentence in jail where boy would fall under the corrupting influence of other prisoners.

St. Paul.—State Treasurer C. C. Dinehart's report of the condition of the treasury at the end of April shows a cash balance of $2,397,596.28, of which the revenue fund is credited with $1,598,600.39.

Minneapolis.—With the opening of the Minnesota university next fall there will be formed a Japanese club.

MORLEY NOW A PEER

BRITISH LIBERAL LEADER QUITS HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Ill Health and Too Much Work Forces Distinguished Lieutenant of Gladstone and Friend of Carnegie Into Easier Post.

London.—John Morley, the distinguished liberal leader, has been elevated to the peerage; he will, however, retain the office of secretary for India in the reorganized British parliament. Morley's reason for accepting a peerage is his declining health and a throat affection that makes the strain of the work in the house of commons too great.

In leaving the house of commons that body loses one of its most noted members. Many accomplishments in and out of his official duties have undoubtedly earned this title for the English liberal leader, [illegible] orator, editor and student. Morley has likewise been called the Puritan of politics, a title which his passion for righteousness and his political austerity have [illegible] to win him also.

It is difficult to imagine Morley among the peers for whose benefit he invented the phrase: "Mind them or end them." When made secretary of state of India his critics said he would make a weak executive. He proved otherwise [illegible] in the house of commons, in which he announced his purpose to [illegible] in India with a strong hand. He defended the [illegible] treatment [illegible] extended to Indian agitators and refused to offer an apology. "British rule in India will continue and ought to continue and must continue," said he.

John Morley was born at Blackburn, England, December 24, 1838. He was graduated from Chettenham and Lincoln college, Oxford, and began life as a barrister. In 1867, however, he was called to the editorship of the Fortnightly Review, a post which he held until 1882. From 1880 until 1883 he was likewise editor of the famous Pall Mall Gazette, leaving his desk there to go to parliament as the representative of Newcastle. He was Irish secretary in 1886 and again from 1892 to 1895. In 1896 he was returned to parliament and since gradually achieved for himself a reputation in politics, letters and philosophical thought.

Morley was Gladstone's favorite lieutenant when the "Grand Old Man" died. He was one of the axious personal friends who watched over the great premier in his last illness, and his "Life of Gladstone" is one of his most notable literary labors.

Hall Caine and Andrew Carnegie are among the close friends of the liberal. The laird of Skibo is accounted one of the particular intimates of Morley, in a personal way, in the tendency of their thoughts and aims and otherwise. Recently Carnegie, well knowing his friend's studious inclination, presented him with a library of 90,000 volumes, one of the finest collections of books in existence. In 1904 Carnegie also influenced the noted Englishman to come to America. In Pittsburg Morley was the guest of Carnegie and there delivered his only American lecture. In an interview in America Morley said that he, as an English liberal, was always intensely interested in America and her politics and that England as a whole was fascinated by President Roosevelt.

More than once it has been said that if John Morley had a vice he might be premier. As it is Morley is too full of unrelenting rectitude, too barren of apparent passion, to be an English popular hero. For all that he is a man of emotions and feeling, but, above them all, one of restraint. One never knows Morley the man, but one can never escape Morley, the exterior, distant, reserved and unbending.

In politics Morley is a liberal in every sense, but he holds the same reserve of caution on his theories as on his public behavior. In religion he is an agnostic, but not one of the assertive kind. He has a quick, keen and delightful sense of humor, is one of the most charming of companions and is a great favorite among women. He is by nature nervous, is quick in temper and rather impatient. He has no amusements other than walking, and is fond of music and books. His father wished to make him a minister of the gospel, but he fell under the teachings of John Stuart Mill, the philosopher, and thereafter the church was impossible.

The council of empire at St. Petersburg has raised the Russian legation at Tokyo to an embassy.

BUYING PAINT BLINDLY.

Many people look upon paint buying as a lottery and so it is, the way they do it. It is not necessarily so, however. Pure White Lead and linseed oil are the essential elements of good paint. Adulterants in white lead can be easily found by the use of a blowpipe. Adulterations in linseed oil can be detected with a fair degree of certainty. See that these two elements are pure and properly put on and the paint will stay put.

National Lead Company, Woodbridge, Building, New York City, will send a blowpipe outfit and instructions for testing both white lead and linseed oil, on request.

Just a Deduction.

A polite little girl was dining one day with her grandmother. Everything at the table was unusually dainty and unexceptionable, but on this occasion the little girl found a hair in her fish.

"Grandma," she said, sweetly, "what kind of fish is this?"

"Halibut, my dear."

"Oh," replied the child, "I thought perhaps it was mermaid."

The Fairy Prince's Visit

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

(Copyright.)

Did I iver be tellin' ye about Mary Mahaney's chiny shower, which was held av a last St. Patrick's day, just wan week before she was after gettin' married to Terence Mulhaly?

Sure, if I was to live to be a thousand years old, I'll niver forget that. 'Twas the mornin' before the shower whin I was doin' up me misthress' room, an' she sat on the sofy readin' her letters, I said, very rayspectful indeed.

"If it will not inconvaynience you'm, I'd like St. Patrick's eve off. Me best friend," I wint on, "who is after marryin' Terence Mulhaly, is havin' a chiny shower. Oh, 'twill be grand! The other gurrls will all be takin' her somethin' very fine; but," an' I spoke sorrowful, "'tis little I can do. I sint all me money to me fathyer an mither in Ireland, an' I've nothin' left to put on aven a cracked cup fer Mary." An' I wiped me eye with the skirt av me apron.

"Whist now," says me misthress soft an' pleasant. She is a very kind lady, ye must know. "I guess it will not send me to the poorhouse to give ye a bit av chiny. Dhry yer eyes, an' come down to the chiny-closet with me. An' would ye belave it, before ye cud count tin, she had lepped up from the sofy, run down the stairs with me at her heels, thrown open the glass dure av the chiny-closet, an' handed me out a fine, big pitcher! 'Twas a deep, dairk blue, with pink roses an' gilt all over wan side av it. Oh, 'twas the handsomest thing ye iver see!

So ye can imagine 'twas very set up I felt the night av the shower, whin I put on me Sunday dress an' started off with me grand pitcher all done up in tissue paper under me arm. Ye see, 'twas arranged that us gurrls was to go airly, so as we could help Mary lay out the supper an' get things all ready fer the shower against the time the b'ys come in about tin o'clock. Thin while all was enjoyin' the rayfreshments we was to present the bride with the chiny.

Well, we must all have started at the same time, fer by good luck we all got to Mary's kitchen dure at the same time.

While we were enjoyin' av ourselves there come a knock on the dure, so shairp an' sudden that it caused each wan av us to nigh jump out av our skins. Fer a minute we all held back, an' thin Mary stepped to the dure an' opened it, an' there, so close against it that she jumped, stood a man.

"Isn't this Miss Bridget O'Reilly?' he says very polite an' pleasant; an' before Mary could answer, he went on, "I'm sure it is," steppin' in an' closin' the dure behind him, "fer me sister in Ireland wrote me that she lived in this very house. She says, 'You will know her by her dairk eyes an' her swate smile.'" An' do ye know that, although he spoke to Mary, he give a sudden look past her an' smiled right at me; although Sheila, an' Biddy, an' Rosie all continded afterward that it was square at thim he was lookin'.

Oh, but he was handsome! It made your eyes glad to look at him. Tall an' straight an' slim, with a laughin' mouth an' gray eyes, keen as a eagle's.

"I'm afraid I'm not the lady ye're lookin' fer," says Mary, in a soft voice. "Me name is Mahaney!"

"Mahaney!" he cried, fer all the world like he'd found a fortune. "Mahaney! Not wan av the Mahaneys av—"

"County Galway," spake up Mary.

An' the next thing ye knew, before she cud say another word, he had the two hands av her an' was shakin' thim up an' down, his eyes shinin' an' the teeth gleamin' like snow in his dark face.

Well, the next thing ye knew, that b'y had got us all laughin' an' carryin' on like we was kids agin. Och, there was nothin' that cud be done that he didn't do it! He took the stockin' that Biddy Winn was knittin' from her an' knit three rounds before ye cud say Jack Robinson—all the while a-tellin' some joke or a comical story that made our sides ache.

Such rompin'! Oh, he was the great cut-up! We shoved Mary, protestin' an' screamin', from the room, an' thin we untied the presents fer the chiny shower. Well, I'm tellin' ye, I had the surprise av me life. There wasn't a gurrl there, mind ye, that hadn't a piece av chiny as nice or better than me grand blue pitcher. Fer the life av me, I could not make it out just thin, fer why they had spent their money on Mary Mahaney, although I rayceived light on the subject later.

An' all the while, Mary poundin' on the dure an' beggin' to be let in, until we tuk pity on her, an' let her come back. After that we quieted down, an' sat around the stove again, with another cup av fresh tea apiece. An' he began to sing. An, oh! 'twas the grand voice he had, an' 'twas a pritty song as ye iver heard, with the gay tune av it.

All at once he stopped short, looked up at the big, square clock tickin' away on the mantelpiece, an' thin he sort av started, an' fer a minute a shadow fell acrost his face.

"Did ye iver hear av Cinderella," he says, "her that had to lave the ball at the sthroke av 12? I'm her brother, an' I must be lavin' before the sthroke av tin."

"Fer why?" asks Rosie.

"Fer the same rayson," he answers, his reckless eyes twinklin' again.

Thin he jumped up an' shook hands all around. "Good-by," he says to me. "Good-by, Nora av the proud O'Gradys, your murtherin' eyes have stabbed me to the hairt. An' Sheila, pale Sheila, 'tis like moonlight on Lake Killarney ye are, an' 'tis niver I'll forget ye. An' Biddy Winn, ye make a tramp dream av home, a rale home, with ye sittin' on wan side av the peat fire, knittin', an' him sittin' opposite, smokin' his pipe. An' now, Mary Mahaney, take the blessin' av a wanderer. 'Tis good luck forever, ye know."

Thin the b'y walked over to the dure, shut it shairp behind him an' was gone.

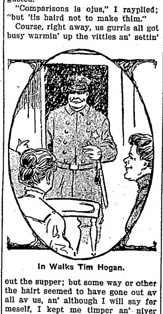
An' even as we stood there stharin' an' ready to rub our eyes, like we was just aroused from some enchantment that had been put on us, we heard heavy footsteps stampin' on the snow outside an' the voices av the b'ys, an' in a minute they all come in—Terence Mulhaly an' Roman Hinnessey an' Jawn Mather an' Billy Cronin.

"An' where's Tim Hogan?" we asked. But not wan av thim knew, so supposin' he'd come in anny minute we thought no more about it. Thin the b'ys all crowded around the stove an' begun to laugh an' cut up. 'Tis thrue that most times us gurrls would have been ready enough to join in with thim; but all at wance they seemed quite different.

"'Tis strange I niver noticed before what terrible manners they have," says Sheila Mooney to me, very disgusted.

"Comparisons is ojus," I rayplied; "but 'tis haird not to make thim."

Course, right away, us gurrls all got busy warmin' up the vittles an' settin' out the supper; but some way or other the hairt seemed to have gone out av all av us, an' although I will say fer meself, I kept me timper an' niver wance fergot I was a lady, the others became very cross an' disputatious. But we put what face on it we cud, an' before beginnin' to enjoy the rayfreshments, we all presented Mary with our pieces of chiny. Well, you should have seen the face on her whin she undid thim packages. 'Twas proud an' pleased an' yet puzzled, an' it kept gettin' more so as she unrolled the paper from each grand ornymint.



In Walks Tim Hogan.

An' while she was thryin' to thank us the best she cud, in walks Tim Hogan, brushin' the snow off his uniform—he is a policeman, ye know—an' although 'twas a very cold night, as I did be tellin' ye, his face was red an' hot, and the perspiration was thricklin' down his forehead under his helmet. Naturally, iverywan began to ask fer why he was so late.

"'Tis fer a good rayson," he says, very important an' yet cross. "There has been a great robbery. Almost ivery house on Petunia place has been entered this night. Yours, Sheila Mooney, an' yours, Nora Grady, an' yours, Biddy Winn. The police thought they had him sure; but he slipped right through their fingers and vanished like quicksilver. I did not see him meself, but 'twas the fine handsome crook he was, they towld me. I'd give something nice to lay me hands on him."

Before he had finished, Rosie, she slipped through the dure into the laundry. Stoppin' only to whisper to Mary to kape the quiet tongue in her head—I cud tell by the way Sheila an Biddy was lookin' at Tim that they had no intintion av helpin' him out with anny information—I followed Rosie.

There she was, sittin' on a upturned tub in that cowld, damp laundry, lit only by a feeble taper, cryin' as if her hairt wud break.

"Oh, Nora," she sobs whin she sees me, runnin' to me an' throwin' her arms around me, "do ye belave it?"

"Not I!" I says, very stout. "I'd stake me sowl's salvation that he niver stole annything but hairts."

"An' me, too," says Sheila, who had come in. "I don't know what he was, an' I don't care; but he was no thief."

"But I know now," says Rosie, liftin' her head up, with a light on her face an' a kind av glory an' wonder in her eyes. "'Tis the prince av the fairies he was, stepped in on a St. Patrick's eve to call on the few that's left to lavin' in him."

ALMOST A MIRACLE.

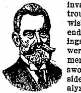
Raised Up When Science Said There Was No Hope.



G. W. L. Nesbitt, Depot Street, Marion, Ky., writes: "I was a chronic invalid with kidney troubles, and often wished death might end my awful sufferings. The secretions were thick with sediment, my limbs swollen and my right side so nearly paralyzed I could not raise my hand above my head. The doctor held out no hope of my recovery, and I had given up, but at last started using Doan's Kidney Pills and made a rapid gain. After three months' use I was well and at work again."

15 YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Burning, Painful Sores on Legs—Tortured Day and Night—Tried Many Remedies to No Avail —Cured by Cuticura.

"After an attack of rheumatism, running sores broke out on my husband's legs, from below the knees to the ankles. There are no words to tell all the discomforts and great suffering he had to endure night and day. He used every kind of remedy and three physicians treated him, one after the other, without any good results whatever. One day I ordered some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. He began to use them and in three weeks all the sores were died up. The burning fire stopped, and the pains became bearable. After three months he was quite well. I can prove this testimonial at any time. Mrs. V. V. Albert, Upper Frenchville, Me., July 21, 1907."

The Details.

"The particulars—?"

"Well, Capt. Feebles was shot in the back, originally, and went around with his back bent a good deal like an interrogation mark, until he got a portly slab of back pension. Then he straightened up his back until it was decidedly concave instead of considerably convex, dyed his whiskers a fighting black and set out in pursuit of a buxom widow, who, being a widow, knew exactly how to be caught while maintaining all the symptoms of eluding capture to the very best of her ability."—Smart Set.

"Feather Diagnosis."

A woman who was perfectly well but fancied she was suffering from fever, called on an old and experienced physician to consult him. She described her symptoms at some length, and he listened patiently. At last he said: "I think I understand your case, madam. Sit perfectly still a few moments and let me look at you." She complied and he eyed her attentively for nearly a minute, glancing at his watch once or twice in the meantime. "There is nothing the matter with you, madam," he said. "You haven't the slightest indication of fever. Your heart beat is perfectly normal." "Why, how do you know, doctor?" she asked in surprise. "You didn't feel my pulse." "I didn't need to," he answered. "I counted the vibrations of the ostrich feather on your hat." And he bowed her out.

FRIENDS HELP.

St. Paul Park Incident.

"After drinking coffee for breakfast I always felt languid and dull, having no ambition to get to my morning duties. Then in about an hour or so a weak, nervous derangement of the heart and stomach would come over me with such force I would frequently have to lie down.

"At other times I had severe headaches; stomach finally became affected and digestion so impaired that I had serious chronic dyspepsia and constipation. A lady, for many years State President of the W. C. T. U., told me she had been greatly benefited by quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee; she was troubled for years with asthma. She said it was no cross to quit coffee when she found she could have as delicious an article as Postum.

"Another lady who had been troubled with chronic dyspepsia for years, found immediate relief on ceasing coffee and beginning Postum twice a day. She was wholly cured. Still another friend told me that Postum Food Coffee was a Godsend to her, her heart trouble having been relieved after leaving off coffee and taking on Postum.

"So many such cases came to my notice that I concluded coffee was the cause of my trouble and I quit and took up Postum. I am more than pleased to say that my days of trouble have disappeared. I am well and happy." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

90 BUSHELS OF OATS TO THE ACRE.

WHAT MR. KALTENBRUNNER HAS TO SAY ABOUT HIS GRAIN CROPS IN CENTRAL CANADA.

Writing from Regina, Saskatchewan, Central Canada, Mr. A. Kaltenbrunner writes:—

"Some years ago I took up a homestead for myself, and also one for my son. The half section which we own adjoins the Moose Jaw Creek; is a low, level and heavy land. We put in 70 acres of wheat in stubble which went 20 bushels to the acre, and 30 acres of summer fallow, which went 25 bushels to the acre. All the wheat we harvested this year is No. 1 Hard. That means the best wheat that can be raised on the earth. We did not sell any wheat yet, as we intend to keep one part for our own seed, and sell the other part to people who want first class seed, for there is no doubt if you sow good wheat you will harvest good wheat. We also threshed 9,000 bushels of first class oats out of 160 acres. 80 acres has been fall plowing, which yielded 90 bushels per acre, and 80 acres stubble, which went 30 bushels to the acre. These oats are the best kind that can be raised. We have shipped three carloads of them, and got 53 cents per bushel clear. All our grain was cut in the last week of the month of August before any frost could touch it.

"Notwithstanding the fact that we have had a late spring, and that the weather conditions this year were very adverse and unfavorable, we will make more money out of our crop this year than last.

"For myself I feel compelled to say that Western Canada crops cannot be checked, even by unusual conditions."

NATURE AND A WOMAN'S WORK

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Nature and a woman's work combined have produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known.

In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers they relied upon the roots and herbs of the field to cure disease and mitigate suffering.

The Indians on our Western Plains to-day can produce roots and herbs for every ailment, and cure diseases that baffle the most skilled physicians who have spent years in the study of drugs.

From the roots and herbs of the field Lydia E. Pinkham more than thirty years ago gave to the women of the world a remedy for their peculiar ills, more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is now recognized as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

Mrs. Bertha Muff, of 515 N.C. St., Louisiana, Mo., writes:

"Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my troubles public.

"For twelve years I had been suffering with the worst forms of female ills. During that time I had eleven different physicians without help. No tongue can tell what I suffered, and at times I could hardly walk. About two years ago I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice. I followed it, and can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice restored health and strength. It is worth mountains of gold to suffering women."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Muff, it will do for other suffering women.

Steenerson Writes On Drainage.

The following letter from Congressman Steenerson will explain eo our readers just what congress is going to do in regard to the passing of a drainage bill and the terms and conditions of the bill that is about to be passed. Mr. Steenerson is thouroughly aquainted with the subject on which he writes and his letter makes clear every point. His letter is as follows:

Washington, D. C. April 29, 1908.
Mr. Chas. W. Latta,
Plummer, Minn.

From recent editorials in your papers I see that you are interested in proposed drainage legislation in Congress, and in order that you may have an accurate idea of what is proposed to be done and enable you to explain it to your readers I enclose you a copy of H. R. 19541, to authorize the drainage of certain lands in the State of Minnesota, together with Senate report thereon, containing the additional amendments proposed in Senate. The amendments have been agreed to but they will be modified in conference and then the bill be passed at this session, as we confidently believe.

The main difference between the bill introduced by me and the present measure is that my bill made a direct appropriation and authorized the United States Government to construct the improvements so far as the public drains were concerned, leaving to each land owner to drain into these public drains. I had planned to increase the price of the unsold land sufficently, together with what would be collected from the lands in private ownership to reimburse the Government. On account of a decided and controling sentiment in both Houses against the Government engaging directly in the drainage of swamp lands, I made up my mind that such a measure could not pass, at least not for some time to come, and in order to get something done at the present Congress it would be best to adopt the plan embraced in this bill, which is, briefly stated, to subject all ceded Indians lands, all public lands, and all lands which have been entered but not proved up, to assessments for drainage improvements. When a drainage project is planned the amount of the expense will be apportioned to each tract under the State laws, and the county will issue its bonds the same as for other ditches or drainage works, and the tax will be enforced by sale if necessary. Where ceded Indian land is sold for drainage tax the purchaser at the tax sale becomes the owner of the land, subject, however, to the payment to the Indians of $4.00 an acre on the eleven townships and $1.25 per acre outside of the eleven townships, and the purchaser must be a qualified homesteader, except when the State is a purchaser, and when the State is a purchaser it can only resell the land to a person who is a qualified homesteader. In a similar manner public lands and lands entered but the title to which is in the United States are treated, so you will observe that whatever value there is in the land over and above the amount due the Indians is made subject to the drainage improvement tax. This ought to insure the reclaining of all lands that are worth reclaiming. Of course I can see that the first plan was best for the settlers because the improvement would be put in at once and the money advanced by the Government, but inasmuch as we conld not get rhat plan adopted the proposed plan ought to be satisfactory.

Under the State law a system of drainage ditches can be planned, for instance, in the so called Mud Lake district, and the cost of the improvement apportioned to every piece of land whether Government land, ceded Indian land, entered land, or patented land in private ownerahip, and altho there might be several forties in each section that would not sell when the improvement was constructed for enough to pay the assessment, yet on the whole, the amount could be so apportioned as to be sure to repay the cost of the improvement or bonds issued therefor. The bonds would be issued by the the county and sold and lands which are now worthless would be valuable after the ditches are dug, and the purchasers would pay the assessment together with the amount due the Indians, and you would have a thickly settled community.

I think when you study this proposed law thoroughly in connection with the state drainage laws, and the procedure thereunder that you will be satisfied that this is a long step toward the solution of the drainage problem.

I am, Yours very sincerely,
H. STEENERSON.

Buttermaker Hovland calls our attention to an error in the published March statement of the Lillo cremery which we published last week. As published the over-run was 15.2 per cent while the correct figure is 18.1 per cent. We published the figures as sent in by the secretary but we are glad to make the correction as we wish to give the creamery and its buttermaker all credit they are entitled to.

Don't Live In New Houses.

Why is a new house unhealthful? That is a question which has been asked by many and answered by few. And yet the reason is obvious. In the construction of just one medium sized house it is estimated that over 30,000 gallons of water is used. This water does not evaporate so quickly as it would in the air and sunlight, but lies near the surface of the earth and under the house and in the walls of the cellar; hence the house is damp, and damp houses foster illness. A house that has been standing for a year or so is much more healthful than a new one.--Minneapolis Journal.

Death of Wm. Findeisen.

Wm Findelson, one of the best known and most respected citizens of Red Lake Falls, died at Minneapolis last Saturday evening as the result of inhaling gas in a hotel there. Mr. Findelson was at Minneapolis on a business trip and the hotel at which he was stopping used gas for lighting purposes. He retired at night in good health and spirits but in the morning he was found in an almost unconscious condition. Either a gas pipe leaked or a jet was left partly open which caused the room to be filled with the deadly fumes while he was sleeping. When he was discovered Mrs. Findeisen was wired for to Red Lake Falls and she left at once to care for him. Everything possible was done for the unfortunate man but the poison of the gas had done its work all too well. The body was taken home to Red Lake Falls for interment and on Wednesday one of the largest funeral processions ever seen in Red Lake Falls followed the remains to their final resting place.

Wm. Findeisen was one of the pioneer business men of Red Lake Falls. He settled there many years ago and worked at his trade of blacksmith. By steady effort and careful business methods he acquired a fine business and came to be recognized as one of the foremost business men in the county. He was a man well liked by all and whose memory will long remain with those who knew him. The members of his family have the sincere symqathy of the community in their irreparable lose.

The Telephone Line.

The contract for construction of the new telephone line between Red Lake Falls and Lillo, via Plummer, has been let to Herman anb Oscar Lillo. These gentleman were in town on Wednesday and contracted with J. C. Parker, of the S. P. K. Lumber Cedar & Tie Co., for the necessary poles to be used along the line. The necessary right of way has been secured and they expect to begin the actual work of construction next week. The setting up of poles and the stringing of the wires will be pushed rapidly and there is good reason to beleive that the line will be ready for work before July 1st.

A meeting was held at Highlanding on Sunday last at which the matter of organizing another company to put in a line connecting with the Lillo line, was discussed. If suitable arrangements can be made this line will be put in also this summer.

Another meeting will be held at Highlanding tomorrow to take further steps towards the organization of such a company.

Mill Is Going Up Log Drive is Here.

On Wednesday the engine and boiler for the Plummer saw mill arrived on two flat cars and the work of placing the machinery is now being pushed rapidly along. As announced last week the mill will be located just opposite the creamery on the river bank. The logs will be taken from the river into the mill by the endless chain method, and we understand that a separate engine will be employed in this work. The planing mill will be located just in the rear of the saw mill and the lath and shingle mill will not be put in until next year.

The big log drive began to come in on Sunday and on Wednesday the rear had been brought to a standstill and the driving crew, having finished their share of the work, were paid off and returned to their homes. The drive contains in the neighborhood of a million feet of saw logs and a lot of pulp wood and cedar posts and poles. The river is full of these logs, posts and pulp wood for more than a mile and every foot of this material will be banked, dressed and marketed from Plummer this year. Last summer this company ran a big drive of railroad ties down stream to Red Lake Falls where they were sold to the Great Northern railroad company. This year all the ties will be purchased by the Soo line and shipped from here. A spur track will be put in just north of the present platted townsite to connect with the mill and lumber yards.

Birt Evritt and his brother-in-law, C. W. Winship, the men who have entire charge of the mill, arrived here the first of the week with their families from Shevlin and are busy getting their household effects moved to rooms over the Norsk Handel store which they will occupy for the present.

There is a noticeble scarcity of buildings in which the mill hands may start housekeeping and already several parties are talking of building residences. Plummer needs more residence buildings which will rent readily as the town will grow quickly from now on.

TO CONSERVE NATION'S WEALTH

COUNTRY'S MASTER MINDS SUGGEST PLANS FOR CONSERVING RESOURCES.

Conference of Governor and Industrial Chiefs at the White House. The President Strongly Impresses Need of Action.

Washington, May 14.—Two ideas destined to mark material progress in America's future, resulted from the first of the three days conference at the White House in which President Roosevelt, the governors of forty-four states, cabinet officers, supreme court judges, senators, representatives and experts are participating in efforts to reach conclusions on the best methods of conserving the natural resources of the nation.

The first is that a permanent organization by the states and the nation is necessary, and probably will result from the present conference, to accomplish the end sought. The second—suggested by Secretary Root—is that there is no limitation by the Constitution to the agreements which may be made between the states subject to the approval of congress. The two ideas, fully developed, it is predicted, would result in the conservation of the energies and resources of the nation through uniform and unconflicting laws, both national and state.

The idea that the conference should be perpetual developed in the form of resolutions offered for later consideration by Gov. Glenn of North Carolina and Gov. Folk of Missouri. There were many others, but a parliamentary move to save time sent them to a committee for consideration.

So crowded was the day with interesting and important developments and so fraught with history-making possibilities—material political and social—to make but a categorical enumeration of events would go to give the best conclusion of the occasion.

The session yesterday was presided over by Governor Noel of Mississippi and to-day the honor falls on Governor Johnson of Minnesota.

The sessions are held in the historic East room of the White House.

FOREST FIRES

Lumeer and Saw Mill Burn at Boylston, Wisconsin.

Superior, Wis., May 13.—A loss of $50,000 was incurred by a fire at Boylston on the Great Northern line. The brush fires did the damage, burning a portable saw mill of Murphy Brothers, several hundred thousand shingles and a quarter of a million feet of lumber. One farm house was burned, the family narrowly escaping with their lives.

Rains put out the fires which threatened to do a great deal of damage and cause a good deal of suffering. It is said that several forest fires have been set by careless fishermen.

PANIC IN THEATER

The Playgoers are Frightened During Near-by Fire.

Atlanta, Ga., May 13.—One hundred and seventy-five horses, two of them show prize winners, half a block of buildings burned with a hundred thousand dollar loss, a threatened panic in a crowded theater nearby, and a half a dozen persons injured, none seriously, summarizes a fire which started in the business section of Atlanta at an early hour.

Half a block away a panic started in the Orpheum theater, which was crowded from floor to balcony. Half a dozen negroes were bruised in the first crush, but no one was seriously hurt.

Messenger Beaten.

Seattle, Wash., May 13.—J. E. Perrine, Great Northern express messenger on the train which left Seattle at 8:10 a. m. yesterday bound for Vancouver, B. C., was beaten over the head with his gun and tied hand and foot by two men who entered the train just as it was leaving Seattle, and who after overpowering him, looted the strong box of a sum of money estimated at from $1,000 to $10,000. The robbers escaped.

DESERVED TO WIN HIS CASE.

Really Able Argument Put Forward by Accused Sailor.

A very good story has recently been told in the fleet of an incident which happened when Admiral Evans was in command of the Indiana. An old-time bluejacket was at the mast before Capt. Evans, charged with getting food out of a mess chest outside of meal hours. This getting of food for night watches is a common and strong desire on the part of most men aboard ship.

Capt. Evans asked the man what he had to say; and the man, sizing up the delicate situation, said:

"Captain, I didn't take no food outer that chest. Why, captain, there weren't no food in that chest! I looked in that chest, and, captain, I met a cockroach coming out of that chest with tears in his eyes."—Harper's Weekly.

You Would Not Accept Counterfeit Money, Why Accept Counterfeit Goods?

Good money is made by the Government in which you have implicit faith and confidence. Good goods are made by manufacturers who are willing to stake their reputations on the quality of the material offered to you through the medium of their advertisements in this paper. Counterfeit goods are not advertised. The reason for it is they will not bear the close scrutiny to which genuine advertised goods are subjected. Counterfeit money pays more profit to the counterfeiter. Counterfeit goods are offered to you for the same reason.

Insist on the Genuine—Reject the Counterfeit.

CAUSE FOR HIS HURRY.

"Ah, I love to see a little boy in such a hurry to get to school!"

"Yes, sir. Me little brother's got de measles, an' I'm hurrying up to get excused!"

A Kansas Girl's Advice.

A Lincoln county girl writes this advice to the Kansas City Star: "Why do young men do so much loafing? Go to work. Push ahead! I am but a young girl, but I clothe myself and have money in the bank. I lay up more money every year than any young man within three miles of my home. When they get a dollar they go to a dance and go home a dollar out. I advise all girls to cut clear of loafing boys. Stand by the boy who works, and never put your arm through the handle of a jug."

Bees in Block of Stone.

While workmen were sawing through a block of Bath stone at Exeter, England, they cut into a cavity in which was found a cluster of two or three dozen live bees.

The incident occurred at the works of Messrs. Collard & Sons, monumental sculptors. There was not much sign of life in the bees at first, but when air was admitted they gradually revived and after a few hours several of them were able to fly.

Hanging Scaffolds.

With the modern skyscraping office building has come a new form of building scaffold. Instead of constructing the scaffold from below, which is impossible in the cases of buildings ranging from 10 to 50 stories high, platforms are suspended from the steel girders above. On these swinging platforms the bricklayers work and the scaffold is raised as the work progresses.—System.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

MINNESOTA.

Minneapolis—May 11, the state of Minnesota was 50 years old. On that day, fifty years ago the telegraph station nearest to Minneapolis was Prairie du Chien, Wis. The news of the passage of the bill by congress for the admission of the state was flashed over the wires from Washington to the little Wisconsin town only a few minutes after President James Buchanan had attached his signature to the document making it a law, but the people most interested were not aware of their good fortune until two days later, when the steamer Milwaukee, at 6 a. m. arrived in St. Paul bringing both official and private advices of the auspicious event. The newspapers of the twin cities issued "extras" that day, and followed these on the 14th with liberal extracts from papers published "down the river" brought on the afternoon of the 13th, by the steamer Gray Eagle.

The first session of the state legislature began on the first Wednesday of December at the capitol in St. Paul, five months before the state was admitted to the Union. In that month, Henry M. Rice and James Shields were elected United States senators. On Jan. 29, 1858, Senator Stephen A. Douglas submitted a bill to the United States senate for the admission of Minnesota into the union. On April 7, the bill passed the senate with only three dissenting votes, was shortly concurred in by the house of representatives and on May 11, 1858, the president affixed his signature to it.

The population of the new state was 150,037. The state officers, who had been elected in October of the previous year, assumed their duties on May 24, 1858. They were: H. H. Sibley, governor; William Holcomb, lieutenant governor; Francis Baason, secretary of state; George W. Armstrong, treasurer; W. F. Dunbar, auditor; Charles H. Berry, attorney general; Lafayette Emmett, chief justice; Charles E. Flandreau and Isaac Atwater, associate justices. The clerk of the supreme court was Jacob J. Noah, and the reporter, Harvey Officer; James Shields and Henry M. Rice, democrats, United States senators; J. M. Cavanaugh, democrat, representative in congress from the first district, and W. W. Phelps, democrat, from the second district.

Remove Blots.

St. Paul—The state of Minnesota, through its capitol grounds commission, is about to take the first steps to clearing up the approaches to the new capitol by wiping out some of the big billboards which are in such generous abundance in that neighborhood. The first attack will be along Wabasha street on the ground recently purchased by the commission.

The state has now acquired title to the land on Wabasha street, between Central avenue and Park avenue, except that occupied by the buildings at the corner of Central avenue. The old sheds whose roofs were formerly visible over the tops of the billboards have already been removed and the billboards will soon follow them.

Watching.

Long Lake—Sheriff Dreger and his deputies are maintaining a close watch on the Kadelbach farm near here, where the murder of Mrs. Katherine McCart was committed a year ago.

It is thought that George Kadelbach, the suspect, may return for a few days to look after his farm. In case he does there will be officers waiting to welcome him.

Mrs. Kadelbach has been away from the farm several weeks and it is believed that she has been in California, where Kadelbach has taken refuge since the crime. She is expected home soon to look after business affairs.

To Impeach Recorder.

Mankato—Alleging that City Recorder John B. Hodapp had wilfully, unlawfully and fraudulently placed the name of A. L. Baby on the city payroll and refuses to remove it although the presence of the objectionable name prevents the other laborers from getting their pay, inasmuch as Mayor Andrews refuses to sign the order, the city council has preferred formal charges against the recorder and has set his hearing for the evening of May 22. If he is found guilty the charter requires the council to remove him from office.

NEWS NOTES.

Mapleton—At a meeting of the village council it was voted to accept the proposition of Andrew Carnegie to give Mapleton $5,000 for a public library, and a levy of $500 will be made annually for its maintenance.

Stetson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," will be the attraction at the Bijou Opera House, Minneapolis, for one week, beginning Sunday, May 17. The company comprises about fifty people, including a dozen specialty artists, two quartettes, band and orchestra, and a colored chorus to add zest and realism to plantation scenes.

St. Paul—D. W. Lawler, mayor-elect of St. Paul, has resigned his position on the state board of visitors to state institutions, and Gov. Johnson appointed George R. O'Reilly, also of St. Paul, to the position.

Minneapolis—Fifty prominent society women have been supplied with special badges showing them to be auxiliary members of the Humane society.

Willow River—Paul V. Novak, a boy employed in the slab yard at the Atwood Lumber company's sawmill, was run over and killed by a dump wagon.

This woman says that sick women should not fail to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she did.

Mrs. A. Gregory, of 2355 Lawrence St., Denver, Col., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was practically an invalid for six years, on account of female troubles. I underwent an operation by the doctor's advice, but in a few months I was worse than before. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to perfect health, such as I have not enjoyed in many years. Any woman suffering as I did with backache, bearing-down pains, and periodic pains, should not fail to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Economical Physician.

Ambassador Wu Ting-fang was once, it is alleged, telling about a certain selfish politician. He said: "The man reminds me of a doctor of Shanghai. A mandarin came to this doctor for advice. He could not sleep, had no appetite, suffered a good deal from depression and nevertheless was taking on fat at an alarming rate. 'We'll soon put you in condition again,' said the physician. 'What you need is exercise, good, hard exercise. Four times a week you can come here and put in the morning polishing my floors.' 'But why not my own floors?' the mandarin inquired. 'Mine,' said the physician, 'are larger.'"

When the Ship Went Down

By Owen Oliver

(Copyright.)

There was a space of still water round the Uralian. One reef sheltered her as she lay upon another, straining and groaning, like a beast in pain. Her bows had climbed over the hidden rock, pointing scornfully upwards till they were bent with their own weight and sagged downward again.

Beyond the oasis of calm, a heavy sea swept shorewards in towering green waves, until it reached a comb of jagged rocks, and poured through the openings in sheets of foam to a long, sandy beach. Three tossing boats were approaching the rocks as slowly as the current would suffer, looking for a passage through. The fourth—the last remaining—was just leaving the ship. The men who had lowered it, with no appliances but bare ropes, rubbed their chafed hands on their trousers and mopped their foreheads, and gathered together silently—except a tall gentleman of about 40. He left the rest and went toward a lady, who stood back a little, watching them. The rest of the women, and all the children, were in the boats.

She turned when he reached her, and they walked forward together. He patted her shoulder approvingly, and she smiled at him. She was about five-and-thirty; could scarcely be called good-looking, but very likable when she smiled.

"That's why she wouldn't go in the boat!" one of the gathering observed.

"Aye!" said an old sailor. "She's the right sort."

Then they were silent again.

The man and the woman were silent, too. When they reached the end of the saloon promenade, beside the wrecked music saloon, they stopped and rested their arms on the rail and gazed at the shore a mile away; not as if they wished to look at the shore, but as if they feared to look at each other. The chief officer came swiftly down the narrow ladder from the navigation deck, with two life-belts on his arm.

"Best put them on," he advised; "but I don't think they'll be much use." He nodded toward the breakers. "She'll go in ten minutes."

The man laid one belt on the deck, while he put the other round the woman. She held up her arms and smiled at him all the time. When he finished his task, and picked up the other belt, she took it from him.

"Let me do it for you," she offered. "I should like to if I may."

His grave face lit up for a moment

"I shall like you to," he told her. "You are a brave woman."

"Braver than I thought," she assented. "I used to think that I was just—ordinary; that we all were. Now I think it was life that was ordinary, not we. What shall we do with the rest of it—the ten minutes?"

"Let us open our hearts," the man proposed. "We may venture now. Dear lady, I have admired you and liked you all the voyage. We shall go as friends together, I think?"

"I wish no better company," she told him.

"Is there no one who has a better right?" he asked.

"No one. And you?"

"No one."

"And that," she said, "is why we thought life ordinary, I suppose."

"Yes," he said. "We are braver than we thought. You, dear lady, are the bravest and the best. You gave up your life when you gave up your place in the boat. Why?"

"I stayed for a friend," she explained.

"Me?" He looked at her quickly.

"You. I wonder—it doesn't matter what we say now, does it?—I wonder if we really cared for each other!"

"Ah!" said the man. "I wondered, too, but I thought women always knew?"

She shook her head.

"I liked you, certainly, but I have liked other men. I never liked any of them enough. You see, I am not a marrying woman. I have—I had aims in life. Marriage meant sacrificing so much. And for what? To be a toy and plaything for a year. Perhaps not a year—don't call it selfishness. I'd have given up everything if I had thought that love would last! My dear friend, it doesn't last. You and I are not children. We have seen life. We know! But the woman's lasts longest. I was afraid of that!"

"I know." The man nodded. "I liked you, too; liked you more than was comfortable! I thought it out many a time. It was more than liking, Marian.

"I was very tempted sometimes to ask you to give me yourself; but—you see, I also have liked others; and not enough. I, too, was not sure if I liked you enough; but I liked you more than any of the rest—much more. I used to fancy that some night when the moon shone—some night when the end of the voyage and the parting from you were nearer than I could bear—and you looked at me with your beautiful smile—I could never reason with that smile of yours, Marian."

She turned to him, and smiled; and he took both her hands and kissed them.

"I did not mean to either," she confessed; "but I thought that perhaps—near the end of the voyage, as you say—if you took my hand—I could never reason with the touch of your hand on mine. I—oh, yes! I should have taken the risk, I think, if you had asked me."

He drew her gently to him. She laid her face on his shoulder for a moment, then lifted it to his.

"Oh, my dear!" she cried, "the risk was not that we should not love; only that we should lose sight of it in the commonplace of life. Now, if we are spared, we shall know—"

"We shall know, darling. There is no hope, I think. May we both be saved, or neither!"

"Yes—yes—hold me very tightly when—then! Oh! I love you so!"

He took up a piece of cord that lay upon the deck and made a fastening between the life-belts.

"If my arms can no longer hold you," he said, "we will still be together. It shall be both, or neither. I love you very much, Marian."

He kissed her many times, and she smiled the beautiful smile.

They clung to each other tightly. They did not stir even when the ship gave a long shiver and another. Then the chief officer hurried forward. He told them to hurry aft, and in a few moments the great vessel was rent in two by a terrific powder blast, and the stern floated off, held up by the water tight compartments.

The fragment of ship swept unsteadily toward the shore, rocking and rolling so violently that those on it could scarcely cling to the rails. They were 50 yards from the rocks where the sea broke, and perhaps a hundred and fifty from the shore, when they managed to get a line to the beach.

Those aboard secured their end firmly to the ship and then their comrades ashore pulled it as taut as they could—tugging so hard that the poop of the ship moved yards nearer the breakers. The sailors substituted a stouter rope for the cord between the man and the woman, tied a loop in the end of the rope and greased it to make it run more easily. They put it over the hawser first, so that one would hang at each side, and told them to hold each other firmly. Then two or three men held them over the side ready to start.

"Now," asked the chief officer, "are you ready?"

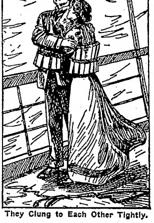
The woman smiled at him, bravely.

"God bless you all," she said. "There are more good people in the world than I thought. Good-by."

She lifted her face to the man, and they kissed each other.

"God bless you!" he said.

"Go!" cried the chief officer, giving them a mighty push, and they slid swiftly down the sagging hawser, through the drenching foam that sprang from the rocks and nearly took their breath away, holding each other more and more tightly, and rocking swiftly from side to side.



They Clung to Each Other Tightly.

At first they went very fast; but as the rope sagged their motion was slower and slower; and though the rope between them passed over the joins in the hawsers the obstacles checked their speed. Then their feet dragged in the foam and they moved very, very slowly, till at last the current began dragging at their feet and the oldest sailor ashore yelled out sharply:

"Lower 'em! Lower 'em! The current'll fetch 'em!"

And suddenly they splashed in the water and the foam flew all over them; and a sailor waist-deep in the water and holding to others in a chain, seized them and dragged them on to the beach. And, without waiting to be untied, they joined the rest in hauling at the rope for the passage of the next pair, who were already at the ship's side; but as they pulled they kept smiling at each other.

"Oh!" she whispered once. "And we thought life ordinary!"

All their friends were ashore at last. The chief officer arrived a couple of minutes before the remains of the old ship broke up and disappeared. Then a sailor cut the couples adrift. When he severed the only lady from her companion he grinned.

"The next time you're tied up," he prophesied, "it'll be a knot that can't be cut—a parson's knot."

AT A CRITICAL TIME.

Women Are Likely to Suffer with Dangerous Kidney Disorders.

Mrs. John Kirk, R. F. D. No. 2, Detroit, Mich., says: "Five years ago at a critical time of life I was on the verge of a collapse with kidney troubles, backache, dizziness, puffy dropsy swellings and urinary irregularities. I lost flesh and felt languid, nervous or unstrung all the time. As my doctor did not help me I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. In a few weeks all these symptoms left me. I now weigh 163 pounds and feel in excellent health."

BOY KEPT SCRATCHING.

Eczema Lasted 7 Years—Face Was All Raw—Skin Specialists Failed, But Cuticura Effected Cure.

"When my little boy was six weeks old an eruption broke out on his face. I took him to a doctor, but his face kept on getting worse until it got so bad that no one could look at him. His whole face was one crust and must have been very painful. He scratched day and night until his face was raw. Then I took him to all the best specialists in skin diseases but they could not do much for him. The eczema got on his arms and legs and we could not get a night's sleep in months. I got a set of Cuticura Remedies and he felt relieved the first time I used them. I gave the Cuticura Remedies a good trial and gradually the eczema healed all up. He is now seven years old and I think the trouble will never return. Mrs. John G. Klumpp, 80 Niagara St., Newark, N. J., Oct. 17 and 22, 1907."

The Coloring Matter.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the government's famous food expert, was talking about the adulteration of wines.

"One day," he said, "I heard a wine salesman discussing a new price list with his father. The father was going to buy some wines. He turned page after page of the list, ticking off his selections with a pencil.

"'Look here, son,' he said, 'how is it that your red wines are all dearer than your whites?'

"'Why,' said the son indignantly, 'do you think that crimson lake costs nothing?'"

The New Baby.

A young woman of a religious turn of mind wished to announce to a friend the birth of her first-born child. She sent the following telegram: "Isaiah, 9-6," which, being interpreted, read, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given."

The friend, more literal and less familiar with the prophets, read the message, and said to her husband: "Margaret has a boy, but why on earth did she name him Isaiah? He must be a healthy chap, though, for he weighs nine pounds and six ounces."—Woman's Home Companion.

How He Got Rid of Rats.

A farmer describes his method of clearing the premises of rats in the following manner: "On a large number of old shingles I put a half-teaspoonful of treacle each, and on that with my pocket knife I scraped a small amount of concentrated lye. I then placed the old shingles around under the stable floors and under the cribs. The next morning I found 40 dead rats, and the rest left the farm for parts unknown. I have cleared many farms of the pests in the same way, and have never known it to fail."

CHANGE IN FOOD

Works Wonders in Health.

It is worth knowing that a change in food can cure dyspepsia. "I deem it my duty to let you know how Grape-Nuts food has cured me of indigestion.

"I had been troubled with it for years, until last year my doctor recommended Grape-Nuts food to be used every morning. I followed instructions and now I am entirely well.

"The whole family like Grape-Nuts, we use four packages a week. You are welcome to use this testimonial as you see fit."

The reason this lady was helped by the use of Grape-Nuts food, is that it is predigested by natural processes and therefore does not tax the stomach as the food she had been using; it also contains the elements required for building up the nervous system. If that part of the human body is in perfect working order, there can be no dyspepsia, for nervous energy represents the steam that drives the engine.

When the nervous system is run down, the machinery of the body works badly. Grape-Nuts food can be used by small children as well as adults. It is perfectly cooked and ready for instant use.

THOUGHT IT NATIONAL TRAIT.

Driver Couldn't Understand American Not Being in a Hurry.

A traveler returned from Jaffa tells tale at his own expense. Having journeyed to the historical seaport on his way to Jerusalem, he succeeded in hiring a conveyance to carry him to the station. By speech and gesture he informed the native driver that he wished to be carried in a leisurely, sightseeing fashion through as many as possible of the principal thoroughfares of Jaffa, and to be delivered at the terminal just in time to take the outgoing train.

He had no sooner seated himself in the vehicle, however, than the driver whipped up his horse and whirled the dismayed traveler at a furious pace through all the dust and over all the stones of the notoriously rough streets of Jaffa. The passenger was too busily employed in saving his bones to be able to see anything of the interesting town.

Arriving at the station, he found that he still had two hours to wait.

"Why in the world," he demanded, indignantly, "did you ever hurry like that?"

"You American," responded the driver, with an expressive shrug. "All American like go very much fast."—Youth's Companion.

COMPLAINTS ABOUT PAINT.

The time to complain about paint is before the painter applies it. The man who puts up the money should not shirk the responsibility of choosing the paint. True, the painter ought to know paint better than the banker, the professional man or the merchant. The trouble is, the house-owner too often deliberately bars the competent and honest painter from the job by accepting a bid which he ought to know would make an honest job impossible.

Secure your bids on the basis of National Lead Company's pure White Lead and pure Linseed Oil and see that you get these materials.

No one need be fooled by adulterated white lead. A blowpipe testing outfit will be mailed to anyone interested in paint.

What is Pe-ru-na?

Is it a Catarrh Remedy, or a Tonic, or is it Both?

Some people call Peruna a great tonic. Others refer to Peruna as a great catarrh remedy.

Which of these people are right? Is it more proper to call Peruna a catarrh remedy than to call it a tonic?

Our reply is, that Peruna is both a tonic and a catarrh remedy. Indeed, there can be no effectual catarrh remedy that is not also a tonic.

In order to thoroughly relieve any case of catarrh, a remedy must not only have a specific action on the mucous membranes affected by the catarrh, but it must have a general tonic action on the nervous system.

Catarrh, even in persons who are otherwise strong, is a weakened condition of some mucous membrane. There must be something to strengthen the circulation, to give tone to the arteries, and to raise the vital forces.

Perhaps no vegetable remedy in the world has attracted so much attention from medical writers as HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS. The wonderful efficacy of this herb has been recognized many years, and is growing in its hold upon the medical profession. When joined with CUBEBS and COPAIBA a trio of medical agents is formed in Peruna which constitutes a specific remedy for catarrh that in the present state of medical progress cannot be improved upon. This action, reinforced by such renowned tonics as COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS, CORYDALIS FORMOSA and CEDRON SEED, ought to make this compound an ideal remedy for catarrh in all its stages and locations in the body.

From a theoretical standpoint, therefore, Peruna is beyond criticism. The use of Peruna, confirms this opinion. Numberless testimonials from every quarter of the earth furnish ample evidence that this judgment is not over enthusiastic. When practical experience confirms a well-grounded theory the result is a truth that cannot be shaken.

Village Improvements.

Rumor has it that the Village council has been discussing the putting in of some street lights and more side walks, as advocated by the PIONEER some weeks ago. We are not informed as to whether or not the council has taken any definite action towards the completion of these much-needed improvements. There is no question but these things will be done if the people of the village will insist on them and tell the council so.

And talking of improvements; seems to us that a sidewalk is very much needed to the creamery and the new sawmill. It does not need to be a very costly walk but it should be sufficient to keep people out of the mud who may want to go to those places. If a stranger comes to town now he is told about what a fine creamery we have and the new saw mill that is going in. If this stranger wants to see these industries he has to roll his pants up to his knees and wade through some mighty sticky mud before he gets there. Women folks have to walk down the middle of the road through the mud and hold their skirts high enough to escape contact with the deposits left by the farmers' teams when hauling cream to the creamery. In either case by the time a stranger gets there and back he or she does not think such a lot of Plummer's progressiveness as they might if they had a decent sidewalk to travel on. As a business investment for the people of Plummer we believe such a sidewalk will bring the best kind of returns. In fact, we believe in it enough to be willing to contribute $10 towards the project. We spoke about this sidewalk to J. C. Parker, who is putting in the sawmill and he assured us he would be willing to give a fair donation. If the other business men come forward with reasonably fair-sized contributions we can have the sidewalk very soon.

Dan Lynch and J.J Walker returned on Saturday evening from their trip to Wyoming and other western points in search of land. They say that the so-called irrigated lands in Wyoming are absolutely worthless in their estimation. They went through part of Montana and South Dakota and found some good claims on which they filed, about thirty miles from Lemon, S. D.

On Wednesday this section of the country was visited with an unusually heavy rain accompanied with violent thunder and lightning and a wind that at times amounted to a heavy gale. So far as we can learn no damage was done in this vicinity. Further south the rain, was accompanied by heavy hail and the high wind drove the hail against windows in many places with disastrous effects to the glass.

Village Improvements.

The PIONEER'S suggestions concerning street lights and sidewalks seem to have stirred up things a little among the members of the council and the citizens generally. This is as it ought to be and we believe that attention will soon be given to these improvements. The exchanging of ideas pro and con will result in some good being accomplished. Practicalall are agreed that these improvements would be nice things, but they don't like the idea of being obliged to help pay for them.

Take for instance the proposed sidewalk to the creamery and sawmill. Different members of the council state that they are in favor of building it if the council could do so legally, and we have not yet heard any one say that it is not necessary. All agree that it would be a nice thing—But. We heard one man state that the farmers should do their full share with the village in building this sidewalk. Now, the average farmer who goes to the creamery goes there in his buggy and has no use for a sidewalk. If the rest of the people had no more use for it than the farmers we would not say a word about its being built as it would not be needed.

But the people in town can't ride down there in their wagon or buggy all the time; they must make the trip on foot and it is for the benefit of foot passengers that the walk would be built. It may be true that the business men of town placed the creamery where it stands. Can any of them say they contributed anything to bringing in the sawmill?

And if the business men did make donations for the benefit of the creamery, or the making of roads and bridges, were these donations not given for the reason that these things would bring the farmers to the business men with their trade and have they not done so. There is not a storekeeper in Plummer to-day who doesnt get his living from the farmers and most of them are getting a full share of the money earnad by the farmers, And they all require a profit on the goods they sell. We recently heard of one who made the claim that he had cleaned up over two thousand dollars during last year.

This may or may not be true, but if it is half true we would like to ask if the farmers have not been doing something for the business men?

There is no business man in Plummer who can get along without the farmers trade and we are of the opinion that it is no more than fair that the business men should, if called upon be willing to give a very small portion of their profits to anything that would be a source of convenience mostly to themselves and only incidentally to the farmers.

If the council wants to build this sidewalk we believe they have a perfect right to go ahead and do so. They have the money in the treasury in taxes levied before and not used. We are informed by the village clerk that there is about $400 in the Road and bridge Fund. This represents taxes levied in excess of the expenditures. The first installment of the taxes levied last year will be coming into the treasury within a few weeks and the tax-payers should know why they are paying their money when it is not spent for needed improvements. With this $400 in the treasury it looks as though the taxes for this sidewalk, and several more, were already levied and paid. The law does not provide for, nor allow, a village council to levy taxes for the purpose of keeping a big savings bank account, particularly when the savings draw no interest.

To sum this matter up the sidewalk is badly needed, not for the accomodation of the farmers, but for the benefit of the business men, visitors in the town, and the saw mill help.

The cost should be less than $150 and the necessary money is in the village treasury doing nothing.

Where there is no assessment to be levied against the abutting property the council, as we understand the law, has the right to lay any sidewalk or make any other improvement

This being the case there is no necessity for doing the work by subscription. It seems to be up to the council.

The Roof that Leaked.

Did you ever stop to consider the danger to human health and life as well as the discomfort and damage to property done by a leaking roof?

And then did you figure out the cheapest and best way to prevent the roof from leaking?

Lately we hear innumerable kicks about the high prices and poor quality of shingles and we must admit that there is room for kicks along these lines. Many have tried putting on iron roofs on their barns and granaries, but they find that they come high and without plenty good paint rust through in places in a very short time. So-called rubber roofings have been used considerably and have given good satisfaction, although many think the prices have been too high. Probably the prices have been too high. We know that often prices are charged that are unreasonably high for a poor grade of goods, and the average purchaser does not really understand the difference in the grades until he finds out by experience that the goods were not up the mark. This is true in almost any line of goods, but particularly true about roofing material.

The new "Underfelt" Roofing is the one kind on the market to-day that is specially designed to give the very best of wear and in price it is within the reach of all. It is made of the best wool felt obtainable thoroughly saturated with pure asphalt and a rubber-like composition. It is absolutely waterproof; will not crack; will not blister; will not run; will not catch fire from sparks or cinders. They are put up in various styles and weight and may be said to be a strictly first-class roof for any kind of buildings.

The PIONEER has some of this roofing on hand all the time and carries a complete line of samples of the various grades of this roofing as well as all kinds of building paper. We are content with a small margin of profit on these goods and we are ready to prove to the buyer's satisfaction that in point of prices we are lower than any other dealer in this part of the country. More than this, we invite prospective buyers to consult prices quoted by the mail order house and we will prove to them that we can and do give as good bargains in roofing as any Chicago mail order house, freight rates added to the cataloge prices. Any one who wants a good roof at botton prices is invited to call at this office and see the goods and prices. We will supply any buyer with a roof that is reliable. Our prices are so low and our margin of profit so small that we will sell for cash only. We want the business and we'll get it on our low prices and the merits of the goods.

Andrew Nelson, foreman for the Continental Bridge Co., arrived here from Minneapolis, on Monday last and went out to Garnes to begin the construction of the new bridge across the Clearwater river between Garnes and Mayfield. Mr. Nelson was here some weeks ago to do this work but the river was too high at that time. The work is being pushed along as quickly as possiable but the water is rather high yet.

That Representative George L. Lilley of Connecticut was not warranted in bringing charges against certain of his colleagues in the house and accredited members of the press, was the conclusion reached by the special committee named by Speaker Cannon to investigate methods employed by the Electric Boat company of New Jersey in connection with legislation before congress. The committee also charged Lilley with acting in bad faith and with being a tool of the Lake Torpedo Boat company.

St. Paul, May 14—Governor John A. Johnson was today made the candidate of his state for the presidential nomination by the Democratic party. Mid scenes of the wildest confusion and enthusiasm the boom of the Minnesotan was launched in a manner that indicates that the "Tall Pine" will have one state solidly behind him to the finish at the Denver convention.

It was a significant event, and its significance was realized by the representative body of Minnesota Democrats that filled the convention hall. Although insurrection was in the air and Bryan Democrats were standing about, ready to bolt if the order came, it was a Johnson convention through and through. His followers controlled the organization, dictated the names on the committees, wrote the resolution and placed the stamp of Johnson upon every move of the convention. The enthusiasm was conclusive.

The first cheers for Minnesota's executive came when Frank A. Day after working the delegates up to a high pitch by severely attacking the Bryan men in this state for what he called the villest attack that had ever been made in Minnesota politics, mentioned the name of Governor Johnson.

At the auditorium there was a picturesque sight. The different counties were assigned to their places designated by signs. Some of the delegates unable to find places on the main floor, were assigned to seats on the stage. The American colors were draped about the proscenium of the stage, and pictures of Governor Johnson and other Democratic leaders were in evidence. Band music added a light touch to the situation, and made the wait for the convention a delightful affair. The galleries were crowded, made up mostly of Bryan men of the different contesting delegations.

At the close of his address, Andrew Nelson, of Duluth, was chosen secretary of the convention, being escorted to the platform by Senator J. C. Hardy, of Ramsey county, and A. C. Weiss, publisher of the Duluth Herald. Delegate Wheaton, of Hennepin county, made the motion that the following be chosen as assistant secretaries to the convention. John Casey, of Todd county, and Fred Schilplin, of St. Cloud, and Frank Battley, of Ramsey county. The motion of Mr. Wheaton passed.

The Committees.

Resolutions — Chairman C. D. O'Brien, St. Paul.

Credentials—Chairman, Meyers J. Armson.

Organization—Chairman, Senator H. F. Weil, LeSueur.

The credentials committee voted unanimously to reject the contest of the Hennepin county Bryan men.

T. D. O'Brien, chairman of the committee on resolutions, came forward and presented its report. He stated that it had been signed by all except T. J. Knox of Jackson and W. J. Whipple of Winona. Mr. Knox presented the minority report and moved its adoption as an amendment.

The Platform.

We affirm our allegiance to the principles of the party of Jefferson and Jackson and pledge our entire and faithful support to the candidate for the presidency whom the national Democratic party in its wisdom shall select at the convention to be held in Denver next July.

We commend and indorse the honest, upright and efficient administration of public affairs of this state during the past four years. With the cooperation of the legislature and other public officers our wise and able executive has secured a system of taxation of high merit, the public resources have been conserved, the laws have been enforced and public duties discharged with efficiency and thoroughness.

We declare that the high protective tariff now maintained by the Republican party has made possible unlawful trusts and combinations, has destroyed the equilibrium which should exist between the producing classes, and is still the chief rampart behind which predatory wealth is intrenched.

We hold that while this condition remains unchanged the best efforts of prosecuting officers, courts and juries will be ineffectual to afford permanent relief from trust domination.

We therefore insist that the tariff be at once revised to meet these conditions, and that the revision be by the friends of the people rather than by the friends of the tariff.

Corporations.

The corporate form of oragnization has been freely used as a cloak to hide overcapitalization, reckless speculation and illegal business methods. Strict supervision and control of the great industrial enterprises and public service corporations is necessary for the continued welfare of the American people.

Railroads and Labor.

We recognize that the commercial and transportation business of the country cannot be transacted except through the instrumentality of large aggregations of capital, but that fact makes it more than ever necessary that the rights of the individual citizen should be zealously guarded. It is not only their right to do so, but it is necessary that those who labor with their hands should organize for their own protection. The demand of labor shall be granted for reasonable hours of work, for the compulsory adoption of safety appliances in connection with dangerous employments and for the modification of the rules of common law fixing the liability of the master for injuries to servant so that in the future our jurisprudence will guarantee to labor that the industry will bear the risk.

We favor progressive and practicable measures for the taxation of incomes, the establishment of postal savings banks, and safeguarding of bank deposits along lines suggested by William J. Bryan.

State and Nation.

We believe that the powers ceded to the federal government by the states through the constitution in its present form are ample. Notwithstanding the closer relations between the people which improved transportation has established, a too great centralization of power is as dangerous as when the constitution was framed.

The dangers to be apprehended from centralization of power are already apparent, for under autocratic leaderships congress has become inactive and no longer responds to the public will, while a bureaucratic form of government is being rapidly extended to a point which threatens the extinction of state autonomy.

In Governor John A. Johnson, Minnesota presents to the nation a Democratic candidate for president of ability, integrity, and honor, a constructive statesman, who holds no brief from any class, one who from early youth has been a wage earner, whose private life has been of such purity, vigor and earnestness as to win him the love, respect and confidence of all who know him. In public life he has by his virtue won the admiration of the people of his state and nation regardless of condition in life or political faith.

We therefore instruct our delegates to the national Democratic convention to vote as a unit for, and continue to so vote as long as necessary to secure the nomination of Hon. John A. Johnson as the candidate for president.

John Dwan of Two Harbors was recognized and read the names of those slated as delegates at large and alternates at large. There were to be four delegates at large, but in order to get all the big guns on the delegation, eight were selected and given a half vote each. This slate was accepted.

MAY BE TOO BUSY TO ADJOURN

CONGRESS MUST HURRY IF IT IS READY TO QUIT BY NEXT SATURDAY.

There is Considerable Work Yet Unfinished. The Currency, Ship Subsidies and Pension Agencies Not Settled.

Washington, May 22.—There is such a muddled condition with respect to a number of important measures that the chances for an adjournment of congress on Saturday were considered last night as hopeless. The opinion was expressed by Chairman Tawney of the appropriations committee that some active work must be done with several of the pending bills if an adjournment is reached by Wednesday night.

The prospects for unraveling the tangle over the currency question did not improve today, and Senator Aldrich is practically certain that there will be no action whatever. Even the plan for appointing a commission to consider the subject during the summer recess is in danger of failing.

A deadlock is on over the post-office appropriation bill, especially that provision inserted by the senate granting increased mail pay to American ships plying to South American ports, which is strongly urged by President Roosevelt. The house is resisting this item vigorously and there were intimations today that the senate will insist even to the extent of allowing the bill to fail rather than recede.

The contest over the plan for abolishing pension agencies in the different states is another source of worriment and no agreement can be reached between the two houses.

The prospect is that the bill relating to the Rainy river dam will go over until the short session of congress next winter. The house committee is insistent upon rejecting the proposition made by President Roosevelt regarding pay for the use of the water, and the president is equally insistent that this provision must be inserted. A canvass of the situation discloses that it is not certain the measure can be passed over the veto at this time.

The senate passed the public lands bill.

After Six Years of Misery and Wrong Treatment.

John A. Enders, of Robertson Avenue, Pen Argyl, Pa., suffered for six years with stinging pain in the back, violent headaches and dizzy spells, and was assured by a specialist that his kidneys were all right, though the secretions showed a reddish, brick-dust sediment. Not satisfied, Mr. Enders started using Doan's Kidney Pills. "The kidneys began to act more regularly," he says, "and in a short time I passed a few gravel stones. I felt better right away and since then have had no kidney trouble."

SEVERE HEMORRHOIDS

Sores, and Itching Eczema—Doctor Thought an Operation Necessary—Cuticura's Efficacy Proven.

"I am now 80 years old, and three years ago I was taken with an attack of piles (hemorrhoids), bleeding and protruding. The doctor said the only help for me was to go to a hospital and be operated on. I tried several remedies for months but did not get much help. During this time sores appeared which changed to a terrible itching eczema. Then I began to use Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, injecting a quantity of Cuticura Ointment with a Cuticura Suppository Syringe. It took a month of this treatment to get me in a fairly healthy state and then I treated myself once a day for three months and, after that, once or twice a week. The treatments I tried took a lot of money, and it is fortunate that I used Cuticura. J. H. Henderson, Hopkinton, N. Y., Apr. 26, 1907."

Suggestive.

Towne—There was a spelling-bee down at our church the other night. The pastor gave out the words. Did you hear about it?

Browne—No; was it interesting?

Towne—Rather. The first three words he gave out were "increase," "pastor," "salary."—Stray Stories.

Griefs That Die Unspoken.

Read what the singing women—one to ten thousand of the suffering women—tell us, and think of the griefs that die unspoken! Nature is in earnest when she makes a woman: and there are women enough lying in the next church yard with very commonplace blue slate stones at their head and feet, for whom it was just as true that "all sounds of life assumed one tone of love," as for Letitia Landon, of whom Elizabeth Browning said it; but she could give words to her grief, and they could not.—Holmes.

Not Such a Fool.

John was a Chinaman. He had been employed as a cook in a family in San Francisco. During many years he never failed to be at his post of duty. One morning, as usual, the family assembled for breakfast, but John was nowhere to be seen, nor did he send word what had happened to him. After several weeks he re-appeared with the symptoms of a severe cold still clinging to him. The master of the house greeted him by saying: "Well, John, we were wondering what had happened to you; but I see you have caught cold." John indignantly protested, saying: "Oh, no, sir; me no catchee coldie, me no such foolie; coldie comie to me."

FIT THE GROCER

Wife Made the Suggestion.

A grocer has excellent opportunity to know the effects of special foods on his customers. A Cleveland grocer has a long list of customers that have been helped in health by leaving off coffee and using Postum Food Coffee.

He says, regarding his own experience: "Two years ago I had been drinking coffee, and must say that I was almost wrecked in my nerves.

"Particularly in the morning I was so irritable and upset that I could hardly wait until the coffee was served, and then I had no appetite for breakfast, and did not feel like attending to my store duties.

"One day my wife suggested that inasmuch as I was selling so much Postum there must be some merit in it and suggested that we try it. I took home a package and she prepared it according to directions. The result was a very happy one. My nervousness gradually disappeared, and today I am all right. I would advise everyone afflicted in any way with nervousness or stomach troubles, to leave off coffee and use Postum Food Coffee." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

The Haunted Stairway

By Temple Bailey

(Copyright.)

The stairway rose between walls of solid masonry for 20 stories. It was never used. Indeed it might be questioned if the men and women who shot up and down in the elevators knew of any other mode of ascent or descent.

It was very still on the stairway and rather dim and dark, and gradually it acquired a bad name.

At last a murder was committed on the tenth landing. The murderer was not apprehended and this fact added to the terrors of the stairway. Before a month had passed it was called haunted, and men whom no one would have counted superstitious moved their offices to other buildings.

Finally the matter began to attract the attention of the owners. Many of the offices were empty and the rentals were falling off.

"It's got to stop," said Brixton & Brixton; and they put in more electric lights and hired watchmen to patrol the stairway.

But, after a week's trial, the watchman threw up his job. Three other watchmen came and went, and at last Moran, the janitor, was detailed to succeed them. Moran's resignation came in the succinct statement: "Nixie for me."

Brixton, senior, struck his clenched hand impatiently on his desk.

"Such foolishness, Moran," he said.

"That may be, sor," Moran agreed; "but ye'll have to git another man."

Later Brixton, senior, sent for him and put him on the elevator service. It was getting a little hard to keep elevator boys, and Moran was trustworthy, if he was superstitious.

Again a succession of watchmen came, and went.

Brixton & Brixton consulted a detective agency. "It's ruining our business," they said. "Find out who is playing us such a trick."

From the agency came men, two at a time. It grew to be a most unpopular assignment.

"Good lord," said Giffens, who was on duty the fifth week, "I keep seeing that poor fellow on the stairs with the sun shining in on him. I wonder how he happened to be down so far; his office was on the top floor."

They were on the fatal landing. A broad, deep window overlooked the other skyscrapers in the block and showed row after row of twinkling yellow lights, and above them all, the moon, pale in contrast to the glitter and glow of the city night. Moran had made his last trip for the night. The three men stood looking out.

Suddenly a wailing cry to a mournful, lilting measure reached their ears.

"Somebody's singin'," Giffens gasped.

The three Irishmen clung together. "It's Killarney."

"Who's singin' it?" Murphy's bravado was gone.

"My God!" Moran said, "there was a little gurryl in Brown's office—Kate O'Neill—on the sixt' floor used to sing—like that. I heard her one time—"

"Where's she now?" Giffens asked.

"She wint away last spring," Moran said.

Next day Moran found himself irresistibly drawn toward the haunted landing. It was the noon hour and Giffens and Murphy had gone to lunch. Moran didn't want any lunch. The affair of the night before had upset him, and the plaintive tones of Kate O'Neill still rang in his heart.

Six steps down from the tenth floor and around a curve was the landing, and Moran, following the curve, stopped short, staring.

With her back to him, a woman stood looking out of the window.

She turned at the sound of Moran's footsteps.

"It's me," she said. "I've come back."

"Kate O'Neill!" gasped Moran.

"Yes. I've been in the hospital. I've been sick."

Moran went up to her.

"Katie," he said, "was you here las' night?"

She looked at him, wide-eyed.

"No," she said, "I was in the hospital. I lef' there this mornin'."

"My God!" said Moran.

She shivered.

"What's the matter?" she asked sharply.

"We heard you singin'—me and two—other men. You was singin' 'Killarney.'"

Her hand was over her heart, her eyes dark with horror.

"What am I going to do?" she cried, "what am I going to do? I dream that I come here, and go up and down, and up and down the stairway—and there is no rest."

She paused and went on, white-lipped: "Maybe—it isn't a dream—maybe it's true—maybe—I do come—maybe I do—"

Her voice died away in a whisper. Moran stood spellbound.

"'Twas likely the wind," he said. Then, suspiciously: "Why did you come?"

Wearily she condemned herself. "You know—I killed him."

"You!" Moran reeled against the window and caught at the sill.

"I used to come here and sit," she went on, presently. "I came every day and ate my lunch, because it was quiet and no one ever came up the stairway. But one day—he came—" She hesitated, "I was singin'—"

Moran bent forward, listening eagerly.

"He stooped and spoke, and he was nice and pleasant. And after that he used to come at noon, often, and I liked him, and he would bring things and we would eat lunch together—oysters and birds—I think he was rich. No one ever saw us, for no one ever comes up and down the stairway."

"I told him about my old granny, and how I had left her when I was a child, and how I had been alone in this country since my brother died, and that no home would ever be to me like the little house in the old country with the lake behind it and the low line of hills in front, and sometimes I would sing, and he would listen and plan to take me across the water some day. An' by that time I thought a lot of him, and I'd 'a' gone anywhere with him—" Her hands were clasped tensely, her little face was working with emotion.

"He used to bring me presents and put them behind that piece of broken tiling. He dug a hole with his knife in the plaster underneath and I'd find things there. One day I found a magazine on the window-sill with a paper-knife across it to hold it down, and between the leaves were $100 in bills, and he was watching me around the curve, and when I opened the book and found the money he came out laughin', and said it was to get my new things with. 'We're goin' to sail next week,' he said, 'just you and me,' and he laughed some more.

"But I shook my head and told him that I couldn't take money from him until after we were married. 'After we are married,' I said, 'you can give me anything.' I thought he looked queer at that, and he was leaning over me very pale, and he said: 'Kate, little Kate O'Neill, I can't marry you.' And I said, 'Why not?' and he said: 'I've got a wife. But I'll do anything for you—I'll make you happy, but I can't marry you.'

"I had the paper-knife in my hand, and the next I knew he was lying there on the floor in the sunshine—"

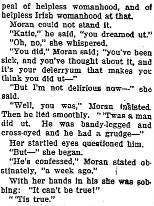
In the shuddering silence Moran whispered: "My God!"

"I ran upstairs with the knife in my hand and the book and the $100. I don't see why somebody didn't find them. They're in my desk. I put them there and went on working, and when I got back to my boarding place that night I fainted, and they sent me to the hospital—and—and that's all—"

She sank down on a step and looked up at the tall young man silhouetted against the background of blazing sunlight.

"I don't know what to do," she said, with quivering lips.

Her blue eyes held in them the appeal of helpless womanhood, and of helpless Irish womanhood at that.



"I've Got a Wife."

Moran could not stand it.

"Katie," he said, "you dreamed ut."

"Oh, no," she whispered.

"You did," Moran said; "you've been sick, and you've thought about it, and it's your delerryum that makes you think you did ut—"

"But I'm not delirious now—" she said.

"Well, you was," Moran insisted. Then he lied smoothly. "'Twas a man did ut. He was bandy-legged and cross-eyed and he had a grudge—"

Her startled eyes questioned him.

"But—" she began.

"He's confessed," Moran stated obstinately, "a week ago."

With her hands in his she was sobbing: "It can't be true!"

"'Tis true."

"Oh, I don't know what to do—"

Moran held her hands tightly for a moment, looking down at her with a shadow in his eyes.

"You'd best go," Moran said, hoarsely. "Go up and take the elevator on the next floor."

When the two detectives reached the landing they found Moran leaning negligently against the window, looking out.

"Murphy thinks we ought to look up that O'Neill girl," Giffens said.

"Ah, gwan," Moran said, as he set his shoulders squarely. "Ye couldn't hunt a little gurryl wid eyes like blue lakes. Ye're two things before ye're hard-hearted insthruments of the law—"

"An' what's that?" asked Giffens.

"Ye're men—"

"An'?"

"Ye're Oirish," finished Moran, succinctly.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

State's Earnings.

Minneapolis—Receipts at the various state institutions for April as reported to State Auditor Iverson by the state board of control aggregated $31,990.63. This amount includes $15,582.34 from the twine and hemp plant at the state prison, and $1,353.39 from the sanatorium for consumptives at Walker. The receipts at this institution since it was opened in January now aggregate $3,224.76. ### Postoffice Appropriations.

Washington—The Minneapolis public building bill passed the house without change, carrying with it the authorization of a $100,000 appropriation and a $500,000 limit of cost of the new Minneapolis postoffice. Congressman Frank M. Nye expressed satisfaction at the appropriation.

Other Minnesota and Dakota appropriations authorized in the bill are: For enlargement: Alexandria, $29,000; Crookston, $25,000; New Ulm, $20,000; Sioux Falls, S. D., $50,000.

For buildings and sites: Austin, $50,000; Brainerd, $45,000; Rochester, $50,000; Faribault, $50,000; Virginia, $60,000; Willmar, $50,000; Bismarck, N. D., $150,000; Minot, N. D., $125,000; Huron, S. D., $65,000.

For sites: Moorhead, $5,000; Rapid City, S. D., $7,500.

Slept Three Days.

Long Prairie—Miss Amanda Peterson, who recently came from Sweden to the home of a sister who lives a few miles from this city, has slept for three nights and three days, and all efforts of doctors to awaken her have been futile. Her sister heard a noise in the girl's room Tuesday night, and upon investigation found the girl raving and demented. For an hour members of the family struggled with Miss Peterson in an effort to keep her from doing herself injury, and finally she sank into quiet slumber. Since then she has not awakened, and she was brought to a local hospital, where further efforts were made to arouse her, but without success.

Suicide.

Avoca—The body of Mrs. Ole Rakness, who disappeared from her home here two weeks ago, was found floating in the lake near town. On the night of her disappearance a number of neighbors spent the evening at the Rakness home. After their departure she suddenly disappeared and it now seems that she went directly to the lake, where she waded in beyond her depth. The cause of her suicide is attributed to poor health, which brought on temporary insanity.

A number of years ago her father committed suicide by hanging himself, shortly after which her brother drowned himself in an old well.

No Reduction.

St. Paul—The state tax commission denied the application of the United States Steel corporation and the independent iron mining companies for abatement on the assessments of their properties aggregating about $45,000,000. The applications were submitted to the tax commission after their allowance had been approved by the county commissioners of the counties in which the properties are located, but after fully considering the matter the commission turned them down.

Stricken When on Roof.

Winona—Peter Milkowski, 64 years old, while seated on the ridge-pole of his house, shingling the roof, succumbed to paralysis of the heart and fell to the ground. He was killed instantly. The body was found some time later, rigidly upright, with the hammer held as it was in driving the last nail. Milkowski was one of the earliest Polish pioneers in this city.

NEWS NOTES.

Crookston—Farmers sat with the county commissioners here and had a long drawn out fight over the division of a school district in the towns of Brandt and Helgeland in this county. The new school district was finally set off.

Minneapolis.—The attraction at the Bijou the week of May 25 will be "The Cow Puncher," a play of western ranch life, which made a decided hit here last year with Bijou patrons. It was written by the well known playwright, Hal Reid, and produced by W. F. Mann. It is a western drama of the highest order, and tells the story of a young eastern girl whose brother dies, leaving her a ranch in Arizona.

Washington—A certificate has been issued by the controller of the currency authorizing the First National Bank of Deer River, Minn., to commence business with a capital of $25,000.

WENT HIM MANY BETTER.

Mr. Newrich's Visiting Card Left Friend In the Shade.

Mr. Newrich, the dust contractor, having made a fortune, part of which he had invested in house property in the east of London, wished to rise, like a Phoenix, from his ashes into some sort of society. His golden key, applied to the coffers of an impecunious aristocrat, opened the way.

His new friend, among other things, advised him that visiting cards were a necessity, and, as a guide to drawing one up ready for the printer, handed him one of his own, which read, "Harold De Vere, Iona House, Portsmouth Square, W."

Two days later, as De Vere was sitting in his dressing room at breakfast, a servant brought in on a salver a visiting card bearing the following: "Ephraim Newrich, I Own 23 Houses, London, E."

If an Advertisement Convinces You, Stay Convinced

When you read in this newspaper the advertisement of a manufacturer who has paid for the space used to convince you that it is to your interest to buy his goods, and you go to a dealer where such articles are usually handled for sale, do not let the dealer or any one of his clerks sell you something else which he claims is "just as good." If an advertisement convinced you, it was because of the element of truth which it contained.

De Organ's Busted.

In a little church in Maryland, not far from Washington, the motive power for the organ comes from the strong arm of an industrious Irishman.

During a recent service there the choir got into trouble and, to cap the climax, during the confusion that ensued, the organ suddenly stopped.

The situation was not greatly relieved when there came floating out into the auditorium a hoarse whisper: "Sing, all youse! Sing like the divil! De organ's busted.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

MARK TWAIN ON MONEY.

Humorist Points Out What He Considers Some Wrong Conceptions.

Mark Twain said that the financial panic has caused a wrong idea of the use and value of money.

"The spendthrift says that money, being round, was made to roll. The miser says that, being flat, it was made to stack up. Both are wrong.

"Strangely wrong, too, in their ideas about money are the veteran Australian gold diggers. These simple old fellows, though worth perhaps a half million or more, live in the simple dug-outs and shanties of their lean early days.

"Once, lecturing, I landed at an Australian port. There was no porter in sight to carry my luggage. Seeing a rough-looking old fellow leaning against a post with his hands in his pockets, I beckoned to him and said:

"'See here, if you carry these bags up to the hotel I'll give you half a crown.'

"The man scowled at me. He took three or four gold sovereigns from his pocket, threw them into the sea, scowled at me again, and walked away without a word."

USED HIS RAZOR.

Lars Enstrom Slashed His Throat and Wrists But Still Lives.

On Wednesday morning Lars Enstrom, a farmer living a short distance northwest of Plummer, slashed his throat and both wrists with a razor during a fit of despondency brought on by long and serious illness. He is a bachelor about 55 years of age and has lived on his farm for about ten years. He has been suffering from a combination of stomach and kidney troubles for years and lately has been very ill. During the past three weeks he has suffered greatly and slept but little on account of the pain he endured. On Tuesday Knut Steen, who lives close by, was over to Enstrom's place and helped him attend to some business matters. On returning home Mr. Steen notified Anton Lee, one of the town board, that Mr. Enstrom was a very sick man. On Wednesday morning Mr. Lee went to see Enstrom but on arriving at the house he could not be found. Mr. Lee went to the barn and inquired of a boy who was taking care fo the cows as to where Mr. Enstrom had gone and was told that he had gone out in the grove near the house some time before. Mr. Lee and the boy went in search of Enstrom and found him lying in the grove unconscious with the razor on the ground close by. There was several ugly gashes in his throat and in both wrists, and the blood had already stopped flowing from the wounds. Finding that the man was still alive Mr. Lee hurried to town for Dr. Clark who responded promptly and dressed the wounds. For a time Enstrom hovered between life and death with the chances all against him but gradually rallied so that he regained full consciousness, but could recall nothing of what he had done.

Relatives at Crookston were notified by telephone and on Thursday morning a nephew, John Enstrom, came here and took charge of the sick man. He was then sufficiently recovered to be able to be removed to Thief River Falls where he is now receiving care in the hospital. It is now thought that he will recover from his wounds.

EQUALITY ECHOES.

Little Child Drowned In Pond. Talk of New Creamery.

A week ago a little child of Mr. and Mrs. Torger Bjones was drowned in a pond close to their home. The funeral was held from the United Lutheran Church at Ardal. People should be more careful about about leaving holes or wells open for little children to fall into. Many others might be drowned the same as this little child.

Now again there is talk of building a new creamery some place along the new ditch, and located so as to adjoin the towns of Johnson, Equality and Chester. It would be a good place to have a creamery there as there would be a splendid road east and west and also good drainage, and they are two most essential things for a creamery. But it would be a little close to the other creameries and one of them would be liable to go bankrupt. One agent said it should be built big enough for a thousand cows.

Rain to-day; rain yesterday; rain last week and two weeks ago. No wonder there is lots of water and bad roads.

I think most of the wheat and oats is in the ground, but I am afraid that some of it will drown out, especially if we get warm weather before the water is gone.

Ole Aakhes was here to-day and he says they can go in slippers and not get their feet wet on the South side of the big ditch where before there used to be one or two feet of water. Ahead of the ditch it is flooding very bad.

Deer Park Doings.

Assessor Thor Lande has been busy this week rounding up the taxpayers.

The Kratka creamery is now completed and will begin to receive cream this week.

There will quite likely be two June weddings in Deer Park. Can you guess who?

What has become of all the telephone agitators? Has the heavy rains delayed any further progress.

There will be a grand Fourth of July celebration at Highlanding this year according to the Sunbeam.

Just noticed in one of the Minneapolis papers the other day a sure cure for Rats—just administer a small dose of "snuff" and the work is done. It is said that it works fully as well on young boys between the ages of 6 and 15 years. The difference is they need a double dose.

The Highlanding creamery is doing a good stroke of business already and new patrons are being added every cream day, some of them comming as far as 14 miles. Cream days reminds us of the old wheat-hauling days in the fall. There is nothing but teams as far as you can see.

Our better half has been very busy gathering in eggs, nailing up boxes and putting hens to bed ever since the snow began to go and the other day she told us that she had now succeeded in bringing out "four wee, tiny, little shavers" in the form of spring chicks. What sucess she will have with them remains to be told yet, and most likely they will all turn out to be "roosters" at that.

CURRENCY BILL AGREED UPON

CONFEREES CONSENT TO PLAN COMBINING VREELAND AND ALDRICH MEASURES.

Everything Points to Speedy Action. Senate and House Expected to Pass the Bill and Adjourn for the Summer.

Washington, May 27.—A tentative agreement was reached last night on currency legislation. Conferences which continued all day, participated in by Senators Aldrich, Hale and Allison and Representatives Vreeland, Burton and Weeks resulted in the formation of a plan which contemplates the union of the Vreeland and Aldrich bill with the latter dominant.

The main feature of the Vreeland bill, which permits banks in different sections of the country to organize clearing house associations and issue asset currency, is retained, but the limit of such currency is cut from $750,000,000 to $200,000,000. The issue of bond-secured currency by individual banks is then provided for, to a limit of $300,000,000, such currency to be based on state, municipal and county bonds and to be issued under authority of the secretary of the treasury.

This agreement will be submitted to the full conference committee of the house at 10 o'clock this morning and if agreed to there, it will go to the senate before noon.

The possibility of currency legislation depends upon the acceptance by house of the compromise which has been practically dictated by the senate. If it is accepted the bill will be passed and adjournment follow at at once.

The senate leaders have evidently taken full advantage of the feeling which prevails in the house, that unless some emergency currency measure is passed it will be difficult to elect a Republican house this fall. In the conference which concluded last night the senate conferees stood firmly for the incorporation of the main feature of the Aldrich bill, and succeeded in making it dominate in the compromise measure.

FACTIONS HAVE LINED UP.

North Dakota Primary Filings Are Completed.

Bismarck, N. D., May 27.—All entries for the political race at the primaries closed Monday through the state. The race in the Republican ranks is pretty well defined, there being two candidates for each office, one stalwart and one insurgent, except in the case of the attorney general and railroad commissioners, there being three candidates for the former and nine for the latter to fill three places. The Democrats have filed complete lists of candidates except for the office of state superintendent and judge of the supreme court.

The hanging took place in the yard of the Schuylkill county prison and about 500 persons were present.

Would Need to Lay in Supplies for Student Guest.

"Lawyer Hummel entertained us with his brilliant conversation on the Lusitania," said a tourist.

"Hummel had one night in the smoking room an argument with a terribly scarred German about education.

"'There's nothing like our German students. You can't get away from that,' the German boasted, and his face, all slashed from corps duels, beamed with pride.

"'No, you're right,' said Hummel. 'I once visited a German student in Heidelberg. As we conversed on dueling in the students' sitting room a waiter knocked, entered and said politely:

"'"The landlord of the Keg presents his compliments and wishes to know if you are thinking of stepping across this evening, sir?"

"'"What does he want to know that for?" the student inquired.

"'"Because, sir, if you don't," said the waiter, "it will scarcely be worth while to tap a fresh barrel to-day."'"

NO SKIN LEFT ON BODY.

For Six Months Baby Was Expected to Die with Eczema—Now Well —Doctor Said to Use Cuticura.

"Six months after birth my little girl broke out with eczema and I had two doctors in attendance. There was not a particle of skin left on her body, the blood oozed out just anywhere, and we had to wrap her in silk and carry her on a pillow for ten weeks. She was the most terrible sight I ever saw, and for six months I looked for her to die. I used every known remedy to alleviate her suffering, for it was terrible to witness. Dr. C—— gave her up. Dr. B—— recommended the Cuticura Remedies. She will soon be three years old and has never had a sign of the dread trouble since. We used about eight cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment. James J. Smith, Durmid, Va., Oct. 14 and 22, 1906."

"About 12 years ago I received a sample bottle of your Liniment but never had occasion to use it, as I have always been well, but something told me that Sloan's Liniment would help me, so I tried it. After the second application I could get up out of bed, and in three days could walk, and now feel well and entirely free from pain.

"My friends were very much surprised at my rapid recovery and I was only too glad to tell them that Sloan's Liniment was the only medicine I used."

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Fight for Life.

Crookston—Pinned between a boat and a boom stick in the midst of the wild Red Lake river rapids in the cut-off four miles south of Thief River Falls, Billy Lee, a well-known lumberman and log driver of the north country, fought for two hours for his life.

Twenty-four rivermen boarded a boat belonging to John McCoy and William Flynn just above the cut-off to be taken to the wanegan a short distance down the river to dinner. While trying to work across the river in the quieter stream, the boat became unmanageable and shot into the swift sixty-mile current of the cut-off rapids. The boat capsized and all the passengers were thrown into the water.

All but Lee managed to get out, but he was pinned between the lumber boom and the boat. He held the boat away from him by main force for two hours while the vessel was cut entirely in two, freeing him.

Taxation of Ore.

Duluth—Ore taken from underground mines and stored in stock piles awaiting shipment is taxable as personal property, according to an opinion given the state tax commission by George W. Peterson, assistant attorney general. The opinion holds that when the ore is severed from the land it ceases to be realty and becomes personalty.

The objection raised by the companies operating underground mines was that under the present system of assessing the ore in stock piles they are really subjected to a double taxation. The tax commission requested an opinion of the attorney general as to whether the statute relating to the subject would permit of an interpretation of the minerals in the stock piles as a part of the real property belonging to the company.

Beaten by a Burglar.

St. Paul—William Beck, 70 years of age, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. W. Beck, were choked and badly beaten by a burglar who broke into the shoe store of W. Beck, Jr., 683 East Third street, and stole two pairs of shoes. Mrs. Beck was knocked down by a blow and choked, the robber leaving his finger marks on her throat. Mr. Beck was struck to the floor with a fierce blow in the face and then kicked.

Father and daughter clung tenaciously to the burglar, but he managed to escape from their grasp by slipping out of his coat. He also left his hat behind, but he managed to take with him two pairs of shoes.

Paid Up.

St. Paul—The account of John A. McDermott, former state oil inspector, was closed by the payment to Attorney General E. T. Young of $4,705.20, the additional shortage reported in his accounts as a result of the second examination by Public Examiner Schaefer.

The first report gave the shortage as $6,199, and stated that this amount had been paid back to the state. The money was paid to the present oil inspector, W. E. McEwen, who included the payments in his monthly reports of collections in the department. The payment made by Thomas McDermott, the former inspector's brother, closes this account.

No $100 Exemption.

St. Paul—The attention of the assessors throughout the state has been called by the tax commission to the law which provides that where no returns of personal property are made to the assessor the usual $100 exemption shall not be allowed.

This law has been generally disregarded, but assessors have been instructed to see that it is enforced. The law provides that the allowance shall be made only when returns are made.

The assessors have also been directed to list all personal property in the various classes and not in lump sums.

Protect Game.

Hibbing—The Hibbing Commercial club has taken vigorous action in the matter of protecting the fish and game of this section. His name is William Weaver, and he pleaded guilty in municipal court as a result of the action of the Commercial club, and was fined.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

"Yes, sir."

An Indignant Editor.

Last Saturday evening after sewing two patches on our Sunday trousers and cleaning and pressing them we hung them out to dry. An hour later we found that they had been stolen. This will explain why we were not in our accustomed place in church on Sunday. The human being who will deliberately steal a pair of trousers from the editor of a weekly paper, and knowing that they are his only pair for church-going, deserves a worse fate than our indignation will allow us to mention. It seems to us as if civilization had been turned back half a century.—Hometown (Pa.) Banner.

The Young Idea.

"How many seed compartments are there in an apple?" he asked. No one answered. "And yet," continued the school inspector, "all of you eat many an apple in the course of a year and see the fruit every day, probably. You must learn to notice the little things in nature."

The talk of the inspector impressed the children, and at recess the teacher overheard them discussing it. A little girl, getting her companions around her, gravely said:

"Now, children, just suppose I am Mr. Taylor. You've got to know more about common things. If you don't you'll all grow up to be fools. Now tell me, Minnie," she continued, looking sternly at a playmate, "how many feathers are there on a hen?"

DR. TALKS OF FOOD

Pres. of Board of Health.

"What shall I eat?" is the daily inquiry the physician is met with. I do not hesitate to say that in my judgment a large percentage of disease is caused by poorly selected and improperly prepared food. My personal experience with the fully-cooked food, known as Grape-Nuts, enables me to speak freely of its merits.

"From overwork, I suffered several years with malnutrition, palpitation of the heart and loss of sleep. Last summer I was led to experiment personally with the new food, which I used in conjunction with good rich cow's milk. In a short time after I commenced its use, the disagreeable symptoms disappeared, my heart's action became steady and normal, the functions of the stomach were properly carried out and I again slept as soundly and as well as in my youth.

"I look upon Grape-Nuts as a perfect food, and no one can gainsay but that it has a most prominent place in a rational, scientific system of feeding. Any one who uses this food will soon be convinced of the soundness of the principle upon which it is manufactured and may thereby know the facts as to its true worth." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

THE MOTHER'S LAMENT.

My son, and only one, was battle slain,
And he was all the world, and more, to me;
I gave him at my country's sacred fane,
When Sherman marched his legions to the sea.

In danger's threat'ning cloud, at country's call,
He left my side, and parting said to me:
"If in the battle, mother, I should fall,
My country and her God will care for thee."

And now, throughout the fair and blessed land,
On love-ordained and sweet Memorial day,
We go, a flower-laden, faithful band,
To spread on hero graves the bloom of May.

But for my soldier-boy that solace is not mine;
Within a southern vale, afar, he sleeps,
And in my heart is twined the myrtle vine,
For him, and there rosemary droops and weeps.

AT A PATRIOT'S GRAVE

Grandmother's Memorial Day Speech

By DORA OLIPHANT COE.

GRANDMOTHER ADAMSON had reached into the depths of her rose-sprigged bandbox, but just as her fingers touched the stiff ruching in the front of her best bonnet her attention was arrested by a ring at the front door. As though suddenly petrified in her stooping position, grandmother waited while Susan Ann, her daughter, creaked through the passage way leading from the kitchen.

At the first words of greeting grandmother straightened with a snap like a jack-knife, and an angry color flamed on her cheeks.

"Why, Marthy Ellen, what lovely roses! Did you ever see the flowers so handsome as they are this year? Come right in. It's dreadful hot, ain't it? Seems like I never knowed it to warm up as early as it has this season, but, then, it's been awful fine for the flowers. 'Pears like the roses and laylocks and pinies has just tried theirselves to see who could do the most bloomin'. Now, that's a pretty idee, ain't it, Mrs. Rayburn, that laylock wreath?"

"Yes; laylocks was Dick's favorite flower, and he set this bush out hissel, and I thought I'd make a wreath to hang on the cross on his tombstun."

The expression on Grandmother Adamson's face would have made a good study. From a blaze of anger it passed through all the stages of horrified scorn to a stony determination.

The development of the conversation beyond the paper-covered board walls collected her nebulous chaotic emotions into a stern resolve.

Susan Ann was stout, and she had grieved all the morning over the long walk to the graveyard. As she sank ponderously into a chair, she lamented:

"I get heavier on my feet every day I live, and the heat to-day is just awful on me. If mother hadn't had her heart so set on it, I wouldn't try to go to the cemetery. I just know I'll be sick."

"Couldn't she walk up with us?" Mrs. Rayburn asked. "We'll not walk fast."

"Oh, mother's as spry on her feet as you be. I hadn't thought of her goin' with any one else, but I don't see why she couldn't. It'd be a real help. She ain't got nothin' to carry, for she took a big basket of flowers up this morning, before breakfast. She's just that wrapped up in Decoration day I couldn't disappoint her about goin'. She's gettin' ready now. I'll go and see if it'll be all right."

But grandmother, with what was almost one movement, had stooped forward and slipped off her congress gaiters, at the same time taking from its box her bonnet. She slipped a hand through the round handle of a little basket and scurried down the passageway and out through the back door. On the step she delayed just long enough to put on her shoes; then, with her best bonnet carried more carelessly than ever before in its dozen years of use, she hurried out through the back gate.

The cemetery was being made bright with flowers when grandmother passed through the iron gateway, and her face hardened as she recognized some of the stooping figures and the graves over which they bent.

At a brilliantly-decked mound she stopped and, kneeling, said:

"I hate to do it, Jeremiah, but I know you'd want me to. I won't take them to any one else, though, Jeremiah, though I know you'd say fur me to, if you was here. But dearie, I've keered fur these things ever sence they was buds, jest as tender as if they'd a b'en babies, and jest so's you could have them to-day, and I jest can't see any one else have 'em. How would you like to look over these posies and see that laylock wreath a-hangin' on old Dick Rayburn's tombstun? You fought, bled and died almost fur nothin', Jeremiah, when that old copperhead gits jest as many flowers as you do."

Grandmother had turned up the skirt of her black alpaca dress and, into the receptacle thus formed, had put every flower that had lain on Jeremiah's grave. She carried them all over to a far corner of the cemetery and buried them under a pile of last year's leaves. Then she went back to the bare mound.

Soon the faraway notes of "Cover Them Over with Beautiful Flowers," told that the procession was coming. Grandmother heard, but she did not once lift her eyes. She sat directly upon the middle of the grave, her skirts spread as far as they would over the flowerless mound, and she was knitting as calmly as if she were seated on a little splint-bottomed chair in her own room. She paid no attention to the astonished group that stopped before her.

"Ahem!" coughed the master of ceremonies, Henry Blake.

Grandmother looked up. "Howdedo, Henry." Then, looking down again, "one, two, three, widen; one, two, three, turn."

"We've come to decorate Comrade Adamson's grave," hesitated the puzzled Blake.

"Comrade Adamson's grave don't need no decoratin'—five, six, narrow; one, two—"

"You hain't forgot it's Decoration day, have you?" questioned the man.

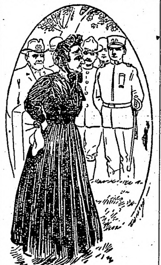
"If I have, I've been the only one that has." A flourish of her needle indicated the flower-decked mounds.

"But Comrade Adamson was a hero, and he—"

"Because he was a hero is why I don't want him decorated. That's the only way to distinguish him from them as ain't heroes."

With a little sweep of her skirts, grandmother rose to her feet.

"It's jest because Jeremiah was a hero that his grave ain't goin' to be strewed with flowers jest like the ones where the babies and copperheads lies. The babies might a-growed up to be heroes, if they'd had a chanst, but they didn't, and they's three hundred and sixty-four and a quarter other days in the year to decorate their graves in. It's almost a insult to—to—



"THERE AIN'T NO MEMORIAL DAY NO MORE."

"Well, this day don't mean nothin' no more. It used to be set apart that we might honor the nation's dead, but the day, like me and some of the others here, has outlived our usefulness and our time. Let it be Decoration day, if you want to, but don't call it Memorial day any more. It's just a holiday for the young folks to have ball games and picnics, and the older folks to put flowers on the graves of their dead.

"Jest look through them trees. Can you tell which is the graves of soldiers who fought, bled, and died for this beautiful country? If this day was what it was named fur, there wouldn't be a flower in this hull graveyard exceptin' on a soldier's grave. I reckon it's little enough we do, even when we set aside a whole day out of a year to them as give their hull lives, and mighty promisin' lives some of 'em was, too.

"Take your flowers. Put 'em on any grave you happen to see. It don't matter. This is jest Decoration day. There ain't no Memorial day no more."—Los Angeles Times.

Memorial Day.

No pages of a nation's history are more interesting to its people than those which record the brave deeds of its soldiery and no nation on the face of the earth has established so beautiful a custom as that which is contemplated by Memorial day, the strewing of spring flowers over the graves of her departed soldiers.

May the full meaning of the day come to us with all its solemnity and all its beauty, and with the patriotic lesson it presents.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Drainage Bill is Now Law.

The much talked of drainage bill has been passed by Congress and was approved on the 20th inst. As the people in this part of the state are very much interested we give below the full text of the bill as it was passed and approved;

[PUBLIC—No. 125.]
[H. R. 19541.]

An act to authorize the drainage of certain lands in the State of Minnesota.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all lands in the State of Minnesota, when subject to entry, and all entered lands for which no final certificates have issued, are hereby made and declared to be subject to all of the provisions of the laws of said State relating to the drainage of swamp or overflowed lands for agricultural purposes to the same extent and in the same manner in which lands of a like character held in private ownership are or may be subject to said laws: Provided, That the United States and all persons legally holding unpatented lands under entries made under the public land laws of the United Statss are accorded all the rights, privileges, and benefits given by said laws to persons holding lands of a like character in private ownership.

SEC. 2. That the cost of constructing canals, ditches, and other drainage works incured in connection with any drainage project under said laws shall be equitably apportioned among all lands held in private ownership, all lands covered by unpatented entries, and all unentered public lands affected by such project; and officially certified lists showing the amount of the charges assessed against each smallest legal subdivision of such lands shall be furnished to the register and receiver of the land district in which the lands affected are located as soon as said charges are assessed, but notqing in this act shall be construed as creating any obligation on the United States to pay any of said charges.

SEC. 3. That all charges legally assessed may be enforced against any unentered lands, or against any lands covered by an unpatented entry, by the sale of such lands subject to the same manner and under the same proceedings under which such charges would be enforced against lands held in private ownership.

SEC. 4. That when any unentered lands, or any lands covered by an unpatented entry, have been sold in the manner mentioned in this act, a statement of such sale showing the price at which each legal subdivision was sold shall be offcially certified to the register and receiver immediately after the completion of such sale.

SEC. 5. That at any time after any sale of unentered lands has been made in the manner and for the purposes mentioned in this act patent shall issue to the purchaser thereof upon payment to the receiver of the minimum price of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, or such other prices as may have been fixed by law for such lands, together with the usal fees and commissons charged in entry of like lands under the homestead laws. But purchasers at a sale of unentered lands shall have the qualification of homestead entrymen and not more than one hundred and sixty acres of such lands shall be sold to any one purchaser under the provisions of this act. This limitation shall not apply to sales to the State but shall apply to purchases from the State of unentered lands bid in for the State. Any part of the purchase money arising from the sale of any lands in the manner and for the purposes provided in this act which shall be in excess of the payments herein required and of the total drainage charges assessed against such lands shall also be paid to the receiver before patent is issued.

SEC. 6. That any unpatented lands sold in the manner and for the purpose mentioned in this act may be patented to the purchaser thereof at any time after the expiration of the period of redemption provided for in the drainage laws uuder which it may be sold (there having been no redemption) upon the payment to the receiver of the fees and commissions and the price mentioned in the preceding section, or so much thereof as has not already been paid by the entryman; and if the sum received at any such sale shall be in excess of the payments herein required and of the drainage assessments and cost of the sale, such excess shall be paid to the proper county officer for the benefit of and payment to the entryman. That unless the purchasers of unentered lands shall within ninety days after the sale provided for in section three, pay to the proper receiver the fees, commissions and purchase price to which the United States may be entitled as provided in section five, and unless the purchasers of entered lands shall within ninety days after the right of redemption has expired make like payments as provided for in this section, any person having the qualifications of a homestead entryman may pay to the proper receiver for not more than one hundred and sixty acres of land for which such payment has not been made: First, the unpaid fees, commissions and purchase price to which United States may then be entitled; and, second, the sum at which the land was sold at the sale for drainage charges, and in addition thereto, if bid in by the State, interest on the amount bid by the State at the rate of seven per centum per annum from the date of such sale, and thereupon the person making such payment shall become subrogated to the rights of such purchaser to receive a patent for said land. When any payment is made to effect such subrogation the receiver shall transmit to the treasurer of the county where the land is situated the amount at which the land was sold at the sale for drainage charges together with the interest paid thereon, if any, less any sum in excess of what may be due for such drainage charge, if the land when sold was unentered.

SEC. 7 That a copy of all notices required by the drainage laws mentioned in this act to be given to the owners or occupants of lands held in private ownership shall, as soon as such notices issue, be delivered to the register and receiver of the proper district land office in cases where unentered lands are affected thereby and to the entryman whose unpatented lands are included therein, and the United States and such entryman shall be given the same rights to be heard by petition, answer, remonstrance, appeal, or otherwise as are given to persons holding lands in private ownership; and all entrymen shall be given the same rights of redemption as are given to the owners of lands held in private ownership.

SEC. 8. That hereafter homestead entries and final proofs may be made upon all ceded Chippewa Indian lands in Minnesota embraced in the withdrawal under the act of June twenty-first, nineteen hundred and six, entitled "An Act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department" (Thirty-fourth Statutes at Large, page three hundred and twenty-five), and patents may issue thereon as in other homestead cases, upon the payment by the entryman of the price prescribed by law for such land and on entries on the ceded Red Lake Reservation in addition thereto the sum of three cents per acre to repay the cost of the drainage survey thereof, which addition shall be disposed of the same as the other proceeds of said land.

Approved, May 20, 1908.

A. A. Rolandson was here from Lillo on Saturday with the big butter shipment from the Clearwater creamery. He made us a pleasant visit and left a dollar to pay his subscription for another year in advance.

Dispatches from Washington announce that begining October 1st the rate of postage on letters between the United States and Great Britain will be reduced to two cents for each ounce or fraction thereof instead of five cents as at present.

Leroy Davis, aged nine years, arrived here yesterday morning from St Paul to spend the summer vacation with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Whaley. The little fellow made the trip all alone and arrived without a hitch in the journey.

R. Froebe, formerly of Lillo, writes us from his new home at Preston, Mont., enclosing us a dollar for another year's subscription in advance and sending best wishes for our success. Both are most acceptable and Mr. Froebe has our sincere thanks.

Buttermaker Lauritzon writes us from Highlanding that the new creamery there is doing very well and has about 60 patrons at present. He says he expects the number of patrons will reach 90 this summer. We are always glad to hear of the prosperity of the creameries throughout the county and like to publish the news concerning them.

Gasoline Freight Boat.

That the people out in the neighborhood of Lillo are both progressive and resourceful was proved by the arrival here on last Saturday of a fine new freight boat which floated down the Clearwater river from Lillo creamery with a cargo of 72 tubs of choice butter and a crew of five men. During the past few weeks of wet weather the roads were in such a poor condition that it was impossible to haul the butter from this creamery overland for shipment to New York, so Andrew Rolandson suggested that they build a boat and use the river when the roads were bad. The boat was built at once and is 28 feet long, 7 feet in width and fitted with a 3-horse gasoline engine. The crew who brought down the boat with a load of butter were M. E. Hyland, T. G. Mandt, M. Fore, Oscar Nesland and Gunder Lindtvebt. They remained here during part of the week fitting up the boat in proper shape and left for home yesterday morning with a big load of miscellaneous freight for the people in their neighborhood. The boat will be maintained as a permanent institution on the Clearwater and can always be used when the roads are bad, either for business or pleasure.

Death of Old Resident.

Peter Lefavre, one of the old settlers in this part of the country, died on May 21st at his home in Terrebonne, aged 73 years. The funeral was held from the Terrebonne Catholic church on the 23rd and was very largely attended. Mr. Lefavre was born at Montreal and moved to St. Paul in 1855. He came to Terrebonne in 1881 and has made his home there ever since. He served two years in the army during the Civil war and was a member of the G. A. R. He leaves his wife and six children to mourn his loss. The children are Peter and Moise, of Terrebonne, and Octave, of Garnes; Mrs. Jo. Mercil, and Mrs. Aloime Juneau, of Terrebonne, and Mrs. W. Lemieux, of Michigan. The cause of his death was a cancer of the throat from which he has been suffering for over a year.

Telephone Line Started.

The actual work of construction on the new telephone line has been commenced. On Thursday Herman and Oscar Lillo began setting up the poles which are being hauled out along the route from Plummer east. The poles will be set from Plummer east to the Garnes line first and if the conditions are favorable the line will be completed from Plummer to Lillo. The work of construction west th Red Lake Falls will then be taken up at once and it is expected that all will be completed within a very few weeks.

Drowned In the Clearwater

While setting out nets in the Clearwater river Sunday, J. Peter Larson a farmer living on the river, fell from his boat into the river and was drowned. The accident occured at the point on the river know as Clearwater Crossing. The body of Larson was recovered late Sunday afternoon by neighbors who had been dragging the river for many hours. Larson leaves a bride of three months and a brother to mourn his loss.

E. L. Wichterman left on Thursday for a visit to his farm out near Lindsay. His daughter, Miss Alice, who is teaching school out there, will return with him for a brief visit at home.

Miss Amelia Grinde returned on Thursday evening to Chicago after some time spent visiting with her father P. A. Grinde. Mr. Grinde was quite ill for a while but is now much improved in health.

On Monday last considerable over 6,000 pounds of cream was delivered by patrons at the Plummer creamery. Yesterday the amount delivered was was about the same. This is a material increase over former years and shows that the Plummer creamery is a progressive and prosperous institution.

Fred Wells, formerly one of the professional real estate men of this county, is missing from Cogswell, N. D. and is said to have embezzled about $40,000 of funds belonging to Adams & Reese, of Lisbon, N. D., whose trusted agent he was. He left his wife and two children practically destitute and nothing is known concerning his whereabouts.

Ben Steenerson's Body Buried at Crookston.

The body of Benjamin G. Steenerson, son of Congressman Steenerson, was recovered on May 26th by a fisherman on the shore of Elizabeth Island near Newport, R. I., where he was drowned on February 16th. The body was brought to Crookston by Congressman Steenerson and Sergeant Bertram Pierce, naval attache, and the funeral was held from the Congregational Church there on Tuesday. At the time of his death young Steenerson was acting clerk for the quartermaster sergeant, of the naval station at Newport, and a letter written by his superior officer to Congressman Steenerson shows the high standing he enjoyed among his comrades and with the officers, This letter in part says.

Newport, R. I. Feb. 17, 1908; I respectfully return your letter of the 12th inst. to your son. So intimately were we associated in our work and such was his character and ability that we were friends and comrades.

Just last week he was telling me his plans for the future. He told me he was going to put in a year with us that it would not hurt him, as he was learning things every day. Then he said he was going in with you in your law business and was going to try and follow you in your profession, and he had made a good start in the way already.

Believe me your grief is shared by every service man who knew your son and we fully believe that the manner of his going has added one more name to the list of our heroes, and well we know "that greater love hath no man than this,—that he lays down his life for his friends."

W. C. BARNABY,
SERGEANT U. S. MARINE CORPS.

New Bridge is Completed.

The new steel bridge across the Clearwater river between Garnes and Mayfield townships was completed on Wednesday and it is said to be a very fine structure. Foreman Nelson and his crew came in on Thursday and Mr. Nelson remained here until the bridge should be inspected and accepted by the county board and the superintendent of highways which was done yesterday. The Continental Bridge Co., who had the contract for this bridge, were considerably handicapped by bad weather this spring but they finished their work in better time than was expected considering the conditions they had to contend with.

Writ of Mandamus.

At Red Lake Falls on Monday Judge Watts issued an alternative writ of Mandamus to compel the county board to meet and take action on the county seat removal petition. The case is that of Martin V. Evenson against the county auditor and county board and L. A. Kaufer has been allowed to intrevene as a party to the action. This means that the the matter will be up in district court again this fall. Of course it will go through the whole gamut of proceedingt in district court and appeals to the supreme court before it can get to the voters, but it may be voted on after some years

Sever Grothe was in yesterday from eastern Mayfield township and called to have his name entered on our subscription list. He paid in advance and has our thanks for same.

Contracts Are Let.

Olaf Tande, town clerk of Garnes and treasurer of the fund started by the PIONEER over a year ago to improve the road across the swamp east of Plummer, was in on Wednesday with a big load of choice cream. While in town he called to inform us that he had let the contract for the grading of the road through the swamp and expects to have the work completed within a very short time now. The contract was awarded to Anton Peterson, who intends to begin work at once. When this grading is done there will be a fine road over this swamp which used to be absolutely impassible in places, and, while we take the credit for starting the movement, to Mr. Tande belongs the credit for carrying out the work in a most efficient manner. The general public who use the road in question owe Mr. Tande a big vote of thanks.

Mr. Tande also informed us that several contracts had been let for doing road work in Garnes township.

There was a number bids submitted for these jobs. The work was let in four seprate contracts which were secured by John Carlson, of Mayfield township; Willie Vettleson, Martin Bergh and B. M. Thoreson, all of Garnes.

A Mercenary Boy.

"When I was a boy," said the man who insisted that men were more mercenary than women, "I had a little friend named Willie. Willie appeared one day with a fine apple.

"'I'll give you this apple,' he said to a little girl, 'for twenty kisses.'

"The little girl was amazed. That was not at all like Willie. Nevertheless she consented.

"'Shut your eyes,' said Willie. 'Sit down here and shut your eyes. And, mind you, if you open them the bargain is off.'

"The little girl obeyed, and slowly, very slowly, the kisses began to fall upon her lips. One, two, three, four (a long pause), five, six (another long pause), seven (pause), eight, nine, ten (intolerable pause).

"'Oh, Willie, hurry!'

"'I'm not Willie.'

"The little girl opened her eyes in astonishment and drew back her pretty mouth from the advancing lips of a strange boy, a very common, shabby sort of boy, whom she had never seen before.

"'Why, where's Willie?' she cried.

"'He's down the street,' was the reply, 'sellin' yer kisses for two apples apiece. Better shut yer eyes again. The next three boys is terrible ugly.'" —St. Louis Republic.

Old Maps of Louisiana.

An interesting exhibit in the Louisiana State museum is a collection of old maps that show the state of Louisiana extending from Canada, which was then called New France, on the north to the gulf of Mexico on the south and from Virginia and Carolina on the east to the Pacific on the west. These maps were printed in Italy and Holland and France and were evidently largely works of fancy and imagination on the part of the geographers, as they depict mountain ranges where none exists and lakes and rivers distributed around in places where they are not found today. One of the most charming of these maps represents the Mississippi river as making a graceful turn along what is now the roadbed of the Louisville and Nashville railroad and emptying into the gulf in Florida. Along a strip of this country about where English Lookout and peaceful Bay St. Louis are located is a fearsome spot marked as the land of the man eaters.—New Orleans Picayune.

A Coveted Picture.

Some years ago a western man entered J. G. Brown's studio and seemed to gain satisfaction in finding its familiar features unchanged. He told the artist that in his boyhood he had worked in the streets of New York and, with others of his class, had served as a model for one of the pictures of street boys. He had gone west and had prospered and now had returned with a desire to become the owner of the group picture in which he and some of his boyish cronies appeared. He wanted it as a reminder of the struggles of his boyhood. He looked back on those days as being quite as happy as any he had ever known. The picture, says W. Howard Standish, discussing J. G. Brown, a painter of humble folk, had long ago been sold, and, although the would be purchaser offered to give his check for $25,000 for the work, the artist was unable to supply any clew to its whereabouts.—New Broadway Magazine.

Qualified.

"And is Willie Vanfeller really studying medicine?"

"Yes, and he's getting on famously. He told me yesterday I was looking well, and, by Jove, I was!"—Harper's Weekly.

OUR NEED OF WATER.

Muscles Made Elastic and Temperature Regulated by Moisture.

Physiologists tell us that the animal body consists of almost 80 per cent of water. Admitting this to be true, it would seem plausible, says the Medical Record, that this quantity is necessary in order to carry on the normal physiological processes of the animal economy in proper condition.

For similar reasons it would also appear plausible that should this quantity in any way be greatly reduced or diminished, either through normal processes of the body or through abnormal processes, this lost quantity must immediately be resupplied. Should such a withdrawal of water be permitted to be unduly prolonged the disorders will assume such grave dimensions that life itself may ultimately be terminated.

Elasticity and pliability of muscles, nerves, cartilage, tendons and even bones depend mainly on the amount of water they contain. Water also serves as a distributer of bodily heat and regulates the body temperature by the physical process of absorption and elimination.

Under normal conditions and in a proper degree of health this supply is ordinarily furnished partly by the food and partly by the drink we are daily consuming. An overindulgence in the use of water, provided it is not carried to excess, will seldom if ever be productive of any deleterious consequences.

The Tuscan Farmer.

The Tuscan peasant stands in the peculiar position of being neither a proprietor nor a dependent, writes Helen Zimmern in the Youth's Companion. He is instead the partner in an industry. According to this method of farming, which is called mezzadria, the proprietor of the land pays all the taxes, advances all money required, furnishes capital for the purchase of cattle and keeps in repair the dwelling house. The peasant in return works the fields, attends to the live stock and to other home industries, sells the products—in short is the absolute master of the land that is confided to him. He works the soil exactly as if it were his own, and then, at stated intervals in the year, divides the products and profits with the real owner.

Cage For a Queen Bee.

When a queen bee becomes unproductive through old age, it is necessary for the bee keeper to supply the colony of bees with a new queen. This he does in the following manner: The old queen is removed from the hive and the bees are left alone for about twelve hours or longer, during which time they find out that they are queenless. The new queen is then put into a cage made of wood and wire cloth, with an opening through one end. This opening is filled tight with a mixture of honey and sugar. The cage thus prepared is laid upon the tops of the frames in the hive. The bees soon discover the new queen in the cage and set to work upon the honey and sugar. In the hive bees recognize friends and strangers by their sense of smell, and a strange queen entering a hive would be very quickly killed by the bees. By the time the queen is liberated from the cage she has acquired the scent of the hive and is therefore no longer a stranger.—London Globe.

MAN MURDERED IN MINNEAPOLIS

A. P. CAMDEN OF CHICAGO IS SHOT DOWN WHILE WALKING ON NICOLLET AVENUE.

James Montague, the Murderer, is a Total Stranger. Is Followed by Boys and Arrested. Laughs and Says it Was a Joke.

Minneapolis, June 4. — Walking calmly and deliberately up to his victim and placing the point of a 38-caliber revolver two inches from his forehead, James Montague, an apparent lunatic, blew out the brains of A. P. Camden in front of the Palace clothing store, Nicollet avenue, between Third and Fourth streets, Minneapolis, at midnight last night.

The men were strangers and neither of them lived in Minneapolis. Camden was an agent for the Automatic Auger company of Chicago, and when questioned as to his home Montague replied, "I came from nowhere and am going to the same place."

Montague was followed down the street and into an alley by two messenger boys, Hough Young of 1406 First avenue south, and Milton Harion 916 Fifteenth avenue south. The boys saw the shooting, and when Montague coolly walked into the alley they followed him and talked with him.

One of them notified Patrolman R. E. Champlain, and when Montague saw the officer approaching he left the alley and started down Washington avenue on a dog trot. Not wishing to get too close to the man, Officer Champlain followed at a respectful distance. A block away he saw Detectives Hayes and Lyon approaching. He signaled to them and the detectives closed in on Montague, disarmed him and took him to the central station.

Montague was apparently in a happy frame of mind. He gave his age as twenty-one years. He says he never had seen Camden before, and when asked why he had killed him simply said:

"Why, get wise to the joke. It's great sport. I get $150 for every one I kill. Sometimes I plug 'em with a bullet and sometimes I cut their throats."

It was finally learned that Montague came from some town on the North-Western road but he would not tell the name of the place. He said he had been in Idaho and mentioned Boise, Idaho; Butte, Mont., and Seattle.

BALLOON MAKES QUICK TRIP.

The Chicago Sails From Quincy, Ill., to Clear Lake, S. D.

Clear Lake, S. D., June 3.—Early risers in the country to the southwest of Clear Lake were astounded when at 5 a. m. Tuesday a monster balloon dropped from the clouds, apparently, and landed in a field at a point about six miles distant from town. In an hour's time the country roads were thronged with people on their way to the scene.

The balloon proved to be the Chicago, said to be the biggest in the world, and now making a trial trip. It left Quincy, Ill., last night at 6 o'clock and was provisioned and ballasted with the expectation of making a three days' journey.

Charles A. Coey of Chicago, Capt. C. L. Bumbaugh of St. Louis and Charles Leichliter of Chicago and a small dog made the long and thrilling aerial trip. The men enjoyed the dangers and the pleasures of the experience and the little dog seemed to take both with nonchalance.

Computing on an air line basis, the aeronauts say the Chicago covered 800 miles in exactly eleven hours, or an average of seventy-five miles an hour. The aeronauts say that the actual distance was more than 800 miles and that they probably maintained a flight of nearly eighty miles an hour.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

State Loses Money.

St. Paul—Minnesota has come to the realization that she has been cheating herself through the cash sale of timber tracts in the northern part of the state, and in the future cash sales of timber tracts by the state in all probability will be tabooed. Auditor Iverson has recommended to the state timber board that the cash sales be abolished, and it is expected that the suggestion will be followed.

The matter was taken up a year ago with the intention of dropping the sales, but at that time it was decided to try them another year.

According to the state law, all tracts of land containing less than 100,000 feet of timber were available for cash sale.

Many tracts were surveyed and found to contain less than the required amount, but in other cases after the lands had been sold it was discovered that more than 100,000 feet of timber had been cut on them. Permits for two logging seasons to cut the timber were given by the state board, which also had the privilege of extending the permit another year if for some reason the purchasers had been unable to get onto the land. In cases where the cut had been made two years and the land still contained uncut timber the extensions were not granted.

New Cathedral.

Minneapolis—With all the solemn splendor and dignity characteristic of Roman Catholic ceremony, the effect of which was heightened by a crystal clear sky, the ceremonies attendant upon the laying of the pro-cathedral cornerstone at Sixteenth street and Hennepin avenue, Minneapolis, were carried out to the minutest detail before a vast concourse of people which extended for blocks around the reviewing stand. It was an epoch-making event for the church not only in Minneapolis but in the Northwest.

For more than an hour and a half devout parishioners from the two cities, as well as scores of communities in the state, filed past the reviewing stand, 30,000 strong. Under the canopied platform this tribute to the strength and influence of the church was viewed by distinguished prelates from various parts of the country and the apostolic delegate from the Vatican at Rome, the assemblage including archbishops, bishops, monsignori and abbots. Following the sacred rites at the laying of the cornerstone, a multitude surged about the speakers' platform and the reviewing stand. Including both those seated in the stand and the thousands who packed the street it is probable that fully 50,000 persons attended the ceremonies.

Ditches.

Crookston—Minnesota will spend approximately a million dollars on drainage work this year, and not less than 13,000,000 cubic yards of dirt will be moved during the season to complete drainage ditches. Fully half a million acres of land will be reclaimed or benefitted for agriculture by the 1908 drainage operations.

This is the biggest season in the history of drainage operations in the state. The state drainage board is spending the better part of a $200,000 appropriation merely to improve state lands, and the state, the counties and private citizens together are putting in $431,112 just on ditches built under state supervision. Hundreds of other ditches are put in under authority of the counties or by order of the district courts on the assessment plan.

In this work Minnesota is giving a lively demonstration of the conservation of natural resources.

Drowned.

Northfield—Bern Livingston, a second year student in the local high school, was drowned and Alson Blodgett, a companion, almost met a similar fate when their gasoline launch went over the dam here Thursday afternoon. The accident occurred at 6 o'clock, just below the lower bridge, and between 150 and 200 people saw the accident, but were powerless to help the boys. Among the crowd on the bridge was Blodgett's mother.

IS 100 YEARS OLD

REV. MOYNIHAN, PRIEST IN CHICAGO, TURNS CENTURY MARK.

Refuses to Disclose His Exact Age—Is Still Very Active and Reads Without the Aid of Glasses—Was Born in Ireland.

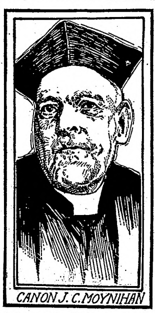
Almost a century in the service of his church, 70 years of which have elapsed since he was ordained a priest, and yet to be able to celebrate mass before an altar constructed in his own room, is the proud record of Very Rev. Canon Jeremiah Moynihan, who now makes his home with friends at 193 Thirty-ninth street.

Just exactly how old this grand old priest is remains a secret which he guards as carefully as does a coy maiden who has passed that mystic birthday when women would rather remain silent than divulge their age. He admits that he was born in 1808, but says that he will not tell any man, woman or child the exact date of his birthday.

"They'd make a fuss about it," he says, "and that would be useless."

"Old Father Jerry," as he is familiarly known by thousands of admirers, says to live long and keep good health one must eat and sleep regularly, shun tobacco and liquors and banish worry.

Canon Moynihan is active, he eats well, he sleeps well, he laughs—oh, so heartily—and he declares that he can place a man of 70 on his back in a twinkling. Were it not for his advanced age, he says he would have been a bishop, and very likely the archbishop of New Orleans. He is not at all discouraged with life, but sees humor in everything possible. He to-day looks like a man of 70, and acts like one. When a baby the people of his home town of Kanturk, County Cork, Ireland, were still talking of the sacrifice of Robert Emmet, and there was a whisper here and there of the "wearing of the green," but it had to be only a whisper. The rebellion of ten years previous still was on every Irish tongue. Canon Moynihan was born into an atmosphere of revolution. His baby lips learned the syllables of every Irish song that moves a Celt to action. The sight of a red coat was both a horror and an indignation from the moment his baby eyes learned to discriminate colors.



CANON J. C. MOYNIHAN

"I mind them still," said Canon Moynihan in an interview. "I mind the soldiery well. That's 90 years and more ago. I'll never forget them if I live 90 years more."

Canon Moynihan is rugged, deep-chested, and must have been of great physical strength in his day. He has plenty of gray hair about his temples, but the upper head is bald. With a hundred years of handicap, he sees the joke long before you do. When you knit your forehead to find out the fine point, you see him laughing at you under his shaggy brows.

"What place in Ireland did you come from?" he snapped out suddenly while being interviewed. "What's that—you came from New York? Sure, it's the same thing. They used to call it the County Croker. I hear it's the County Murphy now."

"Spectacles? What's that? You want to insult a man who bears his 100 years with honor? Spectacles? What are the like for? I can see through you so easy I'd never need them. What's that? Ha, ha, ha! I never have used them, and thank God I know my breviary from end to end without needing them."

He made a trip to Ireland many years ago and brought back from Dublin five Sisters of Charity, who took up their labors in America.

Despite his great age, he celebrated mass at the Church of the Holy Angels two years ago. Before coming to Chicago he was rector of a parish at Bradford, Ill. For 50 years he lived in New Orleans, where he was made a canon. He speaks six languages.

Large Waterways to Be Constructed.

Russia is contemplating the construction of a huge new waterway across Siberia, nearly parallel with the course of the transsiberian railway. It is proposed to connect five great Siberian rivers—the Tobol, Ishim, Irtish, Ob and Yenissei—and other less important streams, by canals or light railways, and with a view of this the Russian government has ordered extensive surveys to be taken.

BAD ITCHING HUMOR.

Limbs Below the Knees Were Raw—Feet Swollen—Sleep Broken—Cured in 2 Days by Cuticura.

"Some two months ago I had a humor break out on my limbs below my knees. They came to look like raw beefsteak, all red, and no one knows how they itched and burned. They were so swollen that I could not get my shoes on for a week or more. I used five or six different remedies and got no help, only when applying them the burning was worse and the itching less. For two or three weeks the suffering was intense and during that time I did not sleep an hour at a time. Then one morning I tried a bit of Cuticura. From the moment it touched me the itching was gone and I have not felt a bit of it since. The swelling went down and in two days I had my shoes on and was about as usual. George B. Farley, 50 South State St., Concord, N. H., May 14, 1907."

How Denis O'Halloran Transgressed His Code

BY B. FLETCHER ROBINSON

(Copyright.)

Mr. Denis O'Halloran clasped his long horseman's cloak about him. He was a man below the middle height and of a spare and active figure. His expression was resolute and his eyes of a merry audacity.

He rode swiftly through the village street, easing his mount as he met the shoulder of the hill. It was an age when the wayfarer had still to rely upon his own weapon for safety, and he knew that after nightfall such waste places must have their perils. He reached the crown of the hill and pushed forward at a livelier gait.

For man Denis O'Halloran had little fear. He had already acquired some reputation in campaigns under an alien flag. But it was a superstitious age and he came of a superstitious people. Therefore, when pushing warily forward he rounded the spur of the hill into the full light of the moon, the spectacle which met his gaze shook his heart into his mouth and his hand to the pistol in his holster.

On a little plateau some 50 paces from the road and circled by a rising slope, stood a gallows whereon hung the body of a man. The sight was familiar; by such means were the highways rightfully protected. But the corpse did not swing unattended. A few paces from the foot of the gibbet were two figures, the one erect, wrapped in a trailing cloak, the other crouching to some labor.

The crouching figure moved; the light gleamed on a pick as it rose, and the clicking sound came again to his ears. It was digging a grave painfull and slowly. Presently it stopped, dropping the tool, and as it did so the other struck it so that it raised a loud wail of pain. A woman's voice, thought the traveler, and his blood stirred within him. With an oath he set spurs to his horse and galloped headlong toward them.

The man never moved from where he stood, but the woman ran toward him, crying, with outstretched arms. The traveler was out of the saddle in a flash and slipped an arm about her, for she seemed near to falling.

"Save me" she said, "for the love of heaven."

"Faith, madam, an' I will be blithe to do so," said Mr. O'Halloran. He looked down at her with satisfaction. She was indeed a fine woman, though not in her first youth.

The man advanced from beneath the shadow of the corpse, dropping his cloak as he did so. The moon showed him tall and lean, with a long face and a stern and melancholy expression. He carried himself with an air of dignity. Plainly he was of gentle breeding.

"It would be well, sir, if you do not interfere in that which nowise concerns you," he said sternly.

"By the blessed saints, but did ye ever hear the like!" cried Mr. O'Halloran.

"I perceive you are an Irishman," sneered the tall man.

"An' I perceive that ye ar're an impertinent scoundrel," returned Mr. O'Halloran.

"I do not desire to brawl with you, my good fellow. Let it suffice you that I have an explanation for what I am about."

"An explanation, have ye?" cried Mr. O'Halloran in vast indignation. "Then let me tell ye that amongst Irish gentlemen the striking iv a lady admits no explanation. Sor, ye lack gentility. If I had the time I would tache ye manners with a cane."

"What are you?" said the tall man. "Jacobite fugitive, cutthroat, or an Irish bogtrotter on a journey? Pray give me so much of your confidence."

"I hold a captain's commission," replied Mr. O'Halloran with becoming dignity, "though in what ar-rmy it is not precisely convanient f'r me to mention. Does that content ye?"

"I am at your service," said the other.

"May heaven aid you," murmured the lady.

Mr. O'Halloran slipped off his cloak, drew his sword and stepped forward with a lean activity.

The tall man was no match for O'Halloran and before long a prick in the shoulder made him drop his sword with an oath.

"Again, again!" screamed the woman.

Mr. O'Halloran paid her no attention, but stepped back, lowering his point.

"Madam," said he, "I have found this gentleman a very brave and illigant fighter. To be thruthful with ye, I would know more iv this business."

"Then I will bid you good-night, sir," she said coldly. "I can find my way to the coach."

"I must ask ye, with due submission, to remain where ye ar-re," replied Mr. O'Halloran. "At least until such time as I have inquired further iv this gentleman."

The tall man was seated on the ground, nursing his arm, his back propped against the gallows. He regarded them curiously.

"My name is Yorke," he said. "Col. Francis Yorke. You may have heard it?"

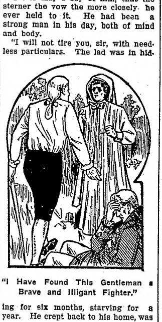
"It was tolerably familiar after Fontenoy," laughed the Irishman.

"An old man with grown sons about him married again," said the colonel. "Heavens, sir, does not the devil's opportunity lie in old men's follies? He had met the lady at a rout at York. He knew naught of her but that she was bold in spirit and pleasing to the eye. His elder son, a soldier serving abroad, saw neither the wooing nor the wedding; the younger did that which he could check his father's doting desires. She met the lad and defeated him at every turn of the game. She laughed away his evidence of her past as malicious talebearing. So he perforce must watch this jade come flaunting into his home, knowing full well with what hatred she regarded him and what little hope of joy in life under his father's roof remained to him."

"Ye speak bitterly, sir," said Mr. O'Halloran.

"Is it a merry tale? Come, hear it out. Within a year of the marriage, over the border came the Highland cattle lifters with that Papist adventurer, Charles Stuart—What? Do I touch your politics? Forget it, sir, or I shall never have done. The lad was of an age for romance. His father's wife had raffish friends who made a pothouse boast of it to drink to their king over the water. Together they beguiled him until in the end he rode away to join—but, I must be careful—to join the most valiant army of the only true and puissant monarch of these islands, then about to retreat from Derby. 'Twas a pretty plot, worthy of the sex to which I observe, sir, you are a devoted champion. The old man was a whig who hated the Pretender as he would the devil. To him comes his good wife with loud lamentations. The prodigal son had ridden away to join the invaders, a Jacobite declared. She hinted at fines and sequestrations. Whereat the father swore that his son should never darken his doors again; and this may I say of him, that the sterner the vow the more closely he ever held to it. He had been a strong man in his day, both of mind and body.

"I will not tire you, sir, with needless particulars. The lad was in hiding for six months, starving for a year. He crept back to his home, was turned from the door, and in his desperation he stopped a coach here upon the moors. Information against him was already out, through whose agency you may best guess. He was apprehended and hanged in chains near the scene of his offense as a warning to malefactors."



"I Have Found This Gentleman a Brave and Illigant Fighter."

"Ye should have told me iv this before—before we fell to disputing," said O'Halloran.

"You understand, then?"

For answer the Irishman whipped out his sword and saluted the corpse where it clanked and swung.

"He died for his king," he said, "though I had rather it had been at Culloden. God save the king!"

"You do us honor, sir," said the colonel. "In my brother's name I thank you."

The lady rose from where she sat, throwing back her cloak with an angry gesture.

"Do you believe this man?" she [illegible]led.

"Faith, madam, but I do," said Mr. O'Halloran.

"This woman beater?"

She scored a hit. He hung undecided, with a toe scratching the turf.

"Permit me to finish my tale, sir," said the colonel. "I learned that my good stepmother was journeying home this evening. Wherefore I took the occasion to invite her to my brother's funeral. I could not leave him here, poor lad. As she had hung my brother, it seemed but in due course that she should help me to dig his grave. Finding her opposed to the suggestion, I used the argument most likely to appeal to her. Our work was well-nigh ended when you appeared. Upon its termination it was my intention to escort her to her coach."

"You hear this villain," cried the lady. "He forced me to dig, to dig till my hands were blistered!"

"It would be a better grave were it a few inches deeper," said the colonel, "and the soil is light."

Mr. Denis O'Halloran thrust out his chest, fingered his sword hilt, and scowled at the gallows, the moon and the moors.

"By the honor of me house, sor-r," he said, "but I think that your stepmother will do well if she takes to the spade again."

WRIGHTS HAVE NEW MACHINE.

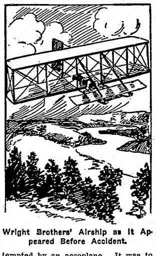
Air Navigators Can Replace Broken Aeroplane with Stronger One.

Manteo, N. C.—The Wright brothers are not disheartened over the recent accident to their aeroplane. They have been using their old machine here, and it is learned that they have a new and stronger machine already built in Dayton and will return here with that in August to go on with their experiments.

It was also learned from official sources that the flight interrupted by the accident was designed to be the most important performance ever attempted by an aeroplane. It was to have been an endurance test in which the operator expected to remain in the air one hour and twenty minutes. That would have meant a flight of about 80 miles. In the government test next August the Wright machine will have to remain in the air an hour, but will not be required to cover as great a distance as was contemplated in the unfortunate performance.



Wright Brothers' Airship as It Appeared Before Accident.

One or both of the brothers will go to Europe within a few weeks, but they will be back here with their new machine next August.

The Wright machine was constructed with the idea of selling it to the government. The body is 40 feet long and 80 feet wide, making a total buoying surface of 640 feet. It is said to be capable of carrying four ordinary men with ease.

WILSON TO QUIT CABINET.

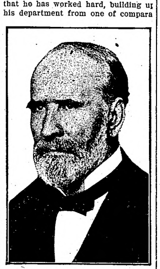
Secretary of Agriculture Says He Will Resign.

Washington.—James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, told some friends the other day that he has decided to resign.

Mr. Wilson holds two records as cabinet officer. He is the only one since the foundation of the government who has served 11 years continuously, and the only member of a cabinet who has served through four administrations. The secretary said that he has worked hard, building up his department from one of comparative unimportance to a department in which the whole country relies.



James Wilson.

Mr. Wilson entered President McKinley's cabinet March 5, 1897, and has been in the government official family continuously since that time.

His friends tried to persuade him to stay at least through the president's term. While he would not promise to reconsider his determination he said that he would not resign until he had consulted them again.

If Secretary Wilson goes out there is little doubt that Gifford Pinchot will be put in his place. Mr. Pinchot is United States forester.

Boats with Famous Names.

The steamers of the American line and the Atlantic Transport line are named after American cities and characters, and the Scandinavian-American has seen fit to call one of its best steamers the United States. The Hamburg-American steamer Pennsylvania was the only vessel with an American name in the company's New York and Hamburg fleet until the Amerika came out, with her various decks named after President Roosevelt, the Kaiser, Cleveland and Washington. Then came the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, with more decks named after Americans, after which the line brought out the steamers President Grant and President Lincoln. The Anchor line has called its latest steamer the California.

That Will Interest All Suffering Women.

Mrs. Della Meanes, 328 E. Front St., Maysville, Ky., says: "Seven years ago I began to notice sharp pain in the kidneys and a bearing down sensation through the hips, dull headache and dizzy spells. One box helped me so much that I kept on until entirely cured."

Unkind Analysis.

"He seems to be a very thoughtful and serious man," remarked one statesman.

"That's an optical illusion," replied the other. "He's merely sitting down, taking life easy and letting his mind wander."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

"Helpful Hints" That Hinder.

Many of the "helpful hints" followed by our mothers are now proved utterly useless, if not more harmful than helpful. For instance, no one now uses moist tea leaves to clean a carpet or rug, because of the inevitable staining. And salt used on a carpet collects dampness and rusts the tacks. Newspapers, dampened and torn, answer the purpose much more satisfactorily. Rugs should be shaken from the sides, for the strain of the weight on the end is very apt to loosen the weft.

Too Much for Pa.

The visitor to the home of a well-known Hoosier state author found his three youngsters romping in the hallway.

"What are you playing, boys?' he inquired.

"We are playing pirates," elucidated the smallest.

"Pirates? Why, how can you play pirates in Indiana? There are no seas bordering on this state."

"Oh, we don't need any sea. We are literary pirates like pa."

And five minutes later a chorus of yells from behind the barn told that the hand that wields the pen can also wield the shingle.

Dispenser of Kisses.

A Frenchman, who apparently has been amusing himself by reckoning up the number of kisses he has given his wife during the first 20 years of his married life.

He finds that in the first year he dispensed about 100 kisses a day, or, say, allowing for birthdays and legal and church holidays, about 36,700 in the year.

In the second year this number was reduced by half, and in the third year to ten a day, while in the fifth year his better half had to be content with two a day, one in the morning and one in the evening.

What happened after the fifth year is "wrapped in mystery," but at the same rate of "progression" he probably arrived eventually at one kiss on the first of January every leap year.—Chicago American.

THE FIRST TASTE

Learned to Drink Coffee When a Baby.

If parents realized the fact that coffee contains a drug—caffeine—which is especially harmful to children, they would doubtless hesitate before giving the babies coffee to drink.

"When I was a child in my mother's arms and first began to nibble things at the table, mother used to give me sips of coffee. As my parents used coffee exclusively at meals I never knew there was anything to drink but coffee and water.

"And so I contracted the coffee habit early. I remember when quite young, the continual use of coffee so affected my parents that they tried roasting wheat and barley, then ground it in the coffee-mill, as a substitute for coffee.

"But it did not taste right and they went back to coffee again. That was long before Postum was ever heard of. I continued to use coffee until I was 27, and when I got into office work, I began to have nervous spells. Especially after breakfast I was so nervous I could scarcely attend to my correspondence.

"At night, after having coffee for supper, I could hardly sleep, and on rising in the morning would feel weak and nervous.

"A friend persuaded me to try Postum. My wife and I did not like it at first, but later when boiled good and strong it was fine. Now we would not give up Postum for the best coffee we ever tasted.

"I can now get good sleep, am free from nervousness and headaches. I recommend Postum to all coffee drinkers.

OFFICIAL PAPER of RED LAKE COUNTY

Subscription price, $1.50 per year
If paid in advance, $1.00.

Entered at the Post-office in Plummer, Minn. as Second Class Mail Matter.

Congress adjourned last Saturday night after a session which was a record breaker for doing nothing. In its closing hours a currency bill was passed, but it is a bill that does not seem to be thought much of.

While Jacobson and Young have been occupying the center of the stage as gubernatorial candidates Joel P. Heatwole has been sawing wood and getting in close touch with the common people. From this distance it looks as though the Republican party in Minnesota would have a better chance to harmonize for Heatwole than either of the other two.

Where is Jacobson at? The question has often been asked lately but not answered. There is no question but that his silence is injuring his cause with the common people. Bob Dunn has assumed a leading part in the management of the Jacobson campaign and that fact is construed by many to indicate that at least some of the "interests" will not be very energetic in helping to make Jacobson governor.

Yes, Joel P. Weatwole is certainly a candidate for governor and he is liable to show up with a big following when the State convention meets. As an organizer he is one of the best in the state and his platform, which has been freely published, clearly defines where he is at on the various issues. The people like his clean cut method of going after the office and he has an excellent chance of getting there. So far he is the only candidate who has announced fairly and squarely where he is at and no one accuses him of being the candidate of any "interests". Having made his position clear is he not entitled to more consideration than those other candidates who will not say where they stand but evade the question by refering to a past record. The people want to know where the various candidates are at on the present issues; the past record is merely incidental.

ANIMAL VISION.

Its Acuteness Depends Upon the Size of the Eyeball.

Dr. Alexander Schaefer investigated the vision of many animal species and found that the size of the eyeball is the principal factor of acuteness of vision. The bovine species has the sharpest sight. The second place is occupied by man and the horse, which have nearly equal visual powers, the third by the sheep. Small and especially small eyed animals, whether mammals, birds, amphibia or reptiles, have very poor sight. Owls and buzzards are the only birds that possess great acuteness of vision. The low positions in the scale occupied by dogs, cats, bats and many fishes which feed upon living prey is contrary to all expectation. In the case of dogs and certain fishes lack of sharpness of vision is due to the great size of the retinal elements. It has long been known that dogs have such indistinct vision that, as a rule, a dog is not able to recognize his master by sight alone.

These results emphasize the distinction between vision of motionless objects and vision of moving objects. The latter faculty is necessarily keen in all animals of prey. A cat is little affected by the sight of motionless objects, but pounces on a fleeing mouse or a trailed string instantly and with unerring precision. A trout will rise to the most impossible artificial fly if its motion resembles that of a living fly.

The inclusion and position of man in the series are based upon the ocular measurements given by Helmholtz in his "Physiologische Optik."—Scientific American.

A Queer Joke.

A resident of Vevey, Switzerland, died some years ago and left a will, in which he bequeathed the whole of his property, of which he was supposed to possess a large amount, to the "local hospital of the town." There being two local medical charities—the town hospital and the Hospice de Samaritan—a suit at law was entered by the former in order to decide its right to the legacy. After considerable expenses had been incurred the dispute was abruptly brought to a close by the discovery that the deceased had indulged in a most unseasonable jest and, in fact, did not possess a penny to bequeath.

Mayfield Farmer's Advice.

A word to the farmers living on the Eleven Towns.

There seems every year to be a steady increase of those who retire from their lands in the Eleven Towns.

Some move into town, others buy in other places and some start in business in different towns. What can be the cause of this? Friend Farmer stop and consider and ask yourself if you are doing right. Do you really think you can make a greater success of farming in any other place than in the Eleven Towns? I don't say you cant if you had enough money to start with, but the case is you haven't.

And do you think you can run a business and make a success of it?

No matter what kind of business you start it requires education and experience, which most of the farmers dont have

I will tell you of one case of a farmer living on the Eleven Towns. He took land here the fall of 1904 and staid on his land for two years. Then he made final proof and borrowed $700 on his claim. Soon he got tired of the farming and moved off the land to town where he started a restaurant. He run this restaurant for a couple of months when he had to quit because he had neither education or experience. Then he moved to a town in Dakota where he started working as a common laborer to support his family of seven. Finally he landed in the poor house. I could tell of others who have gone pretty much the same way.

This shows what results from moving off the land in a good many cases.

Mr. Farmer, when you get a farm hang on to it. Get along as best you can. Try and get along without making a loan on your land. Dont make final proof before you have to as you will get higher taxes to pay and this is a great mistake. Most of the farmers when they make final proof borrow from $700 to $1,000 on their land and when three years have expired they are totally ruined and have to leave their land. The higher taxes and the interest in addition to their living is too much for them to raise.

So I think, friend farmer, you are far better off to stay on your land and raise cattle and pigs. Also raise plenty small grain for feed for your stock so you can keep them in fine condition to command a good price on the St Paul or Chicago market.

As you know, stock raising and mixed farming pays best on the Eleven Towns.

Yours for success in the farming business and hoping this will profit somebody.

Mayfield Farmer.

Navel Oranges.

Possibly not every one has heard the anecdote about the dear old mother whose son had been promoted to be first lieutenant in the navy. He sent her a box of fine navel oranges from Florida and this brief note:

Dear Mother—Just a handful of navel oranges, something you will find especially choice. Devotedly, JACK.

Speaking of Jack to some guests at the house a few nights later as they were enjoying the oranges, she remarked: "Just the very best boy in all the world, dear, dear Jack. What a splendid sailor, and every inch an officer! But he never could learn to spell. Just think of a lieutenant spelling naval with an 'e' and a small 'n.' Isn't it embarrassing to a mother? Still it sounds all the same when you speak it."—New York Press.

SAWMILL IS RUNNING

Started on Thursday to Run Steadily Until Next Winter.

The Plummer sawmill commenced cutting lumber on Thursday and it is expected will keep busy untill near freezing up time this fall. The work of construction has been successfully done by Messrs Evritt and Winship with their crew of skilled help and when the mill was started very little alteration or adjustment was found necessary. For the present only sawing will be done but a little later extra power will be installed and a planing mill. This will be all that will be put in this year but next year a lath and shingle mill will be added.

This year they expect to cut about a million feet of lumber besides making a large number of railroad ties.

On Thursday surveyors for the Soo line were here and laid out the lines for a spur track to connect with the mill yard and this track will be put in as soon as possible.

During this week the mill has been running with a short crew but on Monday a complete crew will be put on. A large number of men and boys will be employed in the handling of the lumber, railroad ties, pulpwood and cedar with which the river is filled for over a mile.

The putting in of this mill will be a big thing for Plummer as it will give employment to a large number and will bring thousands of dollars each year into circulation among the business men.

Mayfield Murmurs.

The assessor has been pretty busy this week looking over the personal property in Mayfield township.

L. T. Berg is adding more improvements to his fine farm by fencing. Mr. Berg has two quarter sections close together and well improved with fine buildings, etc.

Sam Lovaas and son Oscar returned last week from the farm in the town of Brandsvold, near Fosston, where they have been busy seeding. Sam says he did pretty well and seeded 35 acres.

We were up to see Grunde Austad, the up-to-date storekeeper and post master at Malone the other day. Mr. Austad is busy all the time behind his counter waiting on customers. He is doing a fine business and gives you the best of treatment every time.

The Clearwater steamboat passed by here on Saturday morning and scared a good many people out of their beds with it's noise. If a man had talked about a steamboat on the Clear water river ten years ago people would call him half crazy, yet now we have one running between the Clearwater Creamery and Plummer. Saturday morning the boat on its way going east went through the stream like flying so it should bear the name "Clearwater flyer".

Season of 1908.

The fine Percheron-Coach Stallion "George" will stand this season at Hazel, on Monday of each week, and at Plummer on every Friday.

"George is a handsome Chestnut in color and weighs about 1,665 pounds. He stood last season at Plummer and gave the best of satisfaction.

The undersigned bought this horse this spring from Jarr & Morrisette, the former owners and will stand him for service at his home in section 23, Wyondotte township, except as above stated,

Terms: To insure with foal, $8.00; to insure standing colt, $10.00. $1.00 down at time of service in all cases,

OSCAR HEDEEN, owner.

The Peoples of Italy.

There is a marked difference in stature and temperament between the people of north Italy and those of south Italy. The reason is because, while politically one, they are racially separate peoples. The Longobards, or Lombards, who about 568 took possession of northern Italy and permanently established themselves in the rich valley watered by the Po and its affluents, were of Teutonic stock, their original home having been the region on the left bank of the Elbe, round about Magdeburg and Luneburg, Germany, while the Italians south of Lombardy are of the old Latin stock. This fact explains the physical and other differences between the people from the north and the people from the south of Italy.

A Badly Mixed Story.

A special to the Minneapolis Tribune from Red Lake Falls says:

Charges of questionable methods being used in the county seat fight in order to remove the county seat to Thief River Falls are made at Red Lake Falls. A prominent member of the removal committee at the latter oity last week went to see Chairman Lindquist of the board of county commissioners who has favored Red Lake Falls, and told him it is alleged, that a plot was on foot at Red Lake Falls to kill Lindquist or put him out of the way because he obstructed the removal of the county seat and that certain tough characters were willing to do the job for money, and advised Lindquist to change his mind or keep away from Thief River Falls as his life was not safe.

He also reported that the offer to kill Lindquist had been made to him personally by a man he knew to be tough. Lindquist immediately made complaint to a magistrate of the county with the result that the committee man from Thief River Falls was compelled to come into court yesterday to repeat under oath what he had stated.

He utterly failed on the witness stand to identify anyone with the alleged threat or misdoing and his sworn statements under cross examination were so hazy that the people there are convinced that the whole matter is a bluff to frighten the county commissioner.—Crookston Journal.

BREWERS ISSUE TEMPERANCE CALL

"NEITHER ABUSE OR DISUSE" IS THEME OF PRODUCERS OF BEVERAGES.

SESSION ADOPTS LIBERAL PLANKS

Promotion of Moderate Consumption of Liquor, Elimination of Saloon Evils and End of Prosecution Comprise Platform of Association.

Milwaukee, June 11.—The promotion of temperance in the use of fermented beverages, their meaning of temperance being neither abuse nor disuse, is favored by the United States Brewers' association in a lengthy set of principles which the association adopted at its closing session Wednesday. They also favor the elimination of the objectionable features of the retail liquor traffic and pledging their fullest co-operation toward their extinction. The brewers also declare that it is a mistake to believe that the commercial interests of the brewers stand back of the excessive multiplication of saloons or any of the unlawful or improper practices of the saloon keeper. Whenever a spirit of genuine inquiry and rational betterment shall take the place of heedless persecution aiming not at improvement but at the extermination of their business, the brewers will welcome it and will gladly refrain from participating in politics. The following officers were elected: Board of trustees: Harry A. Poth, Philadelphia; Joseph Theurer, Chicago; C. Stangmann, Buffalo; Gustav Pabst, Milwaukee; Jacob Kunz, Minneapolis; C. Diegenspan, Newark, N. J.; A. Hemrich, Seattle.

Draw Up a Platform.

Following is the platform in part: "The United States Brewers' association declares its sympathy with, and offers its co-operation with any movement looking to the promotion of habits of temperance in the use of fermented beverages. By temperance is meant temperate use—neither abuse nor disuse. We believe that the temperate use of beer promotes health and happiness, which are the underlying conditions of morality and social order, and in this belief we are supported by the vast preponderance of educated as well as popular opinion all over the world.

"Consistently with this belief we favor the passage and the enforcement of laws for the regulation of the drink traffic and for keeping such traffic free from unlawful and improper accessories, and we earnestly desire such improvement in the drinking habits of the people as will still further advance temperance, together with the spread of enlightenment as to the proper functions of drink, whereby the individual may be able to regulate his habits according to the requirements of wholesome living.

Down the Saloon Evils.

"It is a mistake to believe the brewers stand back of the excessive multiplication of saloons or of any of the unlawful or improper practices resorted to by a small minority of saloon keepers to swell their incomes, such as keeping open after hours, selling to minors or drunkards, encouraging or tolerating gambling, and the social evil in connection with their places, etc. We recognize that the amount of beer sold by such improper and unlawful practices is trifling and is more than offset by the patronage of a place conducted according to law and the proprieties. We also recognize that the multiplication of saloons beyond the requirements of the market involves great expense which is by no means made up by additional sales of beer, and that the maintenance of saloons in residence neighborhoods where they are not desired by the residents is neither profitable nor wise, as the antagonism created by their presence involves greater loss than the sales in such saloons could make good.

"We are not, in this present statement, putting our arguments upon the basis of public spirit and consideration of morals or social orders. While yielding to no class of citizens in cherishing these sentiments and considerations, and believing firmly that the temperate use of fermented beverages promotes both morality and social order, the purpose of this present statement is only to dispel the false impression that the commercial interest of the brewer is served by encouraging or conniving at lawlessness.

Ask Aid of the Public.

"While not denying a certain amount of heedless competition which our business has shared with many other lines—the realization of unfortunate and unlooked-for consequences having come home to us only within recent times—we turn with confidence to the fair-minded American public and ask it, in view of many practical instances of our sincerity given in the face of great difficulties to consider the statements above made, and to accept our assurance that the objectionable features of the retail liquor traffic do not rest upon, and are not backed, either by the commercial interests or by any supposed political power of the brewers, but that the elimination of such objectionable features is most earnestly desired by our trade, that we will lend our fullest co-operation toward their extinction, and invite the assistance of public officials and the people in general to that end."

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Charity in Jail.

Minneapolis—Two hungry children and the grieving wife of a prisoner in the Hennepin county jail have brought out the best side of every prisoner in the cells. When the three called to tell the jailer of their destitution every man awaiting trial who had anything to contribute helped to relieve the destitute family.

The father of the children is in the jail awaiting trial. His arrest left the family without food or money, and the mother went to the jail, where she told Jailer Nels Clausen her story. The younger daughter looked up at the jailer. "I'm hungry," she said. "Ain't had nothin' to eat for two whole days."

A prisoner in his cell overheard the remark, called a trusty, and the relief fund was started.

"Here's my last quarter," he said. "Show it to the other prisoners and make them shell out."

From cell to cell passed the trusty, repeating the story over and over again. Pickpockets, thieves, shoplifters, men convicted of or awaiting trial for all manner of crimes—every one brought out his contribution. When the trusty finished his rounds his hand held, mostly in pennies, nickles and dimes, $4.60, which he passed over to the wife. Matron Woodbun took charge of the mother and children a little later and furnished them with the first real solid meal they had eaten in ten days.

Cultivation of Pearls.

Duluth—There is one enterprise in Northern Minnesota that may some day attract attention, and possibly bring wealth to the promoter. If it brings him wealth it surely will bring him fame, for the enterprise is certainly original and unique. It is nothing less than the cultivation of pearls by scientific treatment of fresh water clams. As is well known, many valuable pearls are found in the clams that inhabit the fresh waters of the Northwest, and former Alderman E. R. Jefferson of Duluth has a scheme for treating the mollusks so that each clam may prove a possible pearl bearer. He is not a dreamer by any means. He is one of the survivors of the First Minnesota, and a hard headed business man. Mr. Jefferson made a study of the pearl question as applied to bivalves. He ascertained the scientific theory of the origin of the pearl in the shell fish, and then he figured that the cultivation of the gems was possibly a practical venture.

Indians at State Fair.

Hamline—Through Commissioner of Indian Affairs F. E. Leupp at Washington permission has been granted the board of managers of the State Fair to bring a band of 300 Wahpeton Sioux from the Sisseton reservation in South Dakota to the coming fair. Under the direction of Maj. C. B. Jackson, Indian agent at Sisseton, an Indian village of 100 tepees will be constructed upon the fair grounds, directly north of Machinery hall. Here the Indians will live for one week exactly as they live at home on the reservation. Maj. Jackson will for the week transfer his office and entire force to the temporary village, and an opportunity will be given fair visitors to see jut how Uncle Sam handles the red man.

No. 2 Wheat.

Minneapolis—Losing by 13 votes, the opposition to the amendment making No. 2 northern wheat deliverable on contract in Minneapolis met defeat. As a two-thirds vote was necessary to carry it, and 365 votes were polled, 122 would have blocked it. The opposition polled 109 and the winners 256. No such interest has been shown on 'change since the memorable division seven years ago, on the proposal to locate the new chamber where it now stands as against a plan to build farther up town.

Man Killed.

Duluth—One man was killed and another seriously injured in an explosion in the west end of the Wisconsin Central railroad's tunnel. Tom Maki, who was killed, was cooped up in a narrow shaft and the force of the explosion crushed him to a pulp. John Harji, who escaped death, was at the opening of the shaft and was hurled violently against the rock wall. He was severely bruised and burned about the head and body and probably will lose his eyesight.

Hamline—Dr. Fred Burgan, former end on the University of Minnesota football team and for high school team of Minneapolis, has been engaged to coach the university team next fall.

BIG ROBBERY OF A MAIL POUCH

A POUCH CONTAINING $50,000 DISAPPEARS NEAR KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Mail Was Consigned From Los Angeles to Bankers in New York. Biggest Robbery in History of the P. O. Department.

Los Angeles, June 11.—Reluctant admissions made by the postoffice officials of three cities confirm to some extent the belief that the disappearance of a registered mail pouch somewhere within the jurisdiction of the Kansas City postoffice last Saturday night will prove one of the biggest hauls in the history of the postoffice department.

From private sources it was learned that a package of at least $50,000 in currency was among the contents of the pouch, which carried, in addition, an unusually large number of letters and packages containing money and other valuables to an amount which can only be conjectured, but which may reach $50,000 or more.

The pouch was in transit from this city to New York, and the postal inspectors who have had the case in charge for at least forty-eight hours refuse any explanation of the manner in which it became lost in transfer from one responsible guardian to another.

That a pouch of valuable proportions has disappeared was admitted by the department at Washington, by Postmaster M. H. Flint of Los Angeles and by Inspector W. J. Vickery, attached to the Kansas City postoffice, who appears to have the case for investigation.

There is reason to believe that the $50,000 package of currency, which undoubtedly will prove to be the largest individual loss, was a shipment made by a Los Angeles bank to its New York correspondent.

Postmaster Flint of Los Angeles said it would be impossible for any official of the department to estimate the contents of the missing pouch until the holders of receipts issued on the day in question had made affidavits as to the matter intrusted to the mails.

LONG SHOT BAGS BURGLAR

Policeman at Pierre, S. D., Brings Down His Man.

At a hearing the man gave his name as William Ray and said he recently came from Wyoming, having followed a circus for a few days. He waived examination and was bound over on burglary charge.

To Recover Old Mine.

Arlington, S. D. June 8.—Headed by an old miner nearly 80 years of age, a remarkable party left this village bound for Idaho to open up a gold mine discovered nearly sixty years ago and lost till last fall. During the rush of gold seekers to the West, L. Zuver, in prospecting in the mountains of Idaho found a rich lead. He was at that time operating another mine, and covering all traces of pay dirt left the find until another time. Becoming rich from investments he went East to live.

DAD AND HIS MEMORY.

Old Gentleman Really Had Very Little to Brag About.

It was a severe trial to Mr. Harding that his only son's memory was not all that could be desired. "Where in the world he got such a forgetful streak from is beyond me," said the exasperated father to his wife on one occasion.

"What has he forgotten now?" asked Mrs. Harding, with eyes downcast and a demure expression.

"The figures of the last return from the election on the bulletin-board," and Mr. Harding inserted a finger in his collar as if to loosen it, and shook his head vehemently. "Looked at 'em as he came past not half an hour ago, and now can't tell me.

"As I said to him: 'If you're so stupid you can't keep a few simple figures in your head, why don't you write 'em down on a piece of paper, as I do, and have done all my life, long before I was your age?' "Youth's Companion.

TORTURED SIX MONTHS

By Terrible Itching Eczema—Baby's Suffering Was Terrible—Soon Entirely Cured by Cuticura.

"Eczema appeared on my son's face. We went to a doctor who treated him for three months. Then he was so bad that his face and head were nothing but one sore and his ears looked as if they were going to fall off, so we tried another doctor for four months, the baby never getting any better. His hand and legs had big sores on them and the poor little fellow suffered so terribly that he could not sleep. After he had suffered six months we tried a set of the Cuticura Remedies and the first treatment let him sleep and rest well; in one week the sores were gone and in two months he had a clear face. Now he is two years and has never had eczema again. Mrs. Louis Leck, R. F. D. 3, San Antonio, Tex., Apr. 15, 1907."

UNUSUALLY BRILLIANT.

Lady—Your little brother seems to be bright for his age, doesn't he?

Little Maggie—Well, I should say so. Why, he knows the name of almost every player in the big leagues.

Curious Indian Custom.

The following curious custom is recorded by J. Owen Dorsey in his monograph on the sociology of the Omaha Indians:

"In the spring when the grass comes up there is a council or tribal assembly held to which a feast is given by the head of the Hanga geno. After they decide that planting time has come and at command of the Hanga man a crier is sent through the villages. He wears a robe with hair outside and cries as he goes. 'They do, indeed, say that you will dig the ground! Hallo!' He carries sacred corn, which has been shelled and to each household he gives two or three grains, which are mixed with the seed corn of the household."

After this it is lawful for the people to dig up the soil and plant their crops.

How Things Went.

Elliott H. Peabody is one of the best-known men at the Worcester county courthouse. At one time he and a few others were interested in a business deal which they expected to put through on a certain day. He was unable to be there, so the next day telephoned to a Mr. H—— for particulars. A lady answered the 'phone, and said that Mr. H——was not at home. Mr. Peabody, supposing it to be Mrs. H——, said: "Well, perhaps you can tell me what I want to know. I only wanted to inquire how things went last night."

The lady, in a cheerful, reassuring tone, said: "Oh, nicely! Mrs. H—— is doing fine, and the baby weighs six and a half pounds. I'm the nurse."—Lippincott's.

Right Food Gives Strength and Brain Power.

The natural elements of wheat and barley, including the phosphate of potash, are found in Grape-Nuts, and that is why persons who are run down from improper food pick up rapidly on Grape-Nuts.

"My system was run down by excessive night work," writes a N. Y. man, "in spite of a liberal supply of ordinary food.

"After using Grape-Nuts I noticed improvement at once, in strength, and nerve and brain power.

"This food seemed to lift me up and stay with me for better exertion, with less fatigue. My weight increased 20 lbs. with vigor and comfort in proportion.

"When traveling I always carry the food with me to insure having it."

Fifth: That notice of this hearing of said petition and of said viewers' report and said engineer's report has been duly given, published and posted and mailed as by law required, and that proofs of said service of said notice have been duly made and filed in the office of the County Auditor of said county, and that all other proceedings in the matter have been made and taken in accordance with the provisions of law.

Sagging at Shoulders.

Are you letting yourself sag a bit at the shoulders? Don't, if you want to keep either young or well. There is nothing so fatally easy as to grow round-shouldered. Keep a sharp watch on yourself to prevent it.

Each morning stand up against the jamb of a door and see if you have begun to sag. Also walk around your room each day with a piece of broomstick or short umbrella under each arm and brought across the back. This keeps the chest up and head well poised.

Deep breathing exercises, whenever you think of them, will help ward off those round shoulders, also making a practice to walk with the chest up. This last is the simplest of all preventives, for if it is always practised the rest will follow.

Useful Remodeling Suggestions.

Have you a last year's white linen suit which requires only a few new little touches to make it suitable for this summer? If so, follow one of the latest ideas from Paris, and introduce a bit of color by using colored cretonne for the trimming. Just a touch of it will be sufficient. Perhaps you will need to make only a new set of cuffs, and possibly an adjustable shawl collar, which may be worn or removed at your pleasure.

Then, again, you could introduce a renovating touch in your linen skirt-and-coat suit merely by changing the buttons. If your suit happened to have large pearl buttons last season rip them off, buy some molds and cover them with cretonne.

Whose Fault?

We talk so much, and we think so much more, of the trouble we have with others, that we more than half persuade ourselves that if everybody else were just right, we could get on easily in life, but the fact is that more than half of all our troubles, even of our troubles with others, grow out of our own faults and our own failures and not the faults and failures of other people. Until we get rid of ourselves, or until we are lifted above all selfish thought of ourselves, there is continual trouble for us, however other people bear themselves.—Home Chat.

Cleaned Out.

James—No fear. There were too many baths in that town.—Illustrated Bits.

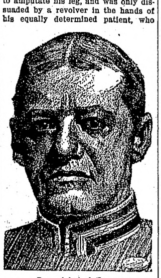
San Francisco.—Rear Admiral Evans' two starred flag fluttered down from the main of the Connecticut in the bay here recently. In three months he will retire from the active list and will then be able to look back on a record which includes service in two wars, the civil and the Spanish-American; two "near wars," the Chilian imbroglio and the Bering sea sealing dispute; command of two fleets, the Asiatic and Atlantic, and accomplishment of the transfer of the latter force from the Atlantic to the Pacific via Magellan in the longest cruise ever attempted by a command of such size. As a flag officer he has had the most important sea command during the period that the new battleships were organized into a fleet and brought the new system of target practice to its present high stage of efficiency. He brings his service afloat to a close now because of ill health, which is partially due to the wound with which he began his conspicuous career at Fort Fisher in the civil war.

His life at the naval academy was an entertaining account of study, discipline and occasional escapades, cut short by the civil war, which called the midshipmen into active service. Then came the landing party at Fort Fisher, when Ensign Evans was shot in the leg and lay for hours on the sand dunes. He was sent to a naval hospital, where a surgeon determined to amputate his leg, and was only dissuaded by a revolver in the hands of his equally determined patient, who preferred to limp, as he has done, on that leg for 45 years rather than utilize a wooden limb. Another charm in the book was a peep behind the scenes which it gave to the reader. As commanding officer of the Yorktown the author remained in Chilian waters throughout the uncertain period following the Baltimore incident at Valparaiso. Here his role was diplomacy, placating the Chilians, but permitting them to see that the Yorktown meant business if trouble came. This was successful service, and when the next ticklish job came along, the Bering sea sealing dispute, which also brought a war cloud, Commander Evans was senior officer present in the North Pacific.



Rear Admiral Evans.

He did well. His reputation was made and the path laid clear before him for command of the crack armored cruiser New York, which went to Europe and gave him opportunity, which he improved, to become the friend of the emperor of Germany. After that he commanded the Indiana and at Santiago the Iowa. A gift for epigram had enabled "Fighting Bob" to epitomize certain situations in a manner which the public approved. His remark that in a certain contingency he "would have made Spanish the court language of hades" brought him no little popularity with the country at large.

Near the close of 1903, when the secession of Panama had raised a great rumpus in South America, Rear Admiral Evans was ordered to proceed to Honolulu, which he did at an average of more than 13 knots for the battleships, the oldest of which was the Oregon.

This was a most creditable performance. A year later Rear Admiral Evans returned home, expecting duty on the lighthouse board, but President Roosevelt personally requested him to take command of the Atlantic fleet. He did so in March, 1905. It then consisted of six battleships. It now has 16.

The Atlantic fleet had gone through a period of uncertain policy. Under Rear Admiral Higginson there were complaints that the men did not get enough liberty or privileges, and it is a fact that desertions were numerous and re-enlistments few. Rear Admiral Barker filled in between the Higginson and Evans commands. The latter brought with him as chief of staff, Capt. J. E. Pillsbury, and the two took hold of the fleet with a firm grip. The men were promptly given as much liberty as possible, athletics of every description were encouraged, baseball and football leagues formed, regular schedules for boxing championships arranged in all classes, and rowing races were regularly held.

My heart was affected, I had smothering spells and sometimes fell unconscious. I got so I couldn't use my arms, my eyesight was impaired and the kidney secretions were badly disordered. I was completely worn out and discouraged when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but they went right to the cause of the trouble and did their work well. I have been feeling well ever since."

Uncle Erastus had been polishing his musket for half an hour; at last he gave it a final love-pat, and turned to his grandson. "Chile," he said, "does you see dat bottle about 30 yards over dere?"

"Shore I does," Rufus agreed.

The old man threw up the musket and balanced it rather shakily. "Whang!" it bellowed. "Now does you see dat bottle?" the old man demanded.

"Yes, I does, granddad."

"I's powerful glad to hear dat, Rufe," the old man said, calmly. "I's been afeard from de way you sorted taters lately dat your eyesight was failing—but hit ain't. You's good fo' several yeahs yit, Rufus."

An Occasion for Rejoicing.

Recently the usual morning exercises of a school were interrupted by a knock at the door. After reading a note which had been handed in, the principal announced that one of the teachers would be unable to be at school for several days, owing to a slight illness. Immediately two boys began to whisper. Upon asking what the trouble was, the boys said they were only talking about the selection of a hymn.

"And what would you like to sing?" said the teacher.

"'Count Your Blessings,'" was the quick response.

THE CIRCUS RESCUE

By HUGH PENDEXTER

He Had a Message for the Doh Hidalgo Tiberius.

TIB and I met at the pier the circus boss just returned from England, and before the cab had landed us at the Broadway office we had consented to engineer a brand-new deal, twofold in its incentive. First, we were to escort a slap-bang animal show around the southwestern circuit, penetrating the home of the frijoles and tortillas, and wrench from the childish grasp of the Aztecs enough crude silver to pay expenses. We were to go to Chihuahua, and possibly farther. Secondly, we were to pick up a troupe of bullfighters and Mazeppa-like dons for a big wild-west show. The latter was the real object, only we wished to invade the firesides of the Montezumas in an off-handed manner, with our mission slightly disguised.

"Well, everything went along in the rut of dull routine until after we left El Paso. Then the curiosity of the mestizos, who form one-half of the population of old Mexico, and who, by the way, are in a state of slavery but slightly removed from the conditions after the Spanish Mayflower tripped into the coast, began to furnish us with annoyance.

"A sun-kissed peon, with a large quantity of 'aguardiente concealed about his person, came to our show-tent and tried to bite his way by the rotund Vermont man without crossing our palms with silver. That's largely metaphor, as we let them in for what they had, except the alcalde, who entered deadhead. 'Take what you can,' was our motto; but the half-breed forestalled a shake-down by explaining, in badly-fractured English, that he had a message for Don Hidalgo Tiberio, which he would only deliver in return for a front seat. It was written by an Americano, he said, who was in Quelta, an adjacent town.

"It seems there were four 'poor devils,' all Americans. They were to Quelta, the letter said, waiting to be sent to the salt mines for life.. Now a man who knows Mexico would rent the salt mines out to his dearest enemy and live in Hades—if he owned both. The letter was a brief one, the writer merely stating his prospects, and saying he had heard from his guards of Smith's presence in Chihuahua. He begged Tiberius to resque him if he had any love for the children of the Star-Spangled Banner.

"Tib knew Spanish more or less, chiefly less, but he carried a gilt-headed cane that woudd make up the difference in effect on the average alcalde and a quick trot to the halls of justice gave him an insight to the situation. It seems Murphy, the writer, and his friends had been foolish enough to hire out as a train crew on the Central, and that their train, near Quelta, had run over a big bug's hired man. Now the average peon, after absorbing all the visible supply of aguardiente, will hunt all over the map for the most outre place in which to sleep off his Alice-blue rabbits, and nothing appeals to his sordid imagination so much as a bust railroad track when it comes to the trundle beds.

"The upshot of it all was I hustled back to El Paso, where we had some green-room effects of a new opera stored, and as fleet-footed as possible I hiked back to Chihuahua, accompanied by two big trunks. Meanwhile Tib had sent our bill poster to Quelta to hang up a few valentines, advertising the coming of the show, and incidentally to slip into Murphy's hand a note of minute instructions.

"This done, Tib tried to get me to go north and sit on the farther bank of the Rio and await the last curtain. Of course I wasn't for that, and he blessed me and said we would probably wind up as salt miners. Then he directed me to throw some hardware and cartridges into the cages, and on Saturday morning, with two closed animal wagons, we started for Quelta. We had one man who could drive chain-lightning, let alone the most erratic Mexican mule, and, best of all, we could trust him.

"It took us a day to cover the short stretch over their rotten roads, but at last we arrived at Quelta amid a Toltec buzz of excitement, and pitched the side-show tent, as if preparing for the Sunday performance.

"'My plans are built like a watch, and if it don't happen in five minutes I've missed fire,' groaned Tib, as we unlocked the covers to the carts.

"Then it happened. First we heard a yell; then half a dozen champagne bottles opened in quick succession, and the little chapel bell began ding-donging excitedly.

"Next, with fierce panting, four men burst through the chaparral that came up to the rear of our tent and plunged inside the white walls. I had just time to notice they were haggard and unkempt and then in a second the wooden covers were down to allow them to enter the cages, and then snapped back in place again.

"'I'm afraid, Billy,' declared Tib, calmly, as he began sorting out some posters, 'that the rest of the show won't arrive in time for to-morrow's performance.'

"Just as he said this a bevy of villagers, headed by our trusty driver, Collins, burst through the canvas, yelling and brandishing carbines and other impedimenta.

"Four men escaped from the soldiers, Mr. Smith, and I told the guards I thought they came this way,' panted Collins, with an expressive wink.

"'What?' roared Tib, in Spanish. 'Law-breakers escaped! Free passes to the brave men who capture 'em. I believe they did pass this way behind the tent in the brush. I heard a crashing and thought it was a mule. My lion growled fiercely. Hark! He is growling now!"

"The gang paused in running away to hear the growl and Tiberius, standing near Murphy's cage, hissed: 'Growl, you villain, growl!'

"And thereat a most blood-chilling roar came from Murphy's den, and the others, to make sure, began to throw in a series of yells that would cause a Bowery gallery-god to go home and through sheer envy take lessons. The crowd fell back in a wave; it simply swept 'em off their feet, sir. To cap the climax Collins cried: 'Don't let 'em get excited, Mr. Smith! Remember the three men mauled to death in El Paso!'

"After they'd gone, Tib turned to me and grinned. 'I think we'll win the trick. And isn't that Collins a jewel!'

"Now each cage was divided by a grating of bars, and in each cosy nook was one of the comic opera suits I'd brought from El Paso. In designing these animal make-ups Tib had made use of air chambers, so that when a man got tucked into one and the bicycle pump had been agitated for padding you had a real, life-like beast, with muscles standing out like barnacles on a forgotten dredge. Of course, at the best it was a fierce counterfeit and when the quadruped forgot and stood on his hind legs the effect was simply stupendous. First Tib ordered Murphy to slip into the lion's pelt, and Murphy was mad. He said he was Irish and would pose as a harp, but never as an emblem of Merry England. Tib talked to him like a hired man to a sick horse, and at last the metamorphosis was effected. Then the others were speedily transformed into a black bear, a tiger and a hyena respectively.

"After they had struggled into their masquerades and Tib had used the pump on the air-pockets we dropped the covers to get the tout ensemble.

"Tib snapped the barricades in place in a jiffy, and said stiffly: 'I never give a performance unless I have all my animals. These are but the advance wagons and tent. If the others do not arrive I cannot exhibit.'

"'But, senor, I have tickets. I have invited my friends. As alcalde I shall command you to exhibit to-morrow to prove you are not a humbug,' cried the intruder.

"'That comes of profanity, Murphy,' groaned Tib after the alcalde left us. 'I brought these suits along as a safeguard, so that if anyone should get a peep the fleeting glance would not arouse suspicion. Now, hang it all! we've got to give a performance to placate the mayor. For if we don't we can never leave town. So you've got to learn your wild-wood lessons, my lads.'

"Then the unthankful beasts began to protest, and Murphy and Reynolds wanted to be the tiger and sleep, but Weisman swore he'd claw the lining out of anyone that disturbed his feline ease. Burke, the bear, didn't know what kind of a noise to make, and it took Tib ten minutes to teach him to say 'woof' in a bruinesque manner. Then we took each one in turn and gave the key, and made him practice his call of the wild so there would be some individuality. Then we waited for the mayor.

"'I can't see in the bloody thing,' growled the lion as the party swept inside.

"'Fear them not, senors and senoritas. For though they rage and writhe in anger, they know their master's voice.—Look out, Burke, pull in your left leg!"—the last in English. 'They never dream of incurring my displeasure. Nero, here, your excellency, ate three men and two women before he was brought low in captivity, and has added a choice collection of thumbs and fingers to the total since then. The villagers near his wild, free home called him "Ah-Ghee-Dah," which being interpreted means, "He-Who-Eats - Men - Gladly." Growl, Murph. Ah, not so loud. Even a lion has limitations.' And the sound of the Irishman buying freedom with a series of bull-like bellows swept by me and caused the chocolate populace without to shudder.

"'Now we come to the hyena, the most treacherous of all beasts,' continued Tib, skillfully drawing the spectators away from Murphy's cage, as that animal, I observed with horror, tried to scratch his left shoulder-blade with a most unlion-like contortion. 'His record was kept for three years by my head trainer as to the number of digits he has chewed off, then the task was given up because of its monotony. So, not too near, senors and senoritas—not too near. See him show his teeth in vain—show your teeth, Reynolds—repining for his native lair. Note his antipathy to Nero, the monarch of the Abyssinian wild, for he hates and dreads his roar. —Roar, Murph.'

"But Nero, in desperation to escape a flea, began to clamber to his hind legs, and Tib saw the move just in time to jump to the bars and smite him on the nose.

"'Damn ye!' mumbled Nero.

"'By all the saints! it sounded as though he spoke!' gasped a little, dried-up senorita.

"'Ahem! His long association with men has given his hoarse growl and almost human quality,' said Tib, his face going a bit white. 'Or maybe it's because of the men he has eaten. Down, you devil! down!' he cried, jumping to the hyena's cage and striking him with his cane to distract their attention. Reynolds was lying quiescent at the time, and at the blow promptly raised his head in amazement. 'Snarl!' hissed Tib, in English, and Reynolds made good with a long-drawn hoot that sounded like a barn-owl suffering from diphtheria.

"'These idiots will see their finish yet, Billy,' cried Tib to me, in disgust. 'It's them to the salty brine all right, I guess.'

"This caused the quartet to overdo it as they attempted to cinch freedom by cunning acting. None of them had ever read nature stories, however, and only Tib's ready cane and warning—'Back! back! Not too near!'—saved the day. 'Where I can approach with impunity,' he explained, turning easily to the alcalde, 'you would feel their cruel fangs. Ah, bite, would you?' This to the bear, who was lying perfectly quiet, and Tib gave him a poke that brought a cloud of dust from his flanks, whereat he raised his paw to straighten his head, that now was at right angles with all the laws of nature.

"'Behold the lion about to spring!' shrieked Tib, thrusting into the ribs of the king of the forest and thus bringing him into a more reasonable posture.

"'Fer th' love iv—o-o-o-gh!' spoke and snarled Murphy, in his rich brogue.

"'Wonderful!' gasped the alcalde and his followers.

"But I never heard a lion use such a delightful Irish accent before or since in giving his howl of rage.

"'Now we come to the Royal Bengal tiger, bought by me from the sultan of Skowhegan for $10,000,' rattled Tib, rapidly, drawing his auditors to the second bin. To his horror he found the royal stretched out on his stomach, legs straight behind, while the head, turned upside down, stared complacently at the top of the cage. 'Notice the wonderful elasticity of his neck,'—and snap! Tib had reached in and turned the head-piece into place. It simply swept 'em off their feet, sir. It didn't need a naturalist sharp to detect that the tiger was abnormal in some respects.

"'Thanks, mate,' growled Weisman. 'The dust—'

"But the lion and the hyena promptly came to the rescue and drowned the visitors' exclamation of wonder in a series of prolonged yells that put crimps in my tympanums even out at the entrance.

"'Ah, he purrs, senors. He purrs, senoritas.—Purr, Weisman. At last he is in good humor,' cried Tib. Then in sotto English: 'Group your legs, you would-be suicide! Cluster yourself! It's no use, Billy,' cried Tib to me. 'I would have saved them if I could, but they won't have it so;' and all the time he was pointing dramatically at the bear. 'Kindly throw something at Murph. He's about to stand up.' I tossed a tent-peg, that didn't do the harp a bit of good, and his muttered curse was only drowned by Tib's addressing the bear.

"Well, sir, it was the most sweaty 15 minutes I ever put in. You see, if the game was discovered, we were in as bad a box as the fugitives. And when the sight-seers began to file out I felt as limp as a rag.'

"'I shall come again when the whole menagerie is here,' declared the alcalde, on leaving. 'Wonderful and marvelous!'

"'Scene first and curtain,' panted Tib, closing the tent-flaps leisurely, while I shoved bottles and fodder to the animals. In three seconds their disgusted faces were slipped free from the head-pieces and were busy with food and drink.

"Then we held a council of war and decided we would leave immediately while the alcalde and other citizens were having their siestas. And the way Collins and a dozen peons emulated the Arab in striking that tent was a caution. From the natives we learned the guards had got no trace of the fugitives and that Chihuahua was being searched by inches. Tib accordingly decided to skirt the town and make for the Rio.

"We got away from Quelta all right, and whenever we met any of the home people we stopped and inquired for the missing caravan, while the inmates of the wagon let off a few howls to heighten the effect. By night we were abreast of Chihuahua and drove slowly north until morning, when we got a change of mules. Then we crept nearer freedom, but never appearing to hurry, and on the second night out we allowed the four men to ride on top of their homes in their underclothing. But with the sun they again put on their trimmings and hopped inside. By this time Tib and I were nearly dead for want of sleep; for although we let Collins slumber every little once in a while, we dared not quit our posts. At last we neared the Rio, and the men wanted to take off their suits and make one dash for it, but Tib said nay. On inquiring from a half-breed we at last learned we had only a few miles to make.

"'Now let's go through with a rush,' I suggested wearily.

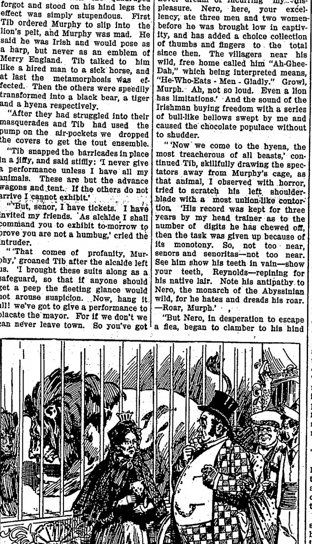
"'We'll have to,' replied Tib. 'I see the glitter of their shields.'

"And looking back I made out a party of horsemen galloping a mile in our rear, while the sunlight played brightly on something they carried in their hands.

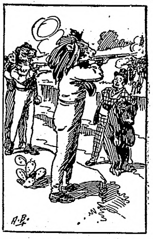
"With a yell to the mules we bumped and tore along, the heavy wagons swaying fearfully as we went down a decline. Nearer and nearer crept the pursuers, their shouts now reaching us, but before they could get within shooting distance we caught the glimmer of the Rio, where in the dry season the stream is a mere trickle. Smash went the head cart against a boulder, and a wheel was broken into toothpicks. Then in a second we were all out, making for the rock-studded stream, while the soldiers coming up dismounted and began to take pot-shots at us.

"They had got wind of our game some way and did not seem to be greatly surprised at beholding four fierce denizens of the jungle scrambling, wading and swimming through the stream, each armed with a rifle or revolver.

"I reached home-base first, closely followed by Collins. And, sir, I shall never forget that spectacle. There was the lion, unable to loosen his head-piece, swearing profusely in rich Celtic as he sent back shot for shot. There were the hyena and tiger, very chummy, using revolvers. And in the rear, in the midst of the danger zone, old Tiberius was ruining his show-clothes by supporting the bear by the scruff of the neck. I howled to the lion, and he fiercely turned and went back to assist my patron. Once they got Burke ashore we found a neat bullet hole through his neck, but no arteries or large veins were cut. And I didn't feel a bit bad when I saw that two of the enemy needed the kind care of a physician when they rode away. But, incidentally, we lost one of the best animal shows that was ever foolish enough to leave the States.



"BY ALL THE SAINTS! IT SOUNDED AS THOUGH HE SPOKE!"



There Was the Lion Swearing in Rich Celtic as He Sent Shot for Shot.

CREOSOTE in the MAKING

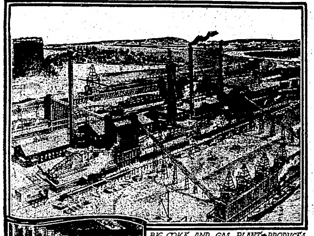
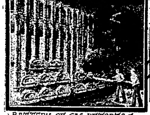
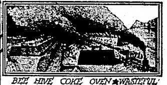
GREAT WOOD PRESERVATIVE HAS INTERESTING HISTORY



BIG COKE AND GAS PLANT★PRODUCES COKE AND GAS AND MANY VALUABLE BY-PRODUCTS, AMONG THEM CREOSOTE OIL.



BATTERY OF GAS RETORTS★FROM BY-PRODUCT OF COAL-TAR CREOSOTE IS MADE.



BEE HIVE COKE OVEN★WASTEFUL PROCESS, AS ALL BY-PRODUCTS ARE LOST

One of the significant signs of the times is the awakening of the American people to the dangerous destruction of their forest wealth, and the necessity of a wise use of what remains of it. Undoubtedly, in the future the nation must utilize its forest crop less wastefully, both in the woods and in the mill, and must make provision for future crops; but that is not the only way to prolong the timber supply. If the service of the wood which is used can be lengthened, it will largely decrease the amount of timber that must be cut.

And this can be done by treating the wood with chemicals which will poison the low forms of plant life which attack it and cause it to decay. The growth of timber is slow, and when the dearth of it becomes pressing, a new crop cannot be grown quickly enough to prevent a time of severe shortage. Preservative treatment of timber has the advantage, as a remedy, that it can be applied immediately. Its importance is, therefore, attracting increasing attention.

Many chemicals have been used for the preservation of timber, among them blue vitriol, corrosive sublimate and chloride of zinc. The most effective preservative is the substance called "creosote oil," or "creosote." On account of the similarity of the names, many people suppose this to be the creosote obtained from wood, such as can be obtained, refined for medicinal purposes, at the drug stores. But the two are quite different, and should not be confused. The creosote used in wood preservation is obtained from coal, by a most interesting process.

Nearly every city now uses gas for light and fuel, and many people know that this illuminating gas is often made from coal. But the many things besides gas which are obtained in this process are not so well known. It is one of these other products from which is obtained the creosote oil used for wood preservation.

To understand how all these things are produced, it is necessary to know something which the chemists can tell us. Coal, they say, is composed partly of the substance called carbon, partly of compounds of this carbon with the gas hydrogen, which they have named "hydrocarbons." When the coal is heated sufficiently, away from air, the hydrocarbons are driven off in the form of gas. Illuminating gas is made by subjecting coal of the proper kind to this process, which is known as "dry distillation." The coal is put into a long, fire-clay oven, or "retort," shaped much like a giant model of the little cakes which the bakers call "lady fingers," the retorts being about 13 feet long, two feet wide and 16 inches deep. A number of these retorts are built side by side, in three rows, one above the other, the ends of the retorts being supported in a brick wall which also extends around the ends of the rows and over the top, and thus entirely incloses the retorts. Fire, from furnaces below, is carried by flues into this inclosure, so that the retorts are entirely enveloped in flame and can be heated to a very high temperature.

The retorts are partly filled with coal, after which they are sealed, so that no air can get into them. They are then heated to a temperature of about 2,100 degrees Fahrenheit. Under this intense heat almost all the hydrocarbons of the coal pass off, leaving behind only the "fixed" carbon, which comes out of the retort as coke. Many of the lighter compounds distilled off by the heat will remain in the form of gas when they are cooled to ordinary temperatures, and it is some of these which make the gas finally used for lighting and fuel. But as it comes from the retorts, the gas is like a thick, yellowish-green smoke, and could not be used at all for such purposes. This gas escapes from the retorts into a series of large and costly machines where the lighting gas is cleansed from its impurities, and the different by-products are separated from each other. First are great "condensers," in which the gases are cooled. The cooling condenses the heavier compounds into thick liquids, which are then left behind.

One of the substances later removed from the gas is ammonia, and from this product is made the ammonia water which is used in every household.

The heavy, strong smelling, black liquid which is collected in the cooling of the gas is what we know as coal tar. This is an exceedingly complex mixture of substances. From it are obtained not only creosote oil, but most of the dyes which are used nowadays, perfumes, and even flavoring extracts.

Gas, coal tar and coke are also made in what is known as the by-product coke oven, which is adapted to different objects, but is operated on the same principle. Its coal tar is equally as good as the gas works tar for making creosote oil. In recent years a great amount of gas has been made in the United States by another process, and is known as water gas. This process also produces a tar, which looks much like coal tar and is often difficult to tell from it. But this tar is really derived from petroleum, and does not make a good oil for preserving wood from decay. Wood creosote, with which so many people are familiar, is likewise obtained from a wood tar which is produced by distilling wood. But like water gas tar creosote, wood creosote is not so good for wood preservation as is the coal tar creosote. When creosote is bought for that purpose, therefore, it should be certain that it is coal tar creosote.

To obtain creosote oil from coal tar the tar is, in its turn, distilled. But this distillation is like that used for other liquids instead of that employed for the coal. The still is heated, and as the heat increases the "light oils" first pass over. Among these is the familiar carbolic acid. This is a powerful antiseptic, but it is not desirable in a wood preservative, for it evaporates so readily that it soon becomes lost from the wood. When a temperature of about 400 degrees has been reached, the distillate is turned into another receiver, and from this point on to 600 or 700 degrees creosote oil is produced. One of the substances which is contained in this mixture is "napthalene," from which common moth balls are made. Coal tar creosote, thus produced, is the great wood preservative.

The residue remaining in the still after the distillation is "pitch," which is chiefly used together with coal tar saturated felt in the preparation of gravel or slag roofing. In America roofing pitch is the chief end for which tar is distilled. In Europe this is not so true. Now pitch for roofing must be rather soft. Therefore tar distillation is not carried so far in this country as it is in Europe. For creosote oil it would be better if it were carried farther, since the substances which distill at the higher temperatures in most cases neither evaporate in the air nor dissolve in water as readily as those which distill more easily. Consequently they stay in the wood for a longer time, and protect it correspondingly from decay.

Much study is being devoted by the United States forest service to creosote oil, to determine what its composition should be to give the best results in preserving timber, under different conditions, and how the most desirable creosotes may be obtained. The reports of these studies, together with detailed description of the more economical processes of applying the preservatives to wood, have been worked into circulars which the government has placed at the disposal of all users of timber and which will be furnished to all who make the request of the forester at Washington.

SCENES IN CAIRO

The Funny Things One Sees in Smiling Round the World

By
MARSHALL P. WILDER

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

A first drive in Cairo is a joy—the objects of interest are so unceasing and so replete with historical meaning. The first thing to stir one's memory is the opera house, built in six weeks, so there might be a fitting home of song for the company of great French singers brought over by the royal spendthrift Ismail to assist in the gorgeous celebration attending the opening of the Suez canal.

Here was given the first performance of Verdi's opera "Aida," written expressly for the occasion. The performance was further unique from the fact that Mariotte Bey, the great Egyptologist and discoverer of the Rossetta stone, gave his attention to the production, so that every detail of scenery, costume and plot was historically correct, while the Egyptian museum was ransacked for properties and jewels. It was probably the greatest stage production ever seen, or that ever could be given, and was only possible at a time when Ismail spent $21,000,000 on the celebration attending the opening of the canal that was, first and last, his country's ruin.

Street Scene.

In the Monski, as well as other characteristically native streets on the way to the bazaars, every phase of life may be seen. Open shops, scarcely six feet across, with imperturbable proprietors smoking waterpipes, a constant procession through the streets of donkeys, carts loaded with veiled women, camels treading stealthily, one of which was seen daintily nibbing at the flowers on the Parisian bonnet of the lady in a victoria just ahead.

Flocks of geese and turkeys might be seen driven along the street by venders, who guide them with a little switch, keeping them under perfect control.

Very laughable is the rivalry between the keepers of the bazaars and bitter the denunciation that fills the ear of the foreigner as he stops to make a purchase. The strange medley of tongues and the stranger pronunciation of his own language makes the buyer stare and then double up with laughter.

If he selects an article from the stand of the merchant on his right the proprietor of the stand on his left will shriek in his ear: "No buy of heem! Heem verra bad man! Heem tief! Heem fadder tief! Heem mudder tief! His granfader tief! Heem granmudder tief! No buy of heem!" While the imperturable proprietor on the right will respond in a low guttural, like a bass solo following a soprano cadenza: "Heem big liar! Heem go jail! Heem got notting! Me got ebberyting! Look you! Shmakkin kip (smoking cap), packet snif (pocket knife), 'ooble-booble (hubble-bubble, or waterpipe), preera-beed (prayer beads, or rosary)." Then, with a shout of triumph: Shlippers all! Shlippers mooch! Beada shlippers! Silka shlippers! Golda shlippers! Me got all! Heem big liar! Heem go jail!" and so on ad infinitum.

By which my reader will perceive that shopping in Cairo is not all of heaven, nor yet of the other place, and that the amenities are much subordinate to that love which is the root of all evil.

A wedding is quite likely to follow next in the wonderful street procession. First a clown or mountebank, dancing, grimacing, rolling in the dirt, going through all sorts of antics for the amusement of the people. He is followed by men playing on a collection of shrieking and wailing musical instruments. Then comes the bride, sometimes in a closely-shuttered carriage, draped with tinsel-trimmed velvet, or, what is much more picturesque, a curtained litter slung between two camels. After her comes the furniture for her new home, for a bride is expected to provide everything, even to the bridegroom's trousseau. This plenishing is all piled on camels, who go swaying along, sneering superciliously as if deploring the foolishness of these human customs. A camel's expression of conscious superiority must be rather trying, if one sees much of it.

It seems almost a waste of time to have so much ceremony attend so easily dissolved a relation as marriage is in Cairo. A man, with or without any just cause, has only to say before witnesses, "Woman, I divorce thee!" and repeat it three times, and he is as free as before he married her. He has to return to her her house plenishing and she returns her dowry to him. This dowry consists of one-third of a man's possessions, which he settles on her when he marries her.

According to the Mohammedan faith a man may have four wives, that is, all to onct, as they say in the west. He may divorce and re-marry, still keeping to his allowance of four, as many times as he likes.

All these sights, and many more may be seen during a drive to see the dancing, or, more properly, whirling dervishes, who dance every Friday afternoon. Friday is the Mohammedan Sunday, and in the afternoon they conduct this performance, which is a religious ceremony, but palpably worked up for the benefit of the hundreds of tourists who flock to see it.

The performance takes place on an inclosed circular floor, with rugs about the edge, upon which at the beginning the dervishes, to the number of about 16, sit, wrapped in big black cloaks and wearing tall felt hats. The sheik, in a green turban, sits on a rug of extra elegance, with the koran on a cushion in front of him. A solo on a wailing flute opened the performance, piercing squeals and breathless trills putting our nerves and teeth on edge, until an unseen man in the balcony cuts it short by beginning to intone in a high-pitched voice a long incantation about a young person by the name of Mall; at least her name was all we heard. After that the dervishes arose, cast their cloaks on the ground and stood revealed in white robes, with exceedingly full skirts, from under which their bare feet peeped out.

Then they began a solemn procession about the space, bowing to their neighbors either way as they reached the rug of the sheik. This was done three times, the men walking and bowing, not without grace and dignity. Suddenly, as the third round was completed, the first man flung out his arms and began to spin round and round, his skirts standing away stiffly from his limbs. One could not but expect to see him suddenly duck, his skirts billowing up around him, as little girls do when they play the game of "making cheeses." Momentarily he was joined by others, until the ring became filled with whirling figures, each holding its arms and head in some distinctive position, some going about sedately in one spot, while others piouretted airily in and out among the other dancers.

One man had his arms held out in a singularly appealing manner, while his head was cuddled down on his shoulder, giving him a ridiculously coy expression.

This is the last act, for after about 15 minutes of this whirling the dervishes cease, resume their cloaks and the performance is over.

From there we were driven to see the howling dervishes, a different denomination who conduct their religious worship on different lines.

Smoking Waterpipes.

The commercial instinct of this sect seems more highly developed than that of the other, for here the sum of two piastees each was charged for admittance. As we entered the door a great volume of sound greeted us and rose and fell like the sound of men's voices chanting.

Here was another inclosed circular space, another venerable sheik in green turban and about 20 dervishes seated around the rail, all chanting: "Allah il Allah!" their bodies swaying from side to side as they shouted the assertion that "God is God" over and over again.

They next stood up and, swaying back and forth convulsively, emitted gusty sighs that gradually grew into horrible noises as leader after leader sprang in front of them, setting the pace faster and faster, a new leader taking the place of the exhausted one as he turned and bowed to the sheik, signifying that he could do no more. All this time a blind sheik chanted unceasingly in a high piccolo voice.

The bodies swayed and jerked more and more quickly, the noises grew to frenzied howls and animal-like sounds that reminded one forcibly of the zoo at feeding time. A tall, gaunt desert priest stepped in front of the men, bowing and swaying, his long hair alternately covering his face and tossed back over his shoulders.

Under his leadership the dervishes became frantic, their eyes were glazed, foam flew from their lips and some fell prone from exhaustion. We stayed to see no more, but hurried out, followed by the volume of inhuman cries and howls.

PAGEANT for PHILADELPHIA

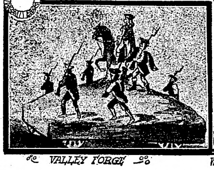
BIG HISTORICAL CELEBRATION TO MARK 225TH ANNIVERSARY OF CITY

LANDING OF PENN AT PHILADELPHIA



VALLEY FORGE

WILLIAM PENN

Philadelphia is to have a pageant to celebrate Founders' week next October, which occasion will mark the two hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the city of Brotherly Love, and it is expected that this gorgeous display will attract more attention even than did the celebration 25 years ago. There will be, according to the elaborate plans which are being formulated, a week of parades of various kinds, military, naval, civic and those by various societies, but, while each in turn will be viewed by admiring throngs, the historic pageant really will be the show piece. So much is expected of it by those who have it in charge that they proudly announce that it will be the first historic pageant ever seen in the United States. Of course by that is intended that this will surpass all that have gone before.

Details of this imposing show are not available at this time, which is five months before the event, but sufficient is known to predict a procession of much magnificence and of greater historical accuracy in the matter of costumes than has been heretofore seen in processions in this country. At present the programe provides for 40 floats and about 5,000 characters properly costumed to represent the times portrayed by the pageant, which will comprise quite three centuries, beginning with the Indians and continuing through the Dutch, Swedish and finally the English regime on the Delaware.

There will be floats representative of the principal historic incidents connected with Philadelphia since the arrival of Penn in 1682. These will include the landing of the proprietary governor, the making of the treaty with the Indians at Shackamaxon, the early life and manners of the colonists, the beginning of the revolution in Philadelphia and the revolutionary period in the city, together with floats showing the Liberty Bell and Jefferson writing the immortal Declaration of Independence. The bell, of course, will appear in propria persona.

A pleasing feature of this part of the pageant will be details of continental troops. The famous Troop of Horse, now known as the First City troop, will be shown escorting Washington through the city, and it is expected that some of the original uniforms will be used. Another float will show Robert Morris, the financier of the revolution, who raised the necessary funds to carry on the war when things looked dark for the Americans; and the Battle of Germantown also will be portrayed in tableau. While the anniversary of the battle falls on October 4, as that is the day of the beginning of Founders' Week celebration, the event will not be celebrated this year until the 6th of the month.

In a similar manner the city during the war of 1812 will be treated of in educative and artistic floats. It is interesting to note that the financier of the government in this conflict, as was also the case in that of the civil war, was a Philadelphian. In the war of 1812 Stephen Girard came to the rescue of the country when no investor appeared to want its loan. The financier will be duly commemorated by a float. The period of the Mexican war also will be treated by floats. The civil war period will include some representation of Jay Cooke, the financier of that struggle, and a most interesting feature of this part of the procession will be details of men, about 20 each, correctly uniformed to represent every one of the Philadelphia regiments which enlisted for the war.

At this time only the merest outline of the extent of the historic pageant can be given, but it is said that the cost of this feature of the celebration will be not less than $50,000, and that estimate, in view of the elaborate program, seems to be conservative.

As the pageant is in the hands of a committee which numbers about 200 members, nearly all of them specialists in their particular lines, it is reasonable to expect something surpassing any pageant ever given in this country.

The contrast between the very high character of the pageant next October and the one 25 years ago is likely to be striking. The advance made here in all lines of art and decoration and not to say knowledge has been such during the quarter century which has elapsed as to warrant the assertion that those who witnessed the display in 1882 and who see that of next autumn will at once recognize the superiority of the latter.

The celebration in 1882 was arranged with as much skill and as much art as was then obtainable. It was notwithstanding its enormous defects the most ambitious display of its kind that had been up to that time witnessed in this country. The pageant, however, was not generally regarded as a success. In the first place it was shown at night, and displays which now would be easily abtainable were not even imagined then. The 37 floats which comprised the procession were shown in three divisions. The first of these dealt with the past history of Philadelphia. The second was a sort of Mardi Gras show of the famous women of history and the third an even more foreign addition, as it depicted scenes from the life of Rama.

Clearly it was because the imaginations of the persons in control could not conceive more than ten ideas for Philadelphia historical floats that these excrescences were brought in. They were solely lugged in to lengthen out the procession, and as was evident to every one had nothing to do with the landing of Penn.

Illumination was provided by the method then much in vogue for night procession, the calcium. There was one calcium light to each float, either preceding or following the float as the case demanded. There were also men walking alongside of the floats with Bengal lights, which did not always provide the kind of illumination desiderd. Then, too, the characters on the floats appeared to have much difficulty in maintaining their position, and the float representing Penn receiving the charter from Charles II suffered most from this difficulty. Indeed, many of the floats in actual use were almost ridiculous in effect.

Nearly all these floats were provided with short posts reaching to the hips of the characters and intended to provide the latter with a "purchase." The attempts of the characters to keep from falling off some of the wagons amused the small boys, who occasionally shouted words of encouragement to the participants. That part of the pageant which had nothing in common with the event celebrated seemed to most please the crowds. The reason for this lay in the fact that on these the characters usually were shown in a seated position, which they could maintain easily and gracefully while the lumbering trucks bearing the floats rumbled over the street pavement.

In the first division of the pageant the scenes represented were Penn receiving the charter; the landing of Penn at Philadelphia, forming the great law or frame of government at Philadelphia on April 2, 1683; Penn discussing the boundary with Lord Baltimore; the treaty with the Indians; Bouquet's battle with the Indians at Bushy Run in 1763; the fight around Chew's house during the battle of Georgetown; Washington's army marching to Valley Forge, and last, delivery of beaver skins at Windsor castle in 1780. This latter event was the last acknowledgment of fealty of the province of Pennsylvania to the mother country. The final float in this division was symbolical of a reunited country.

The Colonel's Campaign

BY CHARLES MOREAU HARGIS

(Copyright.)

Col. Leith was proud of his possession. The big, red, vociferous car exactly suited his mood—for he liked to do things hurriedly; he worshiped swiftness. Even now he had left the fort by the valley road and was dustily tearing toward Rockwell City, four miles away.

So Col. Leith went unconsciously on his way, driving his motor car faster and faster—until something happened. Something usually does happen with motor cars. Several things happened first and last with this one and the colonel.

This was a comparatively harmless happening. He cavorted around the bluffs by the city's edge, careened through the deep cut by the river—and came plump on Grace Dewey, daughter of the best known ranchman in the valley.

Her mount reared, but trained horsewoman that she was, she kept her seat in the saddle. The car wheezed and the horse reared again. This time she did not keep her seat, but went down in a limp bundle to the hard road, while the horse raced up the ravine, as if it, too, were working for a speed record.

To make the incident the more striking, Lieut. Roberts just then came cantering down the highway, his accoutrements jangling and his cavalry charger doing its prettiest gait.

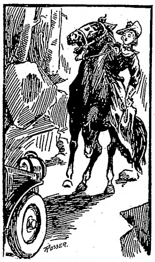
Roberts and the colonel were at the girl's side simultaneously.

"I am sure I did not mean—" began the colonel.

"Let me assist you, miss," and the lieutenant was lifting her, his arm around her shoulders and her jaunty hat resting against his coat sleeve. At that identical moment the lieutenant and the colonel parted company as friends. They did not realize that they were at the separation of the ways, but it was so. Miss Dewey opened her eyes, looked into the colonel's face; then recognized the lieutenant—and straightened up, fully recovered. They were not strangers; all had met at Mrs. Marson's reception a month before.

"I am not hurt—not hurt. But where is Rex?" she asked, looking anxiously around.

"I think, madam," replied the colonel, bowing with awkward and old-fashioned courtesy, "that he is just crossing the Rocky mountains by this time, if he kept on going at the rate he started. But may I take you home?"



Her Mount Reared.

He motioned toward the vociferous red car that panted and rumbled by the roadside.

With Roberts riding stiffly behind, talking at intervals to the passenger, they made their way slowly across the long bridge and over the broad valley toward the wide-porched bungalow-dwelling of the Dewey ranch.

The next day the colonel sat in his leather chair and again went over the affair at the ravine. A long time he mused, and now and again a smile lighted the bronzed face. Twenty years in the army, four at West Point—yes, it was time. He would think more about it.

From that time it was a race between the colonel and the lieutenant.

The colonel drove as swiftly as ever; the lieutenant took lonely horseback rides. Then one evening Roberts called on his commander.

"I would have absence for a few days, sir."

"Going to leave us?" queried the colonel. "You know we may have marching orders for the maneuvers soon."

"No—no, not a great distance, sir." The lieutenant was embarrassed.

The leave was granted and the colonel was secretly glad to do it. The field would be clear for awhile, at least. He ordered his car for the early evening.

"See that it is in perfect trim, James," said he to his servant. "I may want to take a long run."

Out over the open plains he went, 30 miles an hour, the fresh breath of the level lands beating his face and the inspiration of wide reaches of untrammeled view delighting his eyes. Turning into the valley along the river, he came to the tall cottonwoods, once the hiding places of savages with whom the early commanders of the garrison had fought. The lamps flickered on the underbrush—What—stop! Reverse the engine! Close in front were rearing figures. Two horses were plunging in the roadside, one had fallen, tangled in a barbed wire fence that some reckless farmer had strung close to the road. The colonel leaped from his car and ran to help the travelers out of their predicament.

"Be careful, miss—there, I'll help you up," and he lifted from the vines and tall grasses beside the road a slender form garbed in gray.

"Is she hurt?" came a voice from the depth of the tangled saplings, as her companion forced his way toward them.

Turning, the colonel recognized in the bedraggled cavalier—Roberts.

He almost feared to look at the young woman who was regaining her feet—but he did. It was as he suspected.

"I am so sorry—" he began. "I supposed there was a clear road."

"We don't blame you at all," replied Roberts, cheerfully, "but the fact is, it is somewhat embarrassing. Grace's—Miss Dewey's horse has run off and we—that is, well, we want to get to Rockwell City mighty bad—and quick!"

"I am sure it was no fault of yours," added the young woman, now regaining her feet and showing a constantly increasing discomfiture.

The red motor car glared at the trio wickedly as if it were glad it had disconcerted the plans of any enemy of its master.

"Now, colonel, I hate to tell you this," began Roberts, nervously. "I am sure you will sympathize with me and with Grace — Miss Dewey. You see, colonel, we are—that is, well, we are going to be married."

If the red automobile had turned somersaults, if the river had suddenly stood on end, the colonel could scarcely have been more taken aback. He turned his face so that it would not show pale in the glare of the pilot lamp.

"Yes, I understand," he finally managed to say.

"And Miss Dewey's father does not like it very well," with the suspicion of a laugh in the words. "In fact, he will probably be after us when he finds out. We have come this roundabout way to throw him off the track—and you see where we are?"

"Yes, I see," was the slow response. The colonel's voice was strangely cold, and he was conscious of a distinct effort in getting the words out in the proper form. "I see. You are afraid he will catch you before you are married? He does not like army men?"

There was an odd twist in the colonel's voice as if he, too, were inclined to smile.

"Papa has his prejudices, you know," put in Miss Dewey, demurely.

"He will miss us before long;" the lieutenant's words fairly dripped with excitement. He peered anxiously down the road. "And Grace's horse has gone for good."

"My duty is clear," began the colonel, his voice still husky. "I know very well that you young people should be taken in charge. You, lieutenant, should be put under arrest, and you, Miss Grace, ought to be turned over to your father. You both know that this should be done."

He had not looked at them while he talked—now that he did, he saw that Roberts' arm was around the rancher's daughter, and that her eyes were gazing appealingly toward him. He always had admired those blue eyes—he looked into them, his heart in the glance, then with a dash of his hand wiped out the vision.

"You scapegraces deserve this—but I don't know that your father, miss, is any friend of mine. Where did you say you wanted to go?"

"To Rockwell City—to a minister's," eagerly exclaimed Roberts.

"Climb in here—send that horse of yours up the road—we'll get him in the morning." His orders were positive and definite.

A stroke of the whip and the lieutenant's mount went racing up the path after the ranch girl's Rex. Roberts and Grace clambered into the car.

With a crunch the car started, and in another minute they were speeding toward Rockwell City, 40 miles an hour.

Up the deserted street, across the railroad tracks, past the hotel with its many lights they sped. With a jolt they stopped at a modest dwelling on a side street. Col. Leith was first to leap from the car.

Gently he helped the young woman from her place, and his strong hand was in hers as he gave her to Roberts' care.

"This is a very informal and undignified proceeding, young people," he began. "I am sorry to see you do this way." He was talking against time, for so long as he talked her hand lay in his. "I am not going to give my approval—but I will give my blessing."

He hesitated a little. "As for you, Lieut. Roberts, if you show yourself on the reservation for two weeks, you will be placed in the guard-house. Good luck—good-by!"

As the colonel left the town behind on his way to the post, he met an eager rider hurrying cityward. He might have told him some interesting news had he wished. Instead, he pushed the car to a swifter speed. Why cause people unnecessary worry?

HOUSE GOWN

For house or reception wear, both now and during the coming summer, this beautiful gown will be most appropriate. The body portion of the waist is of orchid yellow marquisette, over a lining of taffetas. The yoke band is of tucked marquisette, and the square bertha yoke-facing and cuff bands are of cream-colored lace. The skirt is made with a one-piece foundation, having a circular flounce, and a four piece over-skirt. The foundation and circular flounce are of the marquisette, and the four-piece over-skirt is of the all-over lace. If desired, the overskirt and circular flounce may be made of one material, the former embroidered by hand, or trimmed with buttons and braid loops.

For 36 bust the waist requires 5 yards of material 20 inches wide, 2¾ yards 36 inches wide, or 2½ yards 42 inches wide; ⅝ yard of all-over lace 18 inches wide for collar, yoke-facing and arm-bands.

SHORT SLEEVES LOSING VOGUE.

Parisian Modistes Declare for Change in Fashion.

As usual, sleeves are of prime importance in the warm weather wardrobe, says Mrs. Osborn in the Delineator. More than any other detail of the toilet they betray the exact date of its creation. "A gown is as old as its sleeve" is an axiom of the dressmaking profession.

In Paris the short sleeve is already passe. The American woman, however, will not drop it abruptly for the long sleeve. She will be inclined to temporize on account of the heat of our long summer, but by autumn it is a certainty that the short sleeve will have been laid to rest.

One of the best examples of the typical small sleeve is used in the tailleur. It is full length, of course, close fitting and with no perceptible fulness at the armhole. An excellent phase of it is illustrated in the costume of shantung in the shade called "ashes of violets." The little coat has a square seamed postilion back and a deep V-shaped closing in the front that is caught to one side with a darker tone chou of silk, plaited and ruched into a clever semblance of a double violet.

The sleeve is most interesting and unusual, for it has but one seam, and that on the outside of the arm. The sleeve buttons from the elbow to the wrist with a bias line of great buttonholes bound in cloth, and small round cloth-covered buttons. The armhole of the coat is turned under and piped so that the seam is as flat as possible.

HIGH-CROWNED HAT IN BURNT STRAW.

With clusters of "blow-aways." The newest shape neck ruffle in brown tulle, tied at the side with brown satin ribbon.

FOR THE LITTLE MAIDEN.

Dainty Lingerie That Is Considered the Mode.

Although the small maiden may have an assortment of silk slips she never wears a separate silk petticoat or one trimmed with ribbons. Her white skirts are carefully measured an inch shorter than her frocks, and are of somewhat heavier materials, preferably lonsdale or cambric. These may have deep flounces or embroidered muslin headed with heading, to accompany lingerie dresses, or several ruffles of dotted and figured swiss may be used, as this launders well, looks exceedingly dainty and is inexpensive. To the white petticoat is usually attached an underwaist of similar material and beading finish, through which may be run very narrow white, light blue or pink ribbons. This waist may be joined by means of a band or cut in one with the umbrella shaped petticoat, thus avoiding unnecessary bulk about the hips if the child be somewhat stout. Some little girls wear beneath the outer petticoat a shorter skirt and drawers cut in one piece and joined at the waistline to a correct cover substitute that is worn over a little spun silk or lisle shirt. The French lingerie imported for small maidens has beading joined seams and in sets comprising waist, drawers, long and short petticoats and gown all trimmed lightly with dainty embroidery.

For Mourning Wear.

Some years ago a movement against crape took place in England, of which the influence was felt in America. The swing of the pendulum has now once more brought crape in favor for mourning use, and it is an English manufacture—even in Paris English crape is used—British manufacturers are rejoicing. The recent death of the duke of Devonshire has thrown a great number of families into mourning, and the abundance of crape used is very noticeable.

For the Stout Woman.

The stout woman will look well to the construction of her corset cover. It should have as many pieces to it as possible, as it will be stronger and fit better and there should be no ruffle about the bottom, but simply a band to make as little fullness as possible.

Of Dark Blue Linen.

A suit of dark blue linen is trimmed at the collar and cuffs with blue soutache, while the skirt and coat are finished with large blue bone buttons. The skirt of this suit is circular, wiht a flat back.

Of Voile and Taffeta.

Some suits are composed of a voile skirt with a wide band of taffeta at the foot, and a coat of taffeta. The girdle is made of taffeta and is about six inches wide.

CORN IS KING.

Successful Farmer Tells How He Raises Hundred Bushels Per Acre.

I have raised more than 100 bushels of corn per acre three times during the last four years, and expect to have more than 100 bushels per acre this year. I did it in this way, explains I. F. Andrews, in Farm Journal.

I take my hay crop off and then let the second crop grow unpastured until it is at its best, then I plow it down and sow to rye; in the spring I manure the rye and let it grow until almost the first of May, when the rye is coming into head. I plow rye and manure down, put on 25 bushels of lime per acre, and sow it to corn, putting 125 pounds of rock fertilizer to the hills per acre. I mark out the corn rows three feet eight inches each way, plant four grains to the hill, and later pull out the smaller plants to two to the hill. I cultivate the corn both ways until you can see neither horse nor man over the top of the corn. When the corn is ready to cut I haul it off; and seed the field to wheat and grass. I never leave the grass crop more than one year, so I need only three fields for my rotation.

I select the thickest, longest-grained corn that I can find for seed—ears that will shell about one quart of shelled corn per ear. Some critics say that thick cobs are a waste; but grains one inch in length around a thick cob will shell more than twice the quantity that short grains around a thin cob will shell; and I raise corn for the corn, the cob going in the bargain. I always mix my seed corn, that is, I put one peck of the best corn I can buy to each bushel of my own selected seed, and mix well.

When the corn comes into tassel I take a broom handle with a knife at the end, and pass through the corn, clipping off the tassel of the weaker one of the two stalks in each hill; and if the difference in the stalks is not too great, the clipped stalk will have the larger ear. I like a strong stalk to furnish the pollen, and one tassel to each hill is amply sufficient to fertilize all the corn. I can clip the tassels off two acres of corn in one day.

If smut appears on the tassel or any part of the corn stalk, I clip off with the knife, and those stalks make full ears; while if the smut was left on, they would not produce any corn, or at best only shriveled small ears. I seldom have six hills missing per acre, as I replant as soon as the blades peep above ground. And if birds or something else destroy some hills when too late to replant corn grains, I replant with corn stalks, and raise full ears on such replanted stalks. Thoroughness pays.

SOME FARMS TOO LARGE.

Farmers Make a Mistake by Trying to Handle Too Much Acreage.

The story is going the rounds of the press of a man that had a 1,200-acre farm and had three daughters. As each got married he gave her a quarter of the farm, or 300 acres, and put all his stock and all his energies on the remainder. To his surprise he found that he made just as much money on the smaller portion as on the larger portion. When he had but 300 acres left he found his profits as large as they had been on the 1,200 acres, and he was being worried a great deal less.

There are many farms that are too large. They are too costly to keep up, and their owners cannot manage to advantage. The larger the farm the more skillful must the management be, for the greater will be the proportion of work that must be done by others than by the owner. This is the point at which the big farm is put to a disadvantage. A hired worker can never do the work that the owner can, for he lacks interest.

There are a great many large farms, says the Farmers' Review, that would be more valuable to the community if they were broken up into several farms and were sold to different farmers that would live on them and be contented with owning one farm and no more. Intensive agriculture must come more and more into vogue with the increase of population, but this should be under individual owners, rather than under a system of landlordism in which the owners are residing in the cities and working the land by proxies.

REMOVABLE BUGGY SEAT.

Device by Which an Extra Person Can Be Comfortably Provided For.

A convenient, removable third buggy seat is made by tacking a stuffed cushion on one end of a board, the other end of which is slipped under the seat cushion. A stick is hinged to the underside, explains the Prairie Farmer, which serves as a leg to the seat, and when not in use this can be folded up and the whole seat slipped under the buggy seat out of the way.

The American Hen.

There is nothing mean or narrow about the American hen. She cackles for all, and last year she supplied Cuba with a million dollars' worth of prime eggs, to say nothing of the enormous quantities sent to England and other countries.

Any remedy that benefits digestion strengthens the nerves.

The nerve centers require nutrition. If the digestion is impaired, the nerve centers become anemic, and nervous debility is the result.

Peruna is not a nervine nor a stimulant. It benefits the nerves by benefiting digestion.

Peruna frees the stomach of catarrhal congestions and normal digestion is the result.

In other words, Peruna goes to the bottom of the whole difficulty, when the disagreeable symptoms disappear.

Mrs. J. C. Jamison, Wallace, Cal., writes:

"I was troubled with my stomach for six years. Was treated by three doctors. They said that I had nervous dyspepsia. I was put on a liquid diet for three months.

"I improved under the treatment, but as soon as I stopped taking the medicine, I got bad again.

"I saw a testimonial of a man whose case was similar to mine being cured by Peruna, so I thought I would give it a trial.

"I procured a bottle at once and commenced taking it. I have taken several bottles and am entirely cured."

BEHIND THE SCENES IN POLITICS
THE WARD BOSSES

By ERNEST M'GAFFEY

BURSTING WITH SYMPATHY FOR THE POOR
DUGAN GRABBED HIS HAT AND MADLY RUSHED FROM THE ROOM
MANY OF THEM COULD GIVE GOOD, COMMON-SENSE TALKS
ASPIRES TO BE A "DRESSER" AND A WIT
TIME WAS WHEN A "BOSS" WAS TO BE MARKED BY HIS REPUTATION FOR PHYSICAL PROWESS

WARD "bosses" come and go. They rise and fall, and one makes room for another. The fluctuations in politics are as sudden and abrupt as the changes in the stock market, and the "boss" of last year may be the plainest of plain citizens the ensuing year. One thing is morally certain, there will never be an elimination of "bosses" in politics, because leaders are an absolute necessity in every movement, and prime ministers and presidents are as surely political "bosses" as are the ward politicians who hold their wards in the hollow of their hands.

Some people, good people, too, have started in to fight "bosses," and have ended up by co-operating with them and getting their aid to improve conditions in certain districts. Fighting a political "boss" is an uphill job, for "the respectables," so-called, are usually too busy to give any assistance, and the "boys" are all with the "boss."

I remember a reformer who tried to win out on the presidency of a ward club against the "boss." He tried two years and was defeated, but the third term he seemed to be sure of success. Nearly every one of the members of the club promised him aid, and Dugan, as I will call him, had high hopes. The night of the election, with 189 members present, Dugan's name was put before the club amid a storm of applause. His nomination was seconded by at least five additional speeches, each a glowing eulogy of "Danny Dugan's staunch qualities and services to the party." Dugan sat entranced with the praises which were being handed out to him. The "boss'" candidate, Casey, was nominated in a half-dozen words and feebly seconded by only one individual.

Dugan himself was appointed one of the tellers, and a roar of approbation shook the hall as the chairman announced his selection. Dugan went up and down the aisles, and everybody gave him the "glad hand" and folded their ballots and tossed them into the hat he carried with "There's another for you, Dan, old boy," or "Hurrah for Danny Dugan."

He had a ballot shoved at him with the injunction, "Make it unanimous, Danny; hurl in a vote for your own ticket," and he put his ballot in the other teller's hat and sat down in the seventh heaven of anticipation. The counting was finished in a few minutes and Dugan smiled as he saw the ballots all going over to one side. "It's a walk-away," he whispered to the man next to him." "It's a landslide," said his neighbor. The chairman stepped to the front of the platform and announced the vote for president as follows: "For Peter Casey, 188 votes; for Daniel Dugan, one vote." Dugan grabbed his hat and madly rushed from the room, with a perfect howl of cheers following him. It was his last appearance in politics.

The term "political boss" images to most people a stoutly-built man with a plug hat and a large diamond, who smokes long black cigars and rules his ward or district with a rod of iron. Sometimes he is represented as a man with a heart bursting with sympathy for the poor, who squeezes the rich citizen to help out the constituents whose votes he harvests on election day. He is generally typified as eloquently profane, and story-writers delight to set him down invariably as of Irish birth.

As a matter of fact, however, there are just as many different "bosses" as there are nationalities in the large cities, for a "boss" is simply a leader for the time being, and that may be for a few months, a few years or longer. And some of the most successful of all "bosses," politically speaking, have been Americans. The present president of the United States is one of the most masterful of political bosses. Who in his party dare openly say him "nay" with any hope of winning out against his rock-rooted strength?

The "boss" in the cities, however, especially the typical ward "boss," is often a man who may be evolved by either accident or design. Sometimes a man goes into the game to help a friend out, or to satisfy a grudge, and the glamor of the thing attracts him and he stays in, to finally emerge as a full-blown "leader." And some one of the young fellows who go into politics deliberately will work on for years in the same ward, growing up with the people who live there, identifying himself with them and their interests and finally winning the confidence of his constituents so lastingly that they will vote almost to a man as he wishes.

A true "boss" both follows and leads. He knows what his "people" want, and he does not stray far away from their desires. If his ward has a constituency which favors a liberal interpretation of the liquor question he is for the "open" Sunday, and even the all-night saloon, if necessary. He is strong on the subject of "the poor man's club" and hot against "blue laws" and for the maximum of "personal liberty." Incidentally, he favors a low license, usually.

If a "boss" lives in a Prohibition district he fulminates against "the demon rum" and points out statistically the ruin wrought by drink. This may not prevent him from having his "high-balls" at the club, or his champagne at the political banquets, but makes him strong with the voters whose support he seeks. He is on the alert for "blind pigs," or places where liquor is smuggled in and sold secretly, and he leads delegations to the mayor's office and to the legislatures to protest against the vice of drinking.

The average "political boss" is in politics strictly for "what is in it," and that means that he is neither in the game for his health, his recreation nor his spiritual welfare. And why not? Do business or professional men enter into their respective avocations for any of the above reasons? I trow not. The "boss" has one fixed, set idea, and that is to "get there," as he would express it; to accumulate a large roll of simoleons and then retire to some respectable residence portion of the city and forget the low, coarse mob with which he was compelled to associate while he was getting his start. The successful ones do this, and the unsuccessful ones remain at the same old stand, reviling the ingratitude of the ones who "made the riffle" and got away with their "bundle."

Ward "bosses" often combine to accomplish results, and they often cut the ground from under one another without the slightest compunction. I never knew but one "boss" whose word was absolutely and entirely to be depended on both as to what he could do, and what he would do. He could tell to a certainty about how his ward would go, and if he gave his word as to the delegates he never under any circumstances broke. He was a man of strong likes and dislikes and exceedingly blunt in his way of putting things. But he could neither be wheedled nor intimidated. The mere fact that he had promised the support of his delegates in a convention to a certain candidate did not determine that he would support that candidate at the polls on election. But just so far as his word went, that promise was iron-clad and irrevocable.

Time was when a "boss" was to be marked by his reputation for physical prowess. But those days are in the sere and yellow leaf. Strange to say, even in the toughest of the "tough" wards, the "leaders" are very seldom now men who depend on their "knock down and drag out" abilities. The "boss" of to-day aspires to be a "dresser" and a wit, not a "slugger." Pugilism is left to its regular exponents, and though many of the "bosses" may be patrons of the sparring matches, they have given the rough-and-tumble method of the past the good-by, and plume themselves on smoother plans to achieve success.

Such a thing as a conscience is something that no unscrupulous ward "boss" will harbor, for to him conscience is a dead letter in politics. Besides, a "boss" may be in one party one year, and on the other side of the fence the next year. He may support a measure at first and then "switch" and fight it. Expediency is his watchword, and he will support a man whom he cordially despises if he can see advantage to himself in the end. The questions of party principles have an exceedingly hazy interest to him, for the class with which he mingles, and the interests which he represents, have no time at all to study political economy, and no inclination towards the ethical side of politics.

It was a matter of genuine interest to meet the various "bosses," big and little, and weigh them and analyze them as they came into my perspective. They were always a trifle curious as to just how I happened to be in politics, and I am quite certain they were decidedly uncertain as to just how I came to be holding down a fair-salaried position when I could not deliver delegates; and yet, meeting me in the game at every turn, from the primaries to the national conventions, they knew I was "keeping cases," as they may have expressed it, and that in some mysterious way I must be of some value in the sum total of elements making up political life.

The question of silent "bosses" and talkative "bosses" is one which has been variously reviewed, and the average judgment has been that the silent "boss" was the great power. The fact was that the "silent" boss could talk fast enough when he wanted to, and the talkative boss could "stand pat" when he so desired. If it was the nature of a "boss" to talk he did so; if he was naturally a secretive man, he kept still generally. The most effective combination was the "Boss" who could talk or keep still as occasion demanded, and who could neither be goaded nor coaxed into either silence or speech against his better judgment.

It could be said in favor of nearly every real ward "boss" that he was not an orator. Not in the sense of a "silver-tongued spell-binder." Many of them could give good, common-sense talks, and effective ones, too, but they did not essay to split the welkin with their perorations, and rather despised in their hearts the "wind-jammer" and his periods. At the same time, for a genuinely great speaker they had a deep respect and enjoyed hearing him. As for the "man with the pen," they were never unwilling to avail themselves of his services if he could "make good" with anything to help on a campaign.

LONGEVITY IN HOT CLIMATES

Tropical Races Are Shown to Be Much Longer Lived.

Because in tropical countries more decayed vegetable matter is found and in consequence more miasma, the idea has become popular that only vigorous health and long life are likely in northern latitudes where frost now and then asserts itself. The fact that humanity matures much earlier in tropical climes seems to warrant the conclusion that it must necessarily perish much earlier. Dr. Lugi Sambon of Rome attempts to put the popular impression to sleep by an elaborate exhibition of statistics.

He doesn't contend that the warmest climate is the most suitable to a man, under the conditions of modern civilization, but he remonstrates vigorously against the idea that a cold and variable climate is the most conducive to the physical and intellectual improvement of the human race. While northern climates may produce stalwart frames, statistics show that they do not conduce to longevity. In proof of his position the doctor cites the fact that the average Arab outlives the average Esquimau by not less than 25 years.

He shows that the people who live along the unhealthful coasts of Central and South America survive the inhabitants of the higher and cooler altitudes of the interior. He shows also that the Hindus, who often reach puberty as early as nine years, live to a surprising old age. The inhabitants of the southern countries of Europe are found to live much longer than those of the more northern latitude.

To illustrate, in England in a population of 27,000,000 there are but 146 centenarians, while in Spain, with a population of but 18,000,000, there are 401 centenarians. The probabilities are that the great mortality found in southern latitudes is found in the cities, and is therefore not so much the fault of the climate as of an indifference to sanitary laws.

Forcing His Chances.

"So Shadiboy is in trouble again?"

"Yes, a bit of a card scandal."

"I told him not to play unless he could afford to lose."

"He must have gotten your advice mixed, and decided he couldn't afford to play unless he didn't lose."—Washington Star.

OFFICIAL PAPER of RED LAKE COUNTY

Subscription price, $1.50 per year
If paid in advance, $1.00.

Entered at the Post-office in Plummer, Minn. as Second Class Mail Matter.

If we can beleive the News Thief River Falls will furnish all the candidates for the county attorneyship this year. Its a good thing they cant all be elected.

The Republican county convention to elect twelve delegates to the State Convention, will be held at Red Lake Falls on Thursday, June 25th. The official call for this convention is not published in the PIONEER for the reason that no notice of the same was sent us by the present chairman of the county committee, H. E. Ives, of St. Hilaire.

The PIONEER would urge upon the voters the necessity of holding caucuses in the various election precincts and electing delegates to the county convention. Every precinct should be represented in the convention and it is the fault of the voters themselves if the county convention is made up of delegates who do not represent the people. Every Republican voter should attend the primaries at the usual voting places in their precincts next Saturday evening and cast a vote for the man they want to send to the county convention.

Within a short time it will not be necessary for the Village council to hunt up excuses for not building a sidewalk to the creamery and sawmill. When the new spur track is built any person wishing to get to these institutions in muddy weather will only have to walk to the depot and then follow the track to the sawmill; In dry weather anyone can follow the road. This will enable the council to save up the money put in the treasury by high taxation until some time in the future years when they may, possibly, make some little public improvements with it.

A Socialist Ticket.

The Public Ownership party held a county convention at Thief River Falls last week. A county committee was elected with Arthur Hall, of St. Hilaire, chairman, and Alex A. Sweaas and Dr. P. L. Vistaunet, both of Thief River Falls, secretary and treasurer respectively. As candidates on this ticket for county officers the convention declared in favor of the following:

For commissioner, 4th dist, Alfred Hammerstad; for treasurer, Herman Chm: for register of deeds, C. H. Nelson: for judge of probate, J. Dahl; for coroner, Dr. Vistaunet.

It is understood that the party will put a camplete set of candidate for county officers this fall. Each local organization will make up its list of candidates and report same to the secretary of the central committee. A list will then be prepared containing the names of candidates mentioned and this list will be sent back to the locals for a referendum vote.

A Fine Dairy Herd.

That it pays to keep a good grade of milk cows has been conclusively proved by Ole Haaven, of Garnes township. During last year Mr. Haaven's herd of milkers earned more money for their owner than any other herd in the territory supplying the Plummer creamery. During part of the time last year Mr. Haaven,s check from the Plummer Creamery amounted to over $100 each month. This from a herd of twenty cows, some of which were being milked for the first time. These results shows the quality of the herd and it is to be regretted that Mr. Haaven is going to leave for Europe and sell this fine herd of milkers by public auction on next Saturday, the 27th inst. It pays to keep good cows and any person who wants to get a few of the best should attend Mr. Haaven's auction. Everything will be sold without reserve.

From all appearance the man had not been dead long but the body was cold.

Hegland has lived in the town of Reiner since last March. He formely lived up near Grygla. He was about thirty years of age and has no relatives in this section. A cousin from Thompson N. D., took charge of the remains.

In the six months Educational Scoring contest being conducted by the State Dairy Department the tub of butter sent in by Lars Haslerud, the Plummer buttermaker, was awarded a score of 93. This tub of butter was made from hand separator cream and without the use of a starter. Which goes to show that the Plummer buttermaker understands his business some.

Ed Jacobson was in yesterday from his home south of town and reports having lost a very fine cow by lightning on Thursday afternoon. The animal had taken shelter in a willow grove when the storm came up and when Mr. Jacobson went to look for her later he found she had been killed. The cow was one of the best in this part of the country and gave an average of about twenty quarts of milk per day.

Down at Elysian a few days ago a somewhat sportive preacher took a notion to equal the catch of fish that made the Sea of Galilee famous. He got four poles and a liberal supply of bait and went after the bass in a most business like way. The catch he was making was almost miraculous but an unsanctified emissary of the State Game and Fish commission spoiled his fun and made him pay a fine of $10 and costs. Even the Lord's annointed are not immune from the game wardens.

CONVENTION NOTES.

At an all night session of the credentials committee of the Republican national convention 110 contests brought by the "allies" were considered, the decisions being in favor of the Taft adherents. A sub-committee of the resolutions committee labored over the platform, modifying many of the planks. Gov. Cummins of Iowa became the leading candidate for the vice-presidential nomination, with Fairbanks a close second.

The Republican national convention was called to order in the Coliseum at Chicago by Chairman New of the national committee. Senator Burrows of Michigan was made temporary chairman and delivered an address, and the other officers of the convention were installed. The question of the vice-presidential nomination was no nearer settlement than ever.

With the arrival of most of the state delegations in Chicago, the vice-presidential nomination became the chief topic of discussion. Many asserted that Dolliver was certain to be on the ticket, but the chances of Sherman of New York and of Vice-President Fairbanks grew better. It became evident that there would be a warm contest over the platform as many leaders urged that the prepared resolutions be materially modified and the Taft adherents insisted that they would not permit this. Speaker Cannon made a hurried trip to Chicago to confer concerning the anti-injunction plank.

The Republican national committee completed the hearings of contests involving 219 seats in the convention. Of these 216 were given to Taft and three to Foraker.

ROOSEVELT IS LOUDLY CHEERED

CHICAGO CONVENTION GOES WILD WHEN PRESIDENT IS NAMED.

Senator Lodge's Speech as Permanent Chairman Interrupted Three-quarters of an Hour. Galleries Start Acclaim.

Chicago, June 18.—The greatest tribute ever accorded an American citizen in a political gathering was given Theodore Roosevelt yesterday afternoon in the Republican national convention in the Coliseum.

For forty-seven minutes the delegates and spectators cheered the name and achievements of the president in the face of the most positive and authorative assurances that he would not accept renomination at the hands of the convention.

For forty-seven minutes more than 10,000 persons joined in a demonstration that filled the great convention hall with a mingled pandemonium of individual hurrahing and organized rooting.

Men and women shouting themselves hoarse stood in their places and in periodic heights of excitement climbed onto chairs, while they waved hats, canes, handkerchiefs and newspapers and otherwise urged each other into greater transports of enthusiasm. Altogether it was a demonstration such as is rarely elicited even in honor of a presidential nominee himself in the hour of his nomination.

It was a few minutes before 2 o'clock that the Roosevelt enthusiasm broke forth. It came spontaneously and unexpectedly. Senator Lodge had been speaking for nearly an hour, had mentioned the president frequently, but never by name, while he worked gradually up from a discussion of the Republican party's achievements to consideration of the Roosevelt policies. Then he told how the president has enforced the laws as he found them on the statute books.

BROTHER FOUND DEAD.

Olmsted County Man Makes the Startling Discovery.

Rochester, Minn., June 16.—When John Monette, an Olmsted county farmer, early Sunday morning looked in the direction of his brother's home, a short distance away he was startled to find the house missing, and in its place a heap of ashes.

He summoned the family and hastened to the scene. A closer investigation revealed the awfulness of the tragedy.

Nothing had escaped the fury of the devouring flames and in the cellar were the charred bones of a man.

A watch was found near by and about $2.70 in currency.

The watch was identified as that belonging to Clark Monette, and it proved beyond a doubt that Clark Monette met death during the night in his own home by burning.

HER DESTINATION IN DOUBT.

Little Girl's Remark Not Complimentary to Grandma.

Ethel is of the mature age of five. Recently her grandmother concluded that it devolved on her to instruct the child in religious matters.

"You must be a good girl, Ethel," she said. "Then you will go to heaven when you die."

Ethel seemed scarcely pleased with this reward for exceptional conduct.

"Don't you want to go to heaven?" asked grandma, with a look of reproach.

"Oh, I don't know," temporized Ethel. "I guess not."

"Why not?" demanded grandma, severely.

"Because maybe I couldn't get out," answered Ethel.

"You wouldn't want to get out," replied grandma.

"Oh, yes, I should," returned Ethel, with conviction.

"No," argued grandma, "you would not. Why should you want to get out of heaven?"

"Why," answered Ethel, "I guess I'd want to go and see you once in a while, wouldn't I?"—Woman's Home Companion.

FAMILIAR PHRASE.

"Internal Revenue" Collections.

The term "internal revenue" has been restricted in its meaning to such revenues only as are collected under the internal revenue bureau connected with the treasury department, and does not include all revenues that are, properly speaking, from internal sources, that is, from sources other than duties levied at the frontiers upon foreign commodities. Thus, moneys arising from the sale of public lands, from patent fees, or the revenues of the postal service, are not generally known as "internal revenues."

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

A Rich Pauper.

Rochester—Peter Johnson, a veteran of the civil war, alone in the world, and a man supposed to be without much worldly goods, living near Preston, was adjudged insane and brought to the state hospital at this place. Upon his arrival here the usual proceedure of searching the clothes was inaugurated, and way down in an out-of-the-way place, carefully tucked away, the authorities found on his person the neat sum of $2,726.

His clothes were old and tattered, worn almost threadbare, but the money was found in the corners and in various pockets. There was one certificate of deposit for $900, 76 twenty-dollar bills, a number of tens, and not a few specimens of currency of smaller denominations. Johnson was a well known character in the vicinity of Preston, and for the past few years had been living in a hut on the banks of a river, near that village. He is 63 years of age. His assets have been carefully deposited by the hospital authorities as required by law.

Bad Brandy.

Crookston — Discovery was made here that about $10,000 worth of adulterated and artificial blackberry brandy was loaded on the wholesale trade of the Northwest last fall by a traveling man representing himself to be with a manufacturing concern in Cincinnati. The liquor is declared unsalable because of its impure condition, and the total amount, together with court costs in many impure food convictions thruout this region will be a loss to the wholesalers.

The discovery came about thru the prosecutions made here by Inspector Heiberg, of the state pure food department, and prosecutions by the pure food inspectors of North Dakota. Violators of the pure food law were arrested in Crookston, Greenbush, Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls, Warren, Ada, Fertile, East Grand Forks and other places, for selling impure blackberry brandy in violation of the state law. The merchants handling the questionable merchandise were fined all the way from $5 to $50 and costs.

Knocks Bridge Out Again.

Duluth—The steamer Wilpen, of the Shenango Steamship company, hit the crib work supporting the north end of the draw of the interstate bridge and moved the span three-eighths of an inch. Had she moved the span one and one-half inches it would have gone into the channel again. This span was knocked into the channel by the steamer Troy two years ago, and the bridge has been out of commission ever since, but was approaching completion again when the accident occurred. The accident will delay the opening of the bridge to traffic for thirty days. The span will be jacked back to position. The interstate bridge is owned by the Great Northern road.

Dog Catches Thief.

Minneapolis — "Colonel," a dog, caught Peter Johnson, an alleged thief, and held him until officers placed the fellow under arrest. The man is accused of having stolen a gold watch of Charles E. Leeman in the depot. He was detected by Clarence Wood, of Casselton, N. D., who attempted a capture. Johnson saw there was something wrong and started to run. It was then that "Colonel" got busy. He darted after the fleeing fugitive and caught his foot so securely that the man stumbled and fell, and fearing a renewed attack from the dog if he attempted to resist, lay still on the sidewalk until a policeman took him in tow. The dog is owned by George Weeden, a cabman.

Is Best Drainage Year.

Crookston—Capt. James A. Beard, in charge of the immense state project on the lower Roseau, and who arrived in this city on business, stated that since the opening of the season the machines have been working on the Roseau project, steadily excavating almost continuously 100 yards an hour. The big machine used on this project is the largest northwest of the Illinois drainage canal, and its dipper has a loaded capacity of two and a half yards. The dredge is at present located seven miles down the lower Roseau from Duxby and six miles out in one of the largest muskegs of the north country.

New Chart Corrects Errors.

The great practical utility of the magnetic survey made in the Pacific ocean by the yacht Galilee since 1905 is shown by a new magnetic chart, from which it appears that the charts previously used by navigators in the pacific ocean were erroneous along some much-traversed routes to the extent of from three to five degrees, and the errors at times were systematic. Errors of this magnitude are of importance in practical navigation where the indications of the compass should be as accurate as possible.

THE RECKLESSNESS OF KNEELAND

By WILLIAM R. STEWART

(Copyright.)

Fireman Kneeland, new recruit in Hook and Ladder Company No. 6, was in an unpleasant humor. His associates had been chaffing him all morning, and he resented the rough handling.

"Youse fellers think because I'm from the west and ain't Irish I don't know the game," he said finally. "Well, I'd like to see the man of yer who c'd teach me."

"'Tain't that, but yer too blamed serious. Th' idea of a fireman givin' up a rescue to a policeman! Why, that cop'll report he saved the girl, and get a medal and promotion. Might have kept them in the department."

"Cop said the woman was his wife."

"Wife, nothing! Guess he saw you were only a probationer and easy. Just watch the papers in the morning and see who did the rescue act. You've no sense of humor, that's the trouble."

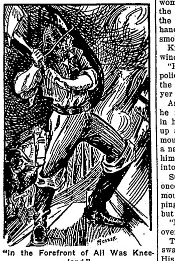
Kneeland had no humor, that was a fact. Or, if he had, it was subordinated to a seriousness which made him unpopular with his fellows. With them work, too, was work, but also play was play. And Kneeland never played.

"That fellow's got something on his mind," said Burke, when the new fireman had left them and shambled up the stationhouse stairs to the sleeping quarters. "He's good stuff, all right, but I don't like his style."

When the alarm for fire jangled out in Station No. 6 at 12 o'clock that night a bad-tempered lot of men slid down the brass poles and clambered aboard the truck. It had been the second time they had been disturbed within an hour, and the hard work of the morning had left them needful of rest.

As the truck drew up at the edge of the black belch of engines the crews were already dragging lines of hose into the burning tenement. From the third and fourth story windows a pall of smoke was blackening the night, lit at intervals by choked tongues of flame. On the fire-escapes appeared, momentarily, figures in night-clothes; then, told that the lower part was still safe, disappeared into the rooms and rushed down the stairways.

Groping their way in the choke and smother, striking blindly with only the feel of the place to guide, the hook-and-ladder crew cut their way through doors and partitions, making smoke-vents to bring the fire into the open, where the men from the engines could attack it.



"In the Forefront of All Was Kneeland."

In the forefront of all was Kneeland. Not the captain, with a life's training behind him, nor Burke nor Casey, veterans both, wielded ax and bar with greater effect. The excitement of the fight was in his blood; it took hold of him as the spirit of carnage seizes the soldier in a death-grapple at close quarters.

The men of an engine company had worked their way to the fourth floor, and were playing their hose on the flames which licked up through the ceiling.

"Open the windows at the front," the captain ordered.

Kneeland was the first to make his way through the rooms and reach the side of the building facing the street. The fumes of the drowning fire were suffocating, and he was half dizzy. The shouted orders from without, the panting engines, the low grumble of the flames overhead, and the battering of the streams of water against the woodwork dinned confusedly in his ears. With his ax he chopped down a burning window frame, and it fell out into the street.

He turned to attack another, and the smoke-grimed helmet of a policeman confronted him. The face underneath was scorched and blackened, but Kneeland remembered it from the morning. The policeman staggered toward him.

"There's a woman out there," he said, pointing toward a window overhead. "Save her; I'm all in."

He leaned against the wall, catching his breath in gasps. Kneeland looked at him. The policeman gave no sign of recognition.

For a moment in the mind of the fireman a sinister purpose arose. The ruck of the fight with the flames had passed beyond them. From the stairway he heard the captain's voice of command.

The battle spirit possessed the new fireman in all its madness. The fierce satisfaction of fight in the open was upon him. That was why he had joined the department—to cut and hack and smite, and do it with all the sanction of law. Thus would he vent some of his grudge against the world—the world which had been treacherous to him, and then hedged him in with conventions which made redress impossible. The phantom figure of a woman stood out, as so often it did in his inflamed mind from the smoke and the steam; of a woman who had wronged him grievously. And there was another—the policeman.

He took a step nearer.

"You—save her," he hissed, and the sound of his voice sounded strange even to himself, "save her, and get the glory. That's your graft. Come, I'll help ye." And he caught the policeman by the arm.

There was that about the fireman which frightened the man. With his recovered strength he resisted the movement toward the window. But the strength of ten men seemed Kneeland's.

As the two forms staggered into the indistinct light from the street, firemen outside were raising a ladder to an upper floor. Slowly it warped upward, then rested on a ledge of an opposite side, and a man carrying a hose in his hand ran quickly up.

Across the area-way the forms of two men met his view. One, in policeman's uniform, seemed struggling back from the window; the other, a fireman, urged him forward. They locked in an embrace, and the fireman threw the other across the sill.

A stream of water, hard as rubber, smote Kneeland full in the chest and rolled him against the wall. The fireman on the ladder had turned his hose on the strugglers.

Choking and battered by the deluge which threshed in upon them, Kneeland caught at the sill. In the moment he had been at the window the feet and skirts of a woman hanging from the ledge above had met his vision. The instincts of the fire-fighter were once more supreme.

"The woman!" he called, panting, to the policeman. "Quick, help me!"

The stream of water had ceased to pour through the window. The fireman on the ladder also had seen the woman and had turned his hose into the room, from the ledge of which the woman clung desperately by her hands to escape the suffocation of smoke and flames.

Kneeland thrust a leg out of the window.

"Hold this one," he shouted to the policeman, kicking the other against the floor to help the words. "Now, yer arm around my waist. steady!"

As the policeman took hold of him he felt the fireman suddenly relax in his grasp. He saw Kneeland look up at the woman with staring eyes, mouth opened. He heard him mutter a name; then seem to sink away from him, as though he would slide back into the shelter of the window.

Suddenly the fireman became rigid once more as a steel bar. The opened mouth closed tightly over the snapping teeth. In a voice low and hoarse, but steady, he gave the directions.

"Let go," he called to the figure overhead, "I'll catch yer."

The policeman felt the body he held sway outward with the sudden impact. His muscles strained, as they gripped at the waist which bent over till it was level with the ledge, but the muscles of the fireman seemed of iron. For a few terrible seconds the forms hung over the area, and in the grim strain of the bodies, eyes grew bloodshot and the faces distorted with swollen veins. Then, slowly the fireman and his charge gained back to the ledge, clutched it, and rolled into the room.

Clouds of smoke still poured through the gutted tenement, but the fire's headway was checked. From the floors overhead the men of the hook-and-ladder truck, their work there done, came straggling down the stairway.

"Where's Kneeland?" the captain asked, and the next moment he saw the three at the window. "Hello!"

But the voice did not reach the fireman. They lifted him unconscious, and took him away to the hospital. The woman and the policeman followed down-stairs and both spoke with the captain.

"Mother o' Moses!" exclaimed the latter. "You'll—you'll—" but the woman shook her head and went away.

"Guess it'll be ours to off our hats to Kneeland when he gets back, sociable or no sociable," said Burke on the ride home. "I always gave him credit for havin' the right sort o' stuff, anyhow. An' that cop chap was the same as claimed his rescue in the morning. S'pose he was goin' ter try the same game again."

"Yer wrong," said the captain, "he was after a chance to redeem himself. Sergeant was down on him, an' he wasn't gettin' any show on the force—leastwise he thought so—an' that was why he tried to steal the credit. He was sorry afterward."

"An' the woman this last time, the one ye were talkin' with?"

"She was Kneeland's wife—once," said the captain.

Sweet Girl Brought to Ask Time for Reconsideration.

"Since you can be no more than a sister to me," said the heartbroken young man, "will you not give me one kiss of farewell?"

She assented, albeit coldly.

And Mannering drew the girl to his heart, he pressed his lips to hers with a passionate fervor born of his despair.

Afterward her head sank gently upon his shoulder.

"Mr. Mannering," she breathed, "this is all so—all so new to me—so strangely different from my expectations—perhaps, if you would give me time—time to reconsider—"

But, dear reader, let us draw a veil over the sacred scene.—Exchange.

INVALID'S SAD PLIGHT.

After Inflammatory Rheumatism, Hair Came Out, Skin Peeled, and Bed Sores Developed—Only Cuticura Proved Successful.

"About four years ago I had a very severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism. My skin peeled, and the high fever played havoc with my hair, which came out in bunches. I also had three large bed sores on my back. I did not gain very rapidly, and my appetite was very poor. I tried many 'sure cures' but they were of little help, and until I tried Cuticura Resolvent I had had no real relief. Then my complexion cleared and soon I felt better. The bed sores went very soon after a few applications of Cuticura Ointment, and when I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment for my hair it began to regain its former glossy appearance. Mrs. Lavina J. ### How It Works.

Once there was a struggling young author who was blest with many friends, all of whom told him that he was the coming great writer of the country.

So one day a bright thought struck him. He said:

"I will publish my book, and all my friends who admire it so much will buy my book, and I will be rich."

So he printed his book.

And all of his friends waited for him to send them autographed copies of his book.

And so his books were sold as junk.

And ever after he didn't have any friends.—Success.

What a Dear Little Wife Did.

The leap-year widow had cornered the wily widower.

"Ah, you should marry again, Mr. Primrose," she whispered in her most persuasive tones. "Widowers are like bachelors—they come home at night and toss their clothes all in a heap. You should have a dear little wife to go through your clothes."

"Thanks," replied the wily widower, tersely, "but my last wife went through them so completely that I didn't have carfare in the morning."

"TWO TOPERS."

A Teacher's Experience.

"My friends call me 'The Postum Preacher,'" writes a Minn. school teacher, "because I preach the gospel of Postum everywhere I go, and have been the means of liberating many 'coffee-pot slaves.'

"I don't care what they call me so long as I can help others to see what they lose by sticking to coffee, and can show them the way to steady nerves, clear brain and general good health by using Postum.

"While a school girl I drank coffee and had fits of trembling and went through a siege of nervous prostration, which took me three years to rally from.

"Mother coaxed me to use Postum, but I thought coffee would give me strength. So things went, and when I married I found my husband and I were both coffee topers, and I can sympathize with a drunkard who tries to leave off his cups.

"At last in sheer desperation I bought a package of Postum, followed directions about boiling it, served it with good cream, and asked my husband how he liked the coffee.

"We each drank three cups apiece, and what a satisfied feeling it left. Our conversion has lasted several years and will continue as long as we live, for it has made us new—nerves are steady, appetites good, sleep sound and refreshing.'"

"There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

ONE WOMAN'S ENDURANCE.

Southern Woman Suffers Torture Without Complaint.

Racked and torn with terrific pains, nightly annoyed by kidney irregularities, Mrs. A. S. Payne, of 801 Third ave, So., Columbus, Miss., suffered for years. She says: "The pains in my back, sides and loins were so terrible that I often smothered a scream. Every move meant agony. My rest was broken by a troublesome weakness and the secretions seemed to burn like acid. I was in an awful condition and doctors did not seem to help me. Doan's Kidney Pills benefitted me from the first and soon made me a strong and healthy woman."

The Missing Link.

What was said to be the "missing link between man and ape" was found by Dr. Dubois in 1895 on the banks of the Bengawan river, in central Java. These fossil remains consisted of a skull, a thigh bone and two molar teeth, from which the scientists "constructed" an animal, not human, yet nearer to man than the ape. The "link" was named "Pithecanthropus Erectus."—New York American.

HOT ONIONS FOR PNEUMONIA.

Dread Disease Robbed of Its Terrors by Simple Remedy.

Owing to the prevalence of pneumonia and the great mortality which attends its ravages during the winter and spring, several boards of health in northern New Jersey have been taking measures to protect the citizens of their towns from the disease. The health board of Washington, N. J., has published a remedy which is said to be a sure cure for pneumonia, and other health boards are looking into the matter with a view of having the same thing published for the good of the general public. This is the publication as it has appeared in the papers of Washington:

"Take six or ten onions, according to size, and chop fine, put in a large spider over a hot fire, then add the same quantity of rye meal and vinegar enough to form a thick paste. In the meanwhile stir it thoroughly, letting it simmer five or ten minutes. Then put in a cotton bag large enough to cover the lungs and apply to chest as hot as patient can bear. In about ten minutes apply another, and thus continue by reheating the poultices, and in a few hours the patient will be out of danger. This simple remedy has never failed to cure this too-often fatal malady. Usually three or four applications will be sufficient, but continue always until the perspiration starts freely from the chest. This remedy was formulated many years ago by one of the best physicians New England has ever known, who never lost a patient by the disease, and won his renown by simple remedies."

Wrong Selections.

"Why doesn't that man get on in politics? He seems capable and industrious."

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum; "he is all that. But he showed bad judgment in selecting his opinions."

Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us dare to do our duty as we understand it.—Lincoln.

County Convention.

The Republican county convention at Red Lake Falls on Thursday was probably the most largely attended of any convention ever held in the country. The friends of both Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls were out in force and there was a big fight made for the orgaiuzation. Every precinct in the county was represented except Mayfield and Numedal townships and in the case of Hickory township, entitled to one delegate, two delegates were present and each was given a half vote. These two delegates voted for different sides and therefore neutralized each other. The Highlanding delegation, composed of two members, gave each side a vote.

When the convention was called to order and the time arrived for nominating a temporary chairman two candidates were nominated in the persons of D. P. O'Neill, of Thief River Falls, and Dr. N. M. Watson, of Red Lake Falls. F. E. Hunt, of Red Lake Falls, and G. Halvorson, of Thief River Falls, were appointed as tellers and the delegates were required to deposit their credentials and vote as the roll was called. This seemed eminently fair and the roll was called. The final count showed 44½ votes for Mr. O'Neill and 39½ votes for Dr. Watson. Mr. O'Neill took the chair and there was a rousing demonstration by the Thief River Falls crowd.

For temporary secretary C. L. Hansen defeated C. H. Martz, both of St. Hilaire, by a similar vote. This gave Thief River Falls control of the convention and as their ranks were solid, there was no delay in transacting the convention business as the winners desired. Thief River Falls, assisted by a St. Hilaire man, drew up resolutions to suit themselves and the chairman was given the right to name the twelve delegates to the State convention and also the members of the county committee for the next two years.

The delegates to the State convention are: D. P. O'Neill, J. W. Eastman, G. Halvorson, A. H. Fasel and O. J. Schel, of Thief River Falls; Dr. N. M. Watson, A. P. Toupin and Thomas Germo, of Red Lake Falls; D. Patterson and C. L. Hansen, of St. Hilaire; Oscar Odegard, of Star township, and E. L. Wichterman, of Plummer. These delegates were bound by the unit rule but otherwise uninstructed.

The members of the county central committee are: D. P. O'Neill, chairman; C. L. Hansen, Secretary; G. Halvorson, of Thiei River Falls- Aug Swenson, of River Falls township; Dr. N. M. Watson, of Red Lake Falls; Ed Enright, of Black River township, and Jo Pigeon, of Lambert.

Hay Stack Swallowed.

One of the most peculiar cyclones that ever visited this section of the county swept a strip of country begining two miles west of Euclid Sunday afternoon, taking a course south east from that point for a distance of 5 miles. The funnel shaped cloud appeared about 5 o'clock p. m. and the people of Euclid were terrorized for a time, but the devastator did not get closer than a mile to Euclid and in its course did not strike any buildings.

The most peculiar freak however, was the complete disappearance of a last year's hay stack belonging to Peter Stuhr, the merchant of Euclid. The stack was well weighted and settled, but the entire stack was picked up bodily and no trace of it has been found It was about a 20 ton stack and no one in this region ever heard of a similar performance even by a cyclone. After traveling about five miles the funnel shaped cloud raised and no further damage was done.

To His Benefit.

A Tennessee congressman enjoys telling a story of a darky in his district who in a way is something of a philosopher.

Some one was saying to Mose one day: "You're always in trouble, Mose. Why can't you try to do better? You're a likely sort of darky, and you could get along very well if only you'd behave yourself—keep a steady job instead of drinking bad whisky and getting yourself behind the bars half the time."

"Excuse me, boss," said Mose, with a grin, "but it looks to me like I makes more money this way. When I works hard I gets $7 a month and my board. When I gets arrested the jedge he says to me that it will be $10 or thirty days. How kin I afford to work for $7 a month when I'm worth $3 more in de lockup?"—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

The Vienna Woman.

The Vienna woman is called the best dressed woman in the world, and she well deserves her title. She is more French in attire than the Parisian, and she is more elegant than the Russian. She combines the usefulness of the English with the delicacy of the Spanish. Yet she is a school of her own in dress; she is original to the last detail. To be thoroughly Viennese in dress is the dream of the well gowned European woman.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Office and the Man.

"The office should seek the man, you know."

"That's all right," replied the avowed aspirant, "but I gave it a fair chance, and it seemed diffident."—Philadelphia Ledger.

GROVER CLEVELAND IS DEAD

Ex-President Passes Away at His Princeton Home.

Mayor of Buffalo in 1881, He Was Triumphantly Elected Governor of New York in 1882, and Elevated to the Presidency in 1884—Last of the Ex-Presidents.

Princeton, N. J.—Grover Cleveland died suddenly Wednesday at his home here.

While it was known that Mr. Cleveland had for the past three months been suffering from a severe attack of rheumatic gout and acute indigestion, his death came as a complete surprise.

He had been a sufferer from gout and diabetes for more than two years. Early in 1906 he was stricken with an attack of indigestion, the result of diabetes, and for weeks was unable to partake of any except liquid nourishment.

A sojourn in the south improved his health considerably.

Suffers Second Attack.

Mr. Cleveland returned to Princeton and resumed his duties as trustee of the Equitable Life Company.

Early last year he had a repetition of the attack of indigestion and for some weeks his condition was such that his life was despaired of.

Mr. Cleveland made a splendid fight for life and won. In February last diabetes began to make itself felt again, and Mr. Cleveland became subject to spells of unconsciousness, coupled again with inability to assimilate food. Death finally came at 8:40 a. m. Wednesday.

Causes of His Death.

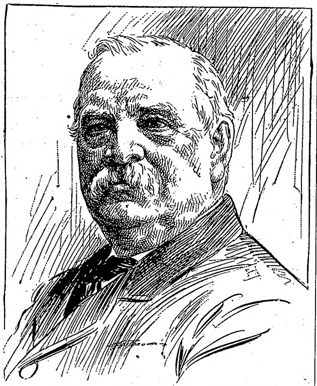
The following statement, signed by Dr. Joseph B. Bryant, Dr. George R. Lockwood and Dr. J. M. Camochan, was given out:

"Mr. Cleveland for many years has suffered from repeated attacks of gastral intestinal origin. Also he had a long-standing organic disease of the heart and kidneys and heart failure complicated with pulmonary thrombosis and oedema were the immediate causes of his death."



EX-PRESIDENT GROVER CLEVELAND

LIFE OF CLEVELAND A BUSY ONE.

Born in Caldwell, N. J., and a Descendant of English Stock.

Grover Cleveland, the twenty-second and twenty-fourth president of the United States, was born March 18, 1837, in Caldwell, N. J. His family came from England and settled in Massachusetts in the early part of the seventeenth century. His father was a physician and had been ordained as a minister and married the daughter of a Baltimore merchant, who had come from Ireland. In 1841 the Cleveland family removed to Fayetteville, N. Y., where young Grover received his first schooling, and where later at an early age he served as a clerk in a small country store. Still later, when his parents settled in Clinton, N. Y., he pursued his studies further, and when only 17 he was appointed assistant teacher in the New York institution for the blind. In 1855 Cleveland assisted his uncle, Lewis F. Allen, in the compilation of the "American Herd Book," and during the same period he served a clerkship with the law firm of Rogers, Bowen & Rogers, at Buffalo. It was in that office that Cleveland began to read law. He was admitted to the New York bar in 1859. He continued with the same firm, where he acted as chief clerk until 1862.

Mr. Cleveland received his first public office when appointed assistant district attorney of Erie county. At that time he was supporting his mother and sister and when he was drafted to serve in the army he was forced to borrow sufficient funds to send a substitute. In 1865 he was defeated for the position of district attorney of his county and entered into partnership with Isaac V. Vanderpool. In 1869 he joined the firm of Lanning, Cleveland & Folsom.

Nominated for Mayor of Buffalo.

In 1881 he was nominated as the Democratic candidate for mayor of Buffalo and was elected by the largest majority ever given in that city, although the Republican state ticket was carried. While serving as mayor of Buffalo he became known as the "veto mayor," for his fearless exercise of that right in checking the extravagance and the illegal expenditure of public moneys. In 1882 Mr. Cleveland ran for governor of New York against Charles J. Folger, then United States secretary of the treasury, and won by a plurality of nearly 200,000. His administration was notable for the simple and unostentatious way in which he conducted the business of the state.

At the Democratic national convention held in Chicago in July, 1884, Cleveland was nominated by his party as its candidate for the presidency of the United States and at the election in the following November was chosen to that office. In the electoral college his plurality over his opponent, Mr. Blaine, was 37 votes. Mr. Cleveland was inaugurated March 4, 1885, and the oath of office was administered to him by Chief Justice Waite. While president he exercised the veto power beyond all precedent and out of 987 bills he refused to affix his signature to 115.

Private Pension Bills Vetoed.

Most of these were private pension bills. It was during his first term that Cleveland married in the White House Miss Frances Folsom, June 2, 1886. She was a daughter of his former law partner.

In 1888 he was a candidate for a second term, but was defeated in the election of that year by Benjamin Harrison. After his retirement from public life he settled in New York city, where he opened a law office. He had a large practice and was frequently in Washington arguing important cases before the United States supreme court.

At the national Democratic convention held in Chicago in June, 1892, he was for the third time named as his party's candidate for the presidency and in the following November was elected. During the great railroad strike in Chicago in 1894 he ordered out the United States troops to prevent the obstruction of the mails, although Gov. Altgeld, who had not asked for soldiers, protested against the action. After his retirement from public office Cleveland lived with his family at Princeton, N. J. He delivered two lectures annually to the students of the Princeton university. On February 1, 1907, he was made chairman of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents at a salary of $25,000 a year. He also acted as chief counsel for the association.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Killed.

Minneapolis—One life was lost and many were imperiled in the fierce windstorm which swept across the Twin Cities June 22.

Henry H. Fortwenger, 1324 Morgan avenue north, a coach carpenter in the employ of the Omaha road at the Minneapolis shops, was killed.

Fortwenger and a friend, August Krick, 3225 Lyndale avenue north, a passenger coach inspector of the Omaha road, had gone to Shady Oak lake, a mile and a half southwest of Hopkins, for a day's fishing. When the storm broke they sought shelter in an abandoned shack or summer house on the shore of the lake. The wind wrecked the building and a heavy beam fell across Fortwenger's chest, crushing it. Krick crawled out uninjured, and at once began tearing away the timbers of the house to rescue his friend. Fortwenger died soon after being taken out.

Fortwenger was about 36 years old and leaves a wife and three or four children. The body is now at Strobeck's undertaking rooms in Hopkins.

Among the Lions.

Minneapolis—A pretty wedding took place in the lions' den on the Red Cross carnival grounds in Minneapolis, when Rev. G. L. Morrill spoke the words that united William J. Geer and Miss Ruth Julia Berglund.

The bride was attired in a becoming going away gown and carried smelling salts. The groom wore conventional black and carried a revolver.

The couple stood under a canopy of harpoons. Seven husky carnival employes acted as ushers.

Guests from out of town included several well-developed specimens from the jungles of Africa. They were inclined to be a bit hilarious, but when Rev. Morrill entered they sank into the back rows and the ceremony proceeded uninterrupted.

The bride and groom, escorted by the Daughters of Veterans and with a band playing a wedding march, proceeded from the hospital tent to the animal show. The lions were turned into the performing arena, after which the bridal party entered.

Commemorate Battle.

New Ulm—Arrangements are being made by the people of New Ulm, Fairfax and Redwood Falls suitably to commemorate the memorable attack on Fort Ridgely by the Indians on August 22, 1862. It is proposed to make the forty-sixth anniversary of the battle a reunion of old settlers and survivors of that historic struggle. The Indians at that time laid siege to the fort, but were repulsed by the valiant defenders. The fort was set on fire by the Indians several times, and the defenders, under a rain of shot and shell, extinguished the blaze in each instance.

Some years ago the Fort Ridgely National Park and Historical Association was organized, with Charles E. Flandrau, of St. Paul, as president, and Charles H. Hopkins, of Fairfax, as secretary. The former died several years ago and his place never has been filled.

Buying Up Houses.

Eveleth—The United States Steel Corporation is making a clean sweep in its negotiations to purchase business and residence property in the village of Sparta so that mining of iron ore can proceed.

The method adopted is that of securing options on the property for a limited time, with privilege to purchase at prices agreed upon. By the middle of this week the majority of owners had made deals with D. M. Mouser, the representative of the steel corporation.

Has Five Legs; Two Tails.

Stately—J. B. Rubey is the owner of a freak Poland China boar pig, which was born on April 25. The animal has five legs, the extra leg being between the two front legs; three ears, the additional one being behind the right shoulder; and it has two tails, the one out of place being located on the right hip. The animal weighs about twenty pounds at this time and is thriving. Mr. Rubey has received some flattering offers for his freak pig.

NEWS NOTES.

Crookston—The 25,000 club of this city has distributed 5,000 "Crookston Offers Opportunity" buttons thruout this and surrounding cities.

St. Peter—G. H. Fairclough, of St. Paul, will head the Minnesota State Music Teachers' association next year, having been elected at the seventh annual convention of the association being held in this city.

Minneapolis—Diamonds and rubies valued at $2,000 were stolen from the apartments of Miss R. S. Baum, 914 Fourth avenue south, in broad daylight. The burglars smashed open a trunk containing the gems, "snipped" the sparklers from their settings and escaped.

St. Paul—If present arrangements are carried out, and there is apparently no reason why they shouldn't be, international balloon races will be held during Shriners' week. The big race will start from the fair grounds Saturday, July 18.

Sparta—The United States Steel Corporation is buying the village, and will use houses not razed to permit mining for employes' homes.

Kimball—A mad dog came to town and was killed. Four dogs in the country were bitten and were also killed.

YOU'RE TOO THIN.

Even Slight Catarrhal Derangements of the Stomach Produce Acid Fermentation of the Food.

It's Stomach Catarrh

Some people are thin and always remain thin, from temperamental reasons. Probably in such cases nothing can be done to change this personal peculiarity.

But there are a large number of people who get thin, or remain thin, who naturally would be plump and fleshy but for some digestive derangement.

Thin people lack in adipose tissue.

Adipose tissue is chiefly composed of fat.

Fat is derived from the oily constituents of food.

The fat-making foods are called by the physiologist, hydrocarbons. This class of foods are not digested in the stomach at all. They are digested in the duodenum, the division of the alimentary canal just below the stomach.

The digestion of fat is mainly, if not wholly, the work of the pancreatic juice. This juice is of alkaline reaction, and is rendered inert by the addition of acid. A hyperacidity of the digestive fluids of the stomach passing down into the duodenum, destroys the pancreatic fluid for digestive purposes. Therefore, the fats are not digested or emulsified, and the system is deprived of its due proportion of oily constituents. Hence, the patient grows thin.

The beginning of the trouble is a catarrhal condition of the stomach which causes hyperacidity of the gastric juices. This hyperacidity is caused by fermentation of food in the stomach. When the food is taken into the stomach, if the process of digestion does not begin immediately, acid fermentation will take place. This creates a hyperacidity of the stomach juices which in their turn prevent the pancreatic digestion of the oils, and the emaciation results.

A dose of Peruna before each meal hastens the stomach digestion. By hurrying digestion, Peruna prevents fermentation of the contents of the stomach, and the pancreatic juice is thus preserved in its normal state. It then only remains for the patient to eat a sufficient amount of fat-forming foods, and the thinness disappears and plumpness takes its place.

TOO GOOD FOR THIS EARTH.

Type of Office Boy a Creature of Funny Man's Brain.

"So you have come in answer to my advertisement for office boy?" said the old broker briskly. "Do you smoke cigarettes?"

"No, sir," replied the saintly youngster in the doorway.

"Chew gum or read novels?"

"Never, sir."

"Play juggler with the paper weights or talk nonsense through the telephone when your employer is absent?"

"No, sir."

"Ever go to the circus?"

"Never saw a circus in my life, sir."

"How about baseball? Do you take two or three afternoons a week to see the game?"

"Don't like baseball, sir."

The old broker bit the end off his cigar.

"My boy," he said, quietly, "this is the twenty-ninth story, isn't it?"

"I think so, sir."

"Well, it is not high enough for you."

"Not high enough for me, sir?"

"No, you belong up in paradise."—Chicago News.

PLEASANT FOR PAPA.

The Minister—You kept beautifully still while I was preaching, Willie. Did you like the sermon?

Kid—No, sir; but papa said he'd spank me good and plenty if I woke him up.

Obeying Mother

A man had just arrived at a Massachusetts summer resort. In the afternoon he was sitting on the veranda when a handsome young woman and her six-year-old son came out. The little fellow at once made friends with the latest arrival.

"What is your name?" he asked. Then, when this information had been given, he added: "Are you married?"

"I am not married," responded the man, with a smile.

At this the child paused a moment, and, turning to his mother, said:

"What else was it, mamma, you wanted me to ask him?"—Harper's.

THE HERMIT

By C. E. HUGHES

(Copyright.)

Probably there was never in the world a more solitary man than Dickie Fergusson. It was not that he had no friends. The fact that he was always known as Dickie, and that most of his acquaintances had forgotten what his surname was (if they ever knew it) is sufficient to prove that he was not solitary in that sense. He knew scores of men—women he rather looked down upon—and they all liked him. Yet he never seemed altogether at ease in their presence.

He had a distinct dread of displaying anything that might suggest sentiment, and yet, if the truth were known, he was perhaps as sentimental a fellow as any healthy Englishman that ever lived. Nature had made him one of the best companions possible, and habit, which had almost become second nature, tried hard to make him a hermit. And, on the whole, it succeeded.

Dickie lived in a castle on the Neckar. It commanded a very fine view, but it was not in itself a picturesque castle. He had found it by chance during one of the lonely rides which he was wont to take from Heidelberg, on his motor-tricycle. Before he had found the castle he had seldom stayed long in one place. Possessed of independent means, he was accustomed to saying that his father had done him one bad turn by helping him into the world, and one good one by providing him with enough to live upon until he was comfortably out of it. He spent the best part of his time in traveling. The occupant of the castle was a baron whose distressed circumstances had induced him to let Dickie a suite of four rooms on the second floor. His arrangements were that he should appear at meal-times and take his food with the baron and baroness, but at all other times he was to be left to himself. The baron allowed him to play the hermit to his heart's content, and for some weeks Dickie declared himself as happy as a king with his gun, his motor, his camera, and his supply of books and magazines.

So things went very well until one day the baron, who liked Dickie, and was a little perturbed at his eccentricities, announced at lunch that he intended to have some more guests. Dickie protested strongly.

The baron looked amused and waved his hand with the air of one who, having lived long and seen much, is well able to select or reject in a matter of comfort.

Dickie became a trifle apologetic. "Well," he protested, "a throng of visitors means noise."

"I shall have, as hitherto, the greatest possible care for your sensitive nerves," said the baron with a dry smile.

"I think I'll take a holiday till the hurricane blows over," said Dickie.

"Why not wait and see?" asked the baron. "Perhaps they won't be so bad after all."

In point of fact, the baron had selected his guests with some skill. He had no intention of opening his house to anyone who might turn up. Of the eight members of the party, two were personal friends of his, and the rest were friends of these.

Dickie awaited their arrival gazing savagely from the window of his sitting-room. There were two Germans, five Americans, and one Englishman. Four of the Americans were of the fair sex, and these constituted the feminine element of the party. The baron had not led Dickie to expect any feminine element, so their advent excited little emotion in his breast other than that of fierce resentment until he caught sight of the last figure in the group. It was one of the American girls; but it was not the girl herself that attracted Dickie's attention. Behind her, towed by a lead, flickered a white fox-terrier puppy.

Now Dickie had no dog of his own and he wanted one. He was, moreover, particularly keen on having a fox-terrier. Accordingly, he determined to make friends with it even if that entailed making friends with its mistress.

And so it happened that when the Crowd—that was the name by which they called themselves—came in to dinner that evening, they found Dickie ready to make himself completely agreable. He laughed and jested and told anecdotes, and finally invited the lot of them, dog and all, to his rooms. He accompanied them on their picnics, photographed them, gave them the run of his books; opened his rooms to them. And he undertook the training of the dog, Bobs.

Bobs was a thoroughbred, with no markings excepting two brown and black spots which covered his eyes, and spread on either side to his ears. When he arrived at the castle he was entirely uneducated, but under Dickie's tuition he rapidly picked up the rudiments of canine politeness. After a week or two he would answer to his name, lie down, or come to heel; and he was beginning to take quite a promising interest in rat-holes. Then he mastered the intricacies of sitting up on his hind legs with a lump of sugar balanced upon his nose until he was assured that it was paid for. After that he went on to the "dead dog" feat, and finally he learned to talk. Bobs had, in fact, been cleverer than even he thought himself. Without knowing it, he had awakened in Dickie an interest—half-suppressed, it is true—in that mystery, the heart of a woman.

By degrees Dickie began to realize that he rather liked this American girl. He was, of course, not in love with her. No notion, despite the fact that he himself suggested it, could be more preposterous. It was, he tried to convince himself, her sense of humor that appealed to him.

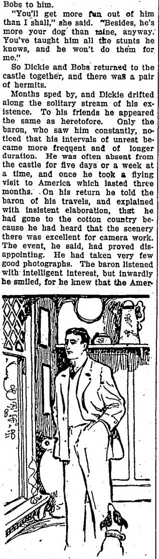
They became the best of friends, and Dickie—Dickie who hated sentiment—began to be in mortal fear of showing it. He would even withhold from her the ordinary civilities which are every woman's due rather than let her think she had the least power to influence him.

At length the day came for the Crowd to depart. Dickie accompanied them to the station, and as the train came in the American girl handed Bobs to him.

"You'll get more fun out of him than I shall," she said. "Besides, he's more your dog than mine, anyway. You've taught him all the stunts he knows, and he won't do them for me."

So Dickie and Bobs returned to the castle together, and there was a pair of hermits.

Months sped by, and Dickie drifted along the solitary stream of his existence. To his friends he appeared the same as heretofore. Only the baron, who saw him constantly, noticed that his intervals of unrest became more frequent and of longer duration. He was often absent from the castle for five days or a week at a time, and once he took a flying visit to America which lasted three months. On his return he told the baron of his travels, and explained with insistent elaboration, that he had gone to the cotton country because he had heard that the scenery there was excellent for camera work. The event, he said, had proved disappointing. He had taken very few good photographs. The baron listened with intelligent interest, but inwardly he smiled, for he knew that the American girl dwelt "down south." And suspecting other things he felt a little sorry for Dickie.



Strode to the Window and Looked Out.

The Hermit, however, settled down once more into the old groove, and months again sped by until on a certain day he received a letter from one of the members of the Crowd. It told him of the marriage of Bob's mistress.

Dickie dropped the letter, strode to the window, and looked out. He could not have explained exactly why he did it, except, perhaps, that he recalled the occasion on which he had first seen her with Bobs zigzagging behind. He gazed for a long, long time upon the fields and orchards that stretched below him, and then threw himself with a sigh on a low couch.

Bobs heard the sigh, and with ears thrust forward he peered into his master's face. There was no response, and the dog scrambled up to his knees. Dickie pushed him away and set his teeth together as one who suffers physical pain. Bobs was puzzled. A situation in which his attentions were altogether undesirable was new to him. It was not, indeed, within the limits of possibility. Doubtless he had gone to work in the wrong way.

Dickie stared with eyes that saw across two continents and an ocean, and Bobs had no place in his line of vision. The dog pondered awhile, and then decided to play his last and best card. Looking wistfully up at his master he opened his mouth, and made, with an effort, the sound that was neither a bark nor a growl. It was successful.

In a flash Dickie's thoughts had retraveled those thousands of miles, and they were back again in the sitting-room at the castle. Bobs sprang upon him and tried to lick his nose. A smile of satisfaction lit the man's face, a smile of companionship.

"Speak, Bobs, old man!" he said. Speak, Bobs!"

A Pioneer of Colorado and Nebraska.

Matthias Campbell, veteran of the Civil War and two Indian wars, and a pioneer of Colorado, now living at 218 East Nebraska street, Blair, Neb., says: "I had such pains in my back for a long time that I could not turn in bed, and at times there was an almost total stoppage of the urine. ### Days of Bohemia Ended.

Bohemia has ceased to exist in the Paris Latin quarter, according to Alfred Capus, the playwright, who may be regarded as an authority on the point. In a lecture delivered on behalf of the "Maison d'Etudiants," which is to be the headquarters of the General Association of Paris Students, he remarked: "We must not be afraid to acknowledge that our students are no longer Bohemians."

Canada's Extensive Fisheries.

The fisheries of Canada are the most extensive of the world. The eastern sea coast of the maritime provinces from the Bay of Fundy to the Straits of Belle Isle covers a distance of 5,600 miles, more than double that of Great Britain and Ireland, and the salt water inshore area, not considering minor indentations nor the great lakes of the west, covers more than 1,500 square miles.

Innovation in Politics.

The recent municipal elections in Paris were remarkable not only for the candidature of M. Laloe, who was soundly beaten, but for the first recorded candidature of a domestic servant. The liveried class is supposed to take on the political color of its surroundings and to be ultra-conservative as a rule, but this candidate stood as a republican socialist, and he is said to have been strongly supported by his kind.

Women and the Suffrage.

The severest criticism of the stupidity and inefficiency of the parliaments of the world is, in M. Marcel Prevost's opinion, the most universal indifference of women on the subject of voting. "Neither the representative nor the voter," says this expert in feminine psychology, "excites their envy. They do not even think about the vote, and if men offer it as a gift they pay no attention, burst out laughing or refuse point blank."

REAL HARD LUCK.

He—Then I am to understand that you absolutely reject my offer?

She—There is really nothing else for it.

He—Well, I think it very selfish of you. Here, I've actually gone and purchased a guide for our honeymoon.

The Perennial.

According to the Atlanta Constitution, a Georgia farmer posted this sign on his front gate:

"Candidates will pass on. No time to talk to 'em."

One morning his little boy shouted from the garden walk:

"There's one o' them canderdates here, an' he says he'll come in anyhow!"

The old man looked toward the gate and said:

"Let him in. There's no harm in him. I know him. He's been runnin' ever sence the war—jest to be a-runnin'. It runs in his blood an' he can't help it!"

Grape-Nuts a Perfectly Balanced Food.

No chemist's analysis of Grape-Nuts can begin to show the real value of the food—the practical value as shown by personal experience.

It is a food that is perfectly balanced, supplies the needed elements of brain and nerves in all stages of life from the infant, through the strenuous times of active middle life, and is a comfort and support in old age.

"For two years I have used Grape-Nuts with milk and a little cream, for breakfast. I am comfortably hungry for my dinner at noon.

"I use little meat, plenty of vegetables and fruit in season, for the noon meal, and if tired at tea time, take Grape-Nuts alone and feel perfectly nourished.

"Nerve and brain power, and memory are much improved since using Grape-Nuts. I am over sixty and weigh 155 lbs. My son and husband seeing how I have improved, are now using Grape-Nuts.

"My son, who is a traveling man eats nothing for breakfast but Grape-Nuts and a glass of milk. An aunt, over 70, seems fully nourished on Grape-Nuts and cream." "There's a Reason."

IMPRESSED THE LITTLE ONE.

Deportment of Colored Gentleman a Matter of Admiration.

Little Elsie, who had recently returned from a visit to Washington, was describing to her companion some of the wonderful things she had observed in the Capitol City.

"One evening," said she, breathlessly, "papa took me to have supper at a grand hotel where the dining room was awfully big, and at the tables around us sat great senators and representatives with their wives, all drinking champagne!"

"I suppose the manners of these great persons were perfect?" ventured her companion, with widened eyes.

"Yes," returned Elsie. "But," she added, with a sudden burst of enthusiasm, "the deportment of the colored gentlemen who served the wine was perfectly beautiful!"

ECZEMA ALL OVER HIM.

No Night's Rest for a Year and Limit of His Endurance Seemed Near—Owes Recovery to Cuticura.

"My son Clyde was almost completely covered with eczema. Physicians treated him for nearly a year without helping him any. His head, face, and neck were covered with large scabs which he would rub until they fell off. Then blood and matter would run out and that would be worse. Friends coming to see him said that if he got well he would be disfigured for life. When it seemed as if he could possibly stand it no longer, I used some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. That was the first night for nearly a year that he slept. In the morning there was a great change for the better. In about six weeks he was perfectly well. Our leading physician recommends Cuticura for eczema. by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

J. F. JACOBSON IS NOMINATED

FOR GOVERNOR OF MINNESOTA BY THE REPUBLICANS IN CONVENTION.

The Nomination Was By Acclamation, Young and Snider Withdrawing Leaving the Field Entirely to the Nominee.

Republican Nominees.

Governor—J. F. Jacobson, Madison.

Lieutenant Governor—A. O. Eberhart, Mankato, Renomination.

Secretary of State—Julius A. Schmahl, Redwood Falls, Renomination.

Treasurer—C. C. Dinehart, Slayton.

Attorney General—George T. Simpson, Winona.

Railroad Commissioners—Ira B. Mills, Moorhead (renomination); Charles E. Elmquist, Rush City.

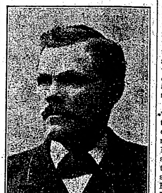
St. Paul, July 2.—Jacob F. Jacobson of Lac qui Parle county received the tribute of a unanimous nomination for governor at the hands of the republican state convention in the Auditorium in St. Paul yesterday.

Rival candidates withdrew early in the day, realizing that it was impossible to stem the Jacobson tide. After Frank M. Eddy had placed Mr. Jacobson's name before the convention, it was seconded by Attorney General E. T. Young and by Captain S. P. Snider.



JACOB F. JACOBSON.

Joel P. Heatwole, the other candidate, was not in the hall and did not appear even after he had been appointed with the other two defeated candidates on a committee to escort Mr. Jacobson to the hall.

The convention was a record-breaker in its early stages for speed and for enthusiasm. There were roars of applause for Jacobson at every stage and also for his magnanimous rivals. Every nomination was by acclamation until the end of the ticket was reached. A ballot was then necessary on railroad commission, as the friends of J. H. Grass put up a stubborn fight against the slate. Charles E. Elmquist and Ira B. Mills were nominated, receiving 936 and 731 votes respectively, to 478 for Grass and 132 for A. C. Aaby.

At 11:20 Dr. A. B. Cole, chairman of the state central committee, called the convention to order. Rev. Mr. Hale of St. Paul opened the proceedings with prayer, calling for a continuance of the policies of President Roosevelt and the nomination of honest, sincere men. His prayer was so eloquent and patriotic that some of the delegates applauded heartily when the prayer was finished.

Mr. Cole called for nominations for temporary chairman. J. E. Diamond of Minneapolis presented the name of Judge John H. Steele, Robert C. Dunn of Princeton seconding the nomination on behalf of the friends of J. F. Jacobson, and in the interests of harmony. Dar Reese and other delegates also seconded the nomination. The vote for Steele was unanimous.

W. E. Lee then moved the appointment of a committee of fifteen on resolutions, one from each congressional district and six at large. Chairman Steele had hard work to read the names of this committee, which furnished some amusement. He appointed Frank M. Wilson of Red Wing, Tams Bixby, St. Paul; L. O. Cooke, Kellogg; L. S. Swenson, Minneapolis; E. Colester, Waseca; J. W. Andrews, Mankato; W. E. Lee, Mankato; George J. Bradley, Norwood; George W. Somerville, New Ulm; B. N. Anderson, Albert Lea; P. E. Dowling, Eveleth; H. L. D'Armes, Hector; D. P. O'Neil, Red Lake; Albert Berg, Warroad; R. B. Forest, Murray county.

A. J. Rockne of Zumbrota was selected for secretary and the following as assistant secretaries: C. S. Edwards, Albert Lea; David H. Lawrence, Two Harbors; and John A. Dalzell, Morton. Lawrence was a candidate for secretary and there was a little mixup that was settled by R. B. Brower.

Frank M. Eddy was greeted with an outburst of cheers as he stepped to the front of the stage to nominate Jacobson.

Tumultous applause swelled from the big audience when Attorney General E. T. Young called for the floor and the scene resembled a national convention, for many of the delegates in their enthusiasm arose to their feet and waving their hats and handkerchiefs shouted to the top of their voices.

Captain S. P. Snider seconded the nomination of John F. Jacobson in a speech which he read.

From all parts of the convention hall there were calls for Mr. Heatwole, in the expectation that he would second the nomination of Mr. Jacobson. But there was no response.

Mr. Foss of the Grant county delegation and a member of the Isanti delegation also spoke briefly, seconding the nomination of Jacobson. J. G. Lennon of Hennepin then moved that the secretary be instructed to cast the unanimous vote of the convention for Jacob F. Jacobson of Lac qui Parle.

Ripley B. Brower of St. Cloud then moved that the nomination of J. F. Jacobson be made by acclamation and a rising of delegates to their feet. The entire convention arose and made the nomination unanimous.

M. J. Dowling of Olivia then moved that a committee of three be appointed to wait upon Mr. Jacobson and escort him to the hall. A. E. Rice of Willmar protested that Mr. Jacobson was not nominated yet, since all the convention had done was to pass a motion to nominate him by acclamation. He was overruled and Chairman Steele then appointed as the notification committee, Mr. Jacobson's three rivals, E. T. Young, S. P. Snider and Joel P. Heatwole. The last name was greeted with an especial round of cheers, since he had failed to make an appearance in the seconding speeches.

On motion of Dar F. Reese, the convention then went ahead to nominate the rest of the ticket. Lieutenant Governor O. A. Eberhart was placed in nomination by Dr. J. W. Andrews of Mankato, who said he had a short speech prepared, but was advised by the delegates to "cut it out," and did so. Eberhart was seconded by George H. Sullivan of Stillwater and John E. Diamond of Minneapolis, and on motion of Mr. Wilson of Mankato the nomination was made by acclamation.

C. T. Howard of Redwood Falls nominated Julius A. Schmahl for another term as secretary of state, and J. F. Calhoun seconded the nomination for Hennepin. J. F. Calhoun moved that the nomination be made by acclamation.

C. C. Dinehart of Slayton was renominated for state treasurer on motion of Mr. Todd of Slayton.

J. J. McCaughey of Dodge county nominated George T. Simpson of Winona for attorney general.

W. E. Lee, chairman of the committee on resolutions, presented a report containing fourteen planks. These, in brief, were as follows:

First.—An expression of deep admiration for the administration of President Roosevelt and regret for the loss of his services as president.

Second.—An expression of pleasure over the nomination of William H. Taft, as a worthy successor to President Roosevelt.

Third.—Indorsement of James S. Sherman for the vice presidency.

Fourth.—Indorsement of the entire national platform.

Fifth.—Commendation of the services of the Minnesota delegation in congress.

Sixth.—A demand for the revision of the tariff.

Seventh.—Indorsement of the work on the Panama canal.

Eighth.—Commendation of the policy of the administration for the conservation of natural resources.

Ninth.—Demand for additional railway regulation.

Tenth.—Approval of the tax amendment to the constitution proposed by the legislature.

Eleventh.—Equal rights plank, with a resolution presented by the American Federation of Labor favoring the enactment of the employers' liability act.

Twelfth.—A temperance plank, favoring the enactment of such legislation as would insure the strict enforcement of the local option and high license laws of the statute books.

Thirteenth.—Commendation of the state immigration bureau.

Fourteenth.—Favoring good roads.

The Temperance Plank.

The temperance plank is as follows.

"The republican party has always stood for a firm and efficient regulation and control of the liquor traffic in this state, as is evidenced by the local option and high license laws in favor of which it declared in 1886 and subsequently enacted, and by many other laws thereafter written in our statutes, and we now favor and recommend such legislation as will strengthen these laws and insure strict enforcement.

Harvey, Judge A. J. Plowman, Col. W. J. Thornby, John Hunter, State's Attorney R. P. Stewart and N. E. Franklin.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

More Are Found.

St. Cloud—Are there still richer and greater iron deposits in Minnesota than the vast underground stretches of ore in the Mesaba and Vermillion ranges that have made hundreds of men wealthy and endowed the north star state with millions for generations yet to come? Is the so-called Cuyuna range really an extension of the Mesaba and does the ore deposit become deeper as it runs from the great workings at the northwest end to the yet undeveloped southwest?

Such is the opinion of D. H. Freeman, who has located an iron find of undoubted richness between Randall and Fort Ripley, on property owned by himself and his associates, mostly St. Cloud men.

The new find begins at Randall, a small station on the Staples cut-off of the Northern Pacific, fourteen miles from Little Falls, and extends to Fort Ripley on the east side of the Mississippi.

It is a continuation of the so-called Cuyuna range, but as Mr. Freeman asserts, is really the extension of the Mesaba, the richest iron ore range in the world.

This newly discovered underground mineral belt ranges in width from forty to sixty acres and extends for a distance of fourteen miles, with a few short breaks. The ore is found at a distance of from 80 to 100 feet from the surface.

Governor Johnson Armed.

St. Paul—It was an ugly looking six-shooter, probably made at about the time of the civil war, that Frank A. Day, private secretary to Gov. Johnson, received in an express package from Arizona. It is considerably the worse for wear and disuse, but that does not reduce its value, which is based on the fact or belief that it once belonged to the notorious Frank James, one of the gang of bandits who raided the Northfield bank back in the seventies.

The "cannon" was received from Cleve Van Dyke, formerly executive clerk in the governor's office, and is a gift to Gov. Johnson. In a letter from Warren, Ariz., Mr. Van Dyke stated that while in New Mexico recently he was given the revolver by Dr. Howard Crutcher, who had received it from Peter Bedell of Mexico, Mo., a member of the Jesse James gang, which made the famous raid in Northfield. He states that the pistol was carried in that raid by Frank James.

Swept Thru Culvert.

St. Paul—Swept thru a culvert by a rush of water, Henry Lynch, 12 years old, has had a remarkable escape from drowning. The boy lives at 167 Eaton street. His mishap was witnessed by several employees of the department of public works, who reported the incident. The boy was swept thru an 18-inch culvert running under State street, between Plato and Florida streets. The culvert is a pipe about 100 feet long, yet such was the rush of water that the boy was borne thru without being harmed.

The water bore him head first to the tunnel so quickly that, as he afterwards said, "he did not know what struck him." A moment later the struggling form shot from the other end of the pipe and rolled over in the water and sand.

The boy was quickly picked up and sent to his home near by, unharmed.

Ralphs Nearly Drowned.

Crookston—While returning with her husband, Mrs. George A. Ralph of Crookston, and daughter Dorothy, met with a peculiar accident between the Roseau river and Lancaster, Minn. Mrs. Ralph had been visiting at Badger, in Roseau county, with friends, and was lured by the fair weather to brave the difficulties of the Roseau river, and made the trip down with Mr. Ralph. Between Caribou and Lancaster they were thrown into a large pool of water by the breaking of the rear seat in which they were sitting, and had a narrow escape from drowning. Mrs. Ralph came into Crookston with her daughter.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul—A street car missed a switch at Seventh and Wabasha and threw a baby into the air, but luckily the baby fell on a pillow.

St. Paul—"John from Texas" was the only name by which a colored man who jumped from a freight train in the yards and was killed, was known to his fellow tourists in a box car.

Minneapolis—Firebugs made five attempts in one night to start disastrous fires in the heart of the business district. The aggregate loss will reach about $3,000. The fire marshal has started an investigation and several arrests may follow.

Crookston—Five thousand people attended the first day of the celebration at McIntosh, Minn., east of here, of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the settlement of the Thirteen Towns. Politicians from all parts of the state were at the celebration.

South St. Paul—The flood in the Mississippi will reach seventeen feet above low water mark; a portion of the stock yards is inundated, and great damage on the flats along the river is anticipated.

Faribault—Authorities of Shattuck military academy were notified by the war department that the institution has again been selected as an honor school.

WHERE SHE HAD THE BULGE.

Telephone Girl's Great Opportunity to Get Gloriously Even.

"You know that red-headed cashier that had the nerve to complain of me to the boss the other day," said the girl at the telephone desk, to a New York Times writer. "Well, I got even with him, all right. He ain't married, but he's got a best girl. His father owns a shoe factory over in Jersey, and rich—my! Well, she called him up the other afternoon at her usual time. 'Is Mr. Smith there?' she asks, in her most romantickist voice. 'Yes,' I answers, just as honeylike as she. 'It's his wife wants him, isn't it?' With that Miss Girl hung up with such a jerk my ear hurt. Smith goes around wondering why she does not call him up. Every time he dares he says to me: 'Has any one called me on the 'phone, Miss Limit?' And I look as innocent as a kid and shake my head 'No.' I tell you, us telephone girls can turn 'Joy to the Bride' into 'Nothin' Doin'' any time we please. Me for Us."

ALL IN THE FAMILY.

Afridi's Simple Explanation of His Easy Victory.

Many of the hill tribesmen in India join the British side and become most valuable recruits. Some years ago in a campaign against the Afridis one of the columns was much annoyed by a persistent "sniper" who followed it daily. Eventually one of the newly joined Afridi recruits requested leave to fall out for a couple of hours to settle the trouble. At the end of the time he strolled in placidly and flung down the head of the sniper.

On being congratulated by his officer and asked how he had managed to find his enemy so quickly, he replied laconically: "I know his ways, sahib."

"Why," said the officer, "was he a friend of yours?"

"My father, sahib!"

Her Explanation.

Otto E. Schaar, president of the Waiters' club of New York, in a recent argument on tipping, said to his opponent, sharply: "Your reply reminds me of a woman's reply in a German court. This woman was accused of poisoning her husband. The prosecuting attorney said to her: 'You have heard the evidence. The body contained enough arsenic to kill ten persons. What have you to say?' 'My husband,' the woman answered, 'was a big eater.'"

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

KIND THOUGHT OF THE BRIDE.

Possibly Turned Silly Custom Into Something Really Worth While.

"The most considerate girl I ever knew got married yesterday," said the man. "She showed her thoughtfulness in a most unusual way. The day before the wedding she called the attention of the rest of the family to a row of old shoes standing in a downstairs closet.

"'I want you to throw these after the carriage,' she said. 'They are all mates. I collected them to throw away. I learned some time ago that certain poor souls who have hard work to get clothes of any description keep a lookout for big weddings. They hang around the house at going-away time and pick up the good luck shoes. Maybe they get a fit, and maybe they don't. Anyway, I've done all I could to accommodate them.

"'Here are six pairs of shoes to be fired after me. If somebody doesn't get fitted in that collection, it isn't my fault.'"

SUFFERED TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.

With Eczema—Her Limb Peeled and Foot Was Raw—Thought Amputation Was Necessary—Believes Life Saved by Cuticura.

"I have been treated by doctors for twenty-five years for a bad case of eczema on my leg. They did their best, but failed to cure it. My doctor had advised me to have my leg cut off. At this time my leg was peeled from the knee, my foot was like a piece of raw flesh, and I had to walk on crutches. I bought a set of Cuticura Remedies. After the first two treatments the swelling went down, and in two months my leg was cured and the new skin came on. The doctor was surprised and said that he would use Cuticura for his own patients. I have now been cured over seven years, and but for the Cuticura Remedies I might have lost my life. Mrs. J. B. Renaud, 277 Mentana St., Montreal, Que., Feb. 20, 1907."

Suicides in Natal.

The abnormal suicide wave which is passing over this country has been made the subject of very serious thought, and it is well that it should be so. In Natal within the past four weeks there have been three suicides of Europeans, which, on the basis of population, is four times greater than the suicide rate in England and Wales, a deplorable state of affairs indeed. In Durban a few weeks ago it was stated that suicides were taking place at the rate of one a day.—Natal Witness.

Why Not Both?

It is absolutely true that the British public goes to the theater to be amused, not to be instructed. It considers that it pays its money to be amused, and it sullenly resents the presence of any powder in the jam. It is when this attitude changes that the great renaissance of the British drama will arrive.—London Daily Graphic.

Without Soul.

"Do you enjoy hearing the robins singing joyously in the treetops?"

"No," answered Mr. Sirius Baker, "I don't. If a human being kept practicing the same tune forever, like a robin, they'd run him out of the community."

ABSENCE OF POMP MARKS FUNERAL

In Accordance with the Wishes of the Widow, Final Ceremonies for Ex-President Cleveland Are of the Most Simple Description---Prominent Men Present.

Among notable utterances of the late ex-President Cleveland the following will be longest remembered:

> Public office is a public trust.
>
> After an existence of nearly 20 years of almost innocuous desuetude these laws are brought forth.
>
> It is a condition which confronts us—not a theory.
>
> Party honesty is party expediency.
>
> If the wind is in the south or west so much the better, but let's go fishing, wherever the wind may be.
>
> Don't give your friend wild duck uncooked unless his wife knows how to cook it; the gift will be discredited in the eating.
>
> The duck-hunter is born, not made.
>
> I would not have our people sober; but I would have them thoughtful and patriotic.
>
> I do not believe that nations any more than individuals can violate the rules of honesty and fair-dealing.
>
> Tread lightly, gentlemen, for you have to do with temples of the Holy Ghost. (This to assembled physicians.)

Princeton.—The funeral of Grover Cleveland was marked by extreme simplicity. No pomp nor splendor had place in the ceremonies. There were no bands to play dirges on the way to the old Princeton cemetery, no military escort, no eulogy by the officiating clergymen.

The half mile of thoroughfare through which the cortege passed from Westland, the Cleveland home on Bayard lane, to the cemetery was policed by mounted troops, but they were there for police duty and as a measure of precaution in protecting the living president rather than for display in paying tribute to a departed chief executive.

Four clergymen officiated at the house and at the grave. They read the burial service from the Presbyterian Book of Common Worship, but offered no eulogy. This simple but impressive service was conducted by Dr. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton, Rev. Dr. Williams R. Richards, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian church of New York; Rev. Sylvester W. Beach, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Princeton, where the Cleveland family attended, and Rev. Maitland V. Bartlett, former pastor of the same church.

There were no honorary pallbearers. Those who bore Mr. Cleveland's body to its final resting place in the Cleveland plot were Mayor George B. McClellan, Paul Morton, Commodore E. C. Benedict, Richard Watson Gilder of New York; Prof. Paul Van Dyke, Dean Andrew F. West, Prof. John G. Hibben, Junius S. Morgan, a nephew of J. Pierpont Morgan; A. D. Russell, Prof. Howard McLenahan, and Bayard Stockton of Princeton. The simple Presbyterian service was said at the grave, the casket lowered into the ground, and one of the country's most distinguished citizens had become but a memory. A silver plate on the casket bore the inscription: "Grover Cleveland, March 18, 1837-June 24, 1908."

President Roosevelt, Gov. Fort of New Jersey, Gov. Hughes of New York, Gov. Hoke Smith of Georgia, members of President Cleveland's cabinet, and other notable citizens attended the funeral. After the ceremony the president left Princeton at once in his private car Signet.

Mr. Cleveland was buried here in the family plot in the old Princeton cemetery, where, under a little ivy-covered mound, now lies the body of his eldest daughter, Ruth, who died here at Westland in January, 1904. It is not far from the entrance to the cemetery on Witherspoon street, less than a quarter of a mile from the university campus, and adjoins a tiny chapel. For many generations the presidents of Princeton university have been buried in this cemetery. Here, too, rests the body of Lawrence Hutton, and not far away stands the monument to the memory of the brilliant and erratic Aaron Burr.

TRIBUTE TO GREAT MAN.

President Roosevelt's Proclamation Eulogizing Dead Statesman.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.—News of the death of ex-President Grover Cleveland was communicated to President Roosevelt at his summer home here and caused radical changes in the president's plans for the immediate future.

Mr. Roosevelt was shocked at the tidings, and telegraphed to Mrs. Cleveland at Princeton, N. J., tendering his sympathy and that of Mrs. Roosevelt. Afterward announcement was made that President and Mrs. Roosevelt would attend the funeral services at Princeton.

Mr. Roosevelt immediately announced that he would abandon his proposed trip to New London, Conn., to witness the Harvard-Yale boat races. He also issued a proclamation to the country, eulogizing the dead statesman, ordering all government flags half-masted for 30 days, and directing that military and naval honors be accorded the late president on the day of the funeral.

A beautiful floral wreath was ordered by the president to be sent in his name and that of Mrs. Roosevelt to Princeton, to be placed by the bier.

In accordance with custom, President Roosevelt issued a special proclamation when advised of the death of the ex-president. The proclamation follows:

By the President of the United States.
A Proclamation.
The White House, June 24, 1908.

To the People of the United States:

Grover Cleveland, president of the United States from 1885 to 1889 and again from 1893 to 1897, died at 8:40 o'clock this morning at his home in Princeton, N. J. In his death the nation has been deprived of one of its greatest citizens. By profession a lawyer, his chief services to his country were rendered during a long, varied and honorable career in public life.

As mayor of his city, as governor of his state, and twice as president, he showed signal power as an administrator, coupled with entire devotion to the country's good and a courage that quailed before no hostility when once he was convinced where his duty lay. Since his retirement from the presidency he has continued well and faithfully to serve his countrymen by the simplicity, dignity, and uprightness of his private life.

In testimony of the respect in which his memory is held by the government and people of the United States, I do hereby direct that the flags on the White House and the several departmental buildings be displayed at half-staff for a period of 30 days, and that suitable military and naval honors, under the orders of the secretaries of war and of the navy be rendered on the day of the funeral.

Done this twenty-fourth day of June in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eight and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-second.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

By the president,
ALVEY A. ADEE,
Acting Secretary of State.

Render All Official Honors.

Washington.—Appropriate honors were paid to the memory of ex-President Cleveland by all branches of the government. Immediately upon the receipt of the president's proclamation formally announcing Mr. Cleveland's death steps were taken to carry out the provisions of the executive proclamation.

All army posts and stations and all commanders-in-chief of fleets in the navy, captains of detached ships and navy yards and naval stations, were ordered to fly the national colors at half staff for 30 days.

ALL JOIN IN TRIBUTE.

Testimony to the Character and Ability of Grover Cleveland.

Prominent men of all party affiliations and leaders in their respective walks in life joined in tributes to the worth of Grover Cleveland. Among them were the following:

> "He was one of the really great men of the country."—W. H. Taft.
>
> "He was the best type of public servant and private citizen."—Vice-President Fairbanks.
>
> "No man realized more fully the ideal of an incorruptible public servant."—George B. Cortelyou.
>
> "The country has lost a citizen whose wisdom, courage, and patriotism were of the highest order."—Admiral Dewey.
>
> "His place in history is sure. Nothing that can be written or withheld can add to or detract from his imperishable fame."—Adlai E. Stevenson.
>
> 'Grover Cleveland was a typical product of American life, blood, and training."—Judson Harmon.
>
> "Grover Cleveland was too great a man to dismiss with a few words."—John G. Carlisle.
>
> "One of the greatest presidents the United States has ever had."—Harry Pratt Judson, president of the University of Chicago.
>
> "He was all that any one could be."—Lambert Tree.
>
> "He had a way of gaining the respect even of his enemies."—Judge Kenesaw M. Landis.
>
> "He was ever impelled by a conviction of what was right, and having formed that conviction he was a rock."—Judge Peter S. Grosscup.
>
> "When his history is properly written he will be rated as one of the half dozen greatest presidents."—Gov. Johnson of Minnesota.
>
> "Mr. Cleveland's death ends the phenomenal career of one of the strongest characters in the political world of the present generation."—William J. Bryan.

THE JOYOUS FOURTH

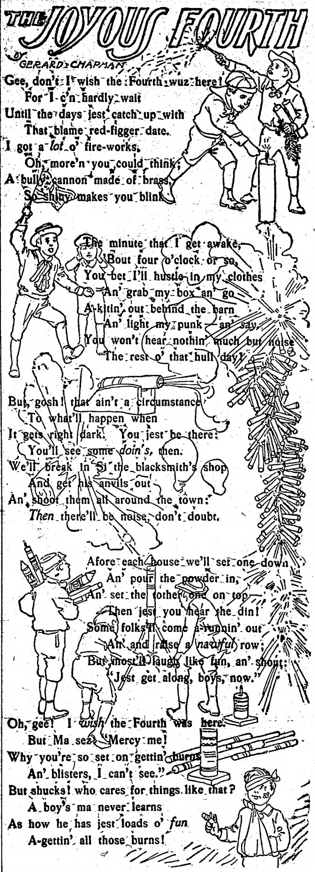
By GERARD CHAPMAN



Gee, don't I wish the Fourth wuz here!
For I c'n hardly wait
Until the days jest catch up with
That blame red-figger date.
I got a lot o' fire-works,
Oh, more'n you could think;
A bully cannon made of brass,
So shiny makes you blink.

The minute that I get awake,
'Bout four o'clock or so,
You bet I'll hustle in my clothes
An' grab my box an' go
A-kitin' out behind the barn
An' light my punk—an' say,
You won't hear nothin' much but noise
The rest o' that hull day!

But, gosh! that ain't a circumstance
To what'll happen when
It gets right dark. You jest be there:
You'll see some doin's, then.
We'll break in Si the blacksmith's shop
And get his anvils out
An' shoot them all around the town:
Then there'll be noise, don't doubt.

Afore each house we'll set one down
An' pour the powder in,
An' set the tother one on top—
Then jest you hear the din!
Some folks'll come a-runnin' out
An' and raise a nawful row;
But most'll laugh like fun, an' shout:
"Jest get along, boys, now."

Oh, gee! I wish the Fourth was here.
But Ma sez "Mercy me!
Why you're so set on gettin' burns
An' blisters, I can't see."
But shucks! who cares for things like that?
A boy's ma never learns
As how he has jest loads o' fun
A-gettin' all those burns!

On the Glorious Fourth

By MAUD WALKER

WITH many firecrackers in his hand;
Some matches in his pocket;
A "Hip, hip, hurrah!" on his tongue;
And one immense skyrocket,

Thus little Billy wandered forth
Most joyously to try
To celebrate in the right way
Th' Glorious Fourth of July.

He fell in line behind the band
That played "Red, White, and Blue;"
He sang to help the noise along,
Though the words he never knew.

Then to the Celebration Grounds
He marched with gallant tread;
And listened while a Wondrous Man
"The Declaration" read.

Then came the picnic dinner
Spread 'neath a great oak tree;
And little Billy ate his fill
While the band played "Liberty."

And all the rest the day was spent
In making fun and noise;
Shooting lots of firecrackers off
With all the girls and boys.

And when at eve he wandered home,
As tired as he could be,
He said: "I love the Glorious Fourth,
'Tis a day what jest suits me."

THE ONE DAY.

Sizz! Boom! Bang!
You can't get away,
So you may as well stay
To the big show.
It will positively appear
But once this year.
Promptly at midnight
The red light
Begins to burn
And no one dares turn
It low
Until the last firecracker has been exploded.
Hark, children, the day is loaded,
And you'll know it when you see it
Unless your ear muffs fit
Pretty quick.
It is the reflex action of the big stick.
The only and original grand aggregation of noise.
Come and bring your boys.

AN EXPLANATION.

"Why is Fourth of July anyhow, Eddie?"

"Why—er—you see—Christopher Columbus or George Washington discovered it in 1492, an' so we don't have no school on that day!"

OFFICIAL PAPER of RED LAKE COUNTY

Subscription price, $1.50 per year
If paid in advance, $1.00.

Entered at the Post-office in Plummer, Minn. as Second Class Mail Matter.

Harmony was everywhere in the Republican state convention. In fact, the principal fault, if any, was that it was almost too harmonious.

The Republican State Convention nominated J. F. Jacobson for Governor by acclamation. The rival candidates, Young and Snider, heartily seconded and harmony in their ranks this year is assured. It is well; Minnesota's next governor will be republican.

The Crookston Daily Journal has discovered that congress passed a law giving the State the right to drain government lands and published the bill in its issue of Tuesday. The news of the passage of this bill, and the text of the bill in full, was published in the PLUMMER PIONEER five weeks ago.

Congressman Steenerson has filed as a candidate for re-nomination and election to the office which he has so thoroughly filled during the past few years. His constituents place absolute reliance in the big congressman and he has never failed in his duty to them. That he will be re-nominated and elected goes without saying.

Hot Weather Cream.

To the patrons of the Emardville Creamery Association:

The hottest time of the year is at hand and with it poor cream is beginning to come to our Creamery again, and as the poor cream comes in the price we receive for our butter goes down. Now, whose fault is this? It is not the buttermaker's fault as all the score cards we got this year showed every point perfect except flavor. It is rather old flavor, which means that the cream was not delivered to the creamery often enough; or it is poor flavor, which means that the cream was not cooled and aerated enough.

Now I would like to ask those who bring this old or poor cream did they ever stop to think what it means to lose one cent on a pound of butter? I will give you one instance, that of last Monday's return. This was for a shipment of 24 tubs of butter, weighing something over 1,400 pounds.

This shipment brought us only one cent premium, while before we got two cents premium. This means a loss of over $14.00. Just think, only 24 tubs. Now what would the loss be on 300 tubs, or about a whole months make? It would be a loss of about $200 or more a month. Now dont you think it would pay to bring your cream three times a week and to spend a few minutes more in taking care of it. Why not spend a few extra minutes and attend to such an important matter for all there is in it. To be careless means an enormous loss in money and at the same time the loss of the good reputation our creamery has gained. I, for one, believe that while we are in the dairy business we ought to do it in the most business like way. It is the only way to improve this country and our own pocket-books.

Yours for the dairy business and all there is in it,

A. M. HASS, Secretary.

A Mistake Corrected.

In our last week's issue we published a news item to the effect that G. A. Hovland, the Lillo buttermaker, and Miss Ida M. Lillo had been united in marriage. We got our information from a source that we have always found reliable but our informant had evidently got the names mixed. Mr. Hovland and Miss Lillo were married sure enough, but the bride was Miss Elvira Lillo instead of her sister, Miss Ida M. Lillo. We are glad to make the correction and in doing so we do not feel called upon to make any apology for what we said. The nice things we intended to say about the bride apply equally as well to one sister as the other and the groom is a young man that any girl might be proud to have for a husband. May good luck and happiness be their portion.

BEING A TAXPAYER

It will interest you to know that the official county printing has cost over $500 less, up to the present time this year, than it would have cost at the price paid last year. In other words, the PLUMMER PIONEER has saved the taxpayers of Red Lake County a lot of money by smashing the printing "combine" and then sucessfully fighting the injunction proceedings started by H. E. Ives.

AN ANECDOTE OF KEAN.

How One Actress Won and Another Lost His Good Opinion.

Kean possessed an inordinate love of praise even from his humblest worshipers, says the London Tatler. During his brilliant management of the Princess theater one of the ballet girls who sometimes was given a few lines to speak and who knew her manager's failing used to haunt the wings and go into audible raptures over the tragedian's acting.

He was playing with great success a pathetic part, and tears flowed down the cheeks of the cunning girl, who eventually attracted personal notice from the actor. Soon she found herself promoted to a superior position.

Her advancement of course was noticed by her companions, and to her greatest friend among them she told her secret, advising the girl to follow her example.

Nothing loath, No. 2 appeared at the wings and almost howled with grief through Kean's chief scenes, when, to her amazement, he strode angrily by her; then, pointing her out, exclaimed, "Who is that idiot?" She did not improve her position, for since the advice of her knowing friend the bill had been changed, and her manager was appearing in one of his most successful comic parts.

Drowned while Bathing.

On Wednesday afternoon Swen Larson, aged over 70 years, was drowned while bathing in the Lost river near his home a few miles south of here. He was a widower and leaves one son, Solomon Swenson. He had gone to the river for a bath and failing to return a search was made. The body was found face downwards in shallow water. Coroner Bellair was notified and he came out and after examining some witnesses decided that his death was purely accidental and that no inquest was necessary. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon.

Looks Like A Winner.

Wilhelm Michelet, the popular Thief River Falls lawyer has filed as a candidate for the Republican nomination for county attorney. He arrived home with his bride last week and immediately proceeded to get into the political game. Mr. Michelet has been engaged in the practise of law at Thief River Falls for several years and has built up a very nice practise by his careful and conscientious methods. He filled the position of city attorney of Thief River Falls for some time in a most satisfactory manner and his honesty and integrity have never been questioned even by those whom he may have been arrayed against in following his calling.

There will undoubtedly be other candidates in the field but Mr. Michelet will put up a campaign that will keep his opponents guessing. He will make a through effort and has probably a larger circle of personal friends in all parts of the county to help boost his candidacy than any other lawyer in the county who is likely to be a candidate for the office.

BREAKING IN NEW MEN.

One Corporation Publishes a Text Book For New Employees.

A large corporation has lately shown its appreciation of the value of giving new employees a thorough general knowledge of the business by publishing a book describing in an interesting fashion all the details of the company's work.

It is a volume of over 200 pages, illustrated with facsimile cuts of various reports and other forms used. A copy is furnished every employee, and he is expected to master not merely the portions pertaining to his own work, but the entire book.

Quizzes are held at frequent intervals throughout the organization, and dismissal is the penalty for ignorance of any subject treated in the volume.

"It costs us about $2,000 to publish this book," says the president of the company, "but we consider it money well invested, and we are planning to issue a new and up to date edition every year.

"When a man enters our employ he is told to read this manual and do nothing else until he has thoroughly mastered it. This gives him a general knowledge of the business, and if there are any points he does not understand they are cleared up before he begins work."—System.

His Victory.

A physical culture tutor said at the end of a recent women's boxing and fencing exhibition:

"Physical culture among women, women's growing strength and pluck, lend interest to marriage, change marriage's complexion.

"'How is poor Smithers gettin' on?' said one man to another.

"'Well,' said the other, 'Smithers is now almost recovered from the beatin' he gave his wife last Saturday night.'"—Los Angeles Times.

Violating the Game Law.

At Brooks on Monday Game Warden Munch arrested Charles Lajambe for catching fish in the Lost River by means of a fish trap which he was operating contrary to law. Lajambe entered a plea of guilty of having two illegally caught fish and Justice Laniel assessed a fine of $20 and costs.

The law prescribes a penalty of $10 for each fish and in a similar manner provides a fine for each game bird or animal illegally killed.

Mr. Munch called at this office in the evening of the same day and at his request we publish the fines and rewards provided by law as follows:

PENALTIES

For resisting or obstructing any officer: Fine of not less than $50 nor more than $100 and costs of prosecutions, or imprisonment for not less than 60 nor more than 90 days, for each offence.

For killing, selling, buying or shipping Moose and Deer—Fine of not less than $50 nor more than $100 and costs of prosecution, or imprisonment for not less than 30 nor more than 90 days, for each and every moose or deer, or any part thereof, including the hide and horns, taken, caught, killed, sold, offered or exposed for sale, had in possession, shipped by common carrier or conveyed in any manner, or had in possession with intent to so ship, or transport to any point within or without this state in violation of law; provided, however, that such fine shall not exceed $2,000, or such imprisonment exceed the term of one year.

For taking, killing, selling shipping or having in possession game birds or fish—Fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100 and costs of prosecutions, or imprisonment for not less than 10 nor more than 60 days, for each and every game bird or fish illegally killed or had in possession, etc.,

For hunting without license required in certain cases—Fine of not less than $25 nor more than $100 and costs of prosecution, or imprisonment for not less than 10 nor more than 90 days for each and every offence.

REWARDS

The following rewards will be paid to any person making complaint, or furnishing information, that will result in the arrest and conviction of any person violating the laws for which the above penalties are provided: Moose or caribou, $50; Deer, $25, any game bird or fish, $10; provided, however that these rewards shall not be paid to any game warden regularly employed and receiving salary from said commission.

A Pen Point.

"I have an idea, a glorious idea!" cried the inventor's wife. "One of those simple little ideas wherein millions lie."

"Yes?" said he, tossing the long white hair back from his ears. "Proceed."

"It is a two pointed pen!" cried the lady. "A reversible pen. You write with one point till that is worn out; then you pull the pen from the holder, reverse it and write with the other point."

"Excellent, but"—

"I should say it was excellent! For the same money, out of the same quantity of material, two pens instead of one. Where are your patent application papers, James? There's no time to be lost."

The old inventor shook his head and smiled sadly.

"Jenny," he said, "never try to improve on the steel pen. The subject is too old. Too many minds have been ahead of you. That idea of yours for a pen point at both ends was patented all over the world in 1860. The pen appeared on the market in 1870. The people would have none of it. A failure, it was withdrawn.

"But penmakers and the patent people tell me that never a year goes by without the arrival of a hundred or so of excited letters from people who, like yourself, think that they have hit on an epoch making idea, a two pointed pen."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Just Like Rich Folks.

"Marshall Field, Jay Gould and Potter Palmer habitually carried only small amounts in their pockets," said the man who has a taste for the odd.

"Well," responded his friend, "when I am gone you can truthfully say the same about me."—Washington Herald.

The Lesser Evil.

"Of course," the tragedian was saying, "in the theatrical business a short run is bad"—

"But," interrupted the critic, "a good, long walk is worse, isn't it?"—Exchange.

One Exception.

"You know," began Lovett, "it is said that 'love levels all things.'"

"Yes," remarked the crusty bachelor, "it may level all things except the lover's bend."—Philadelphia Press.

The second day's session of the Democratic National convention at Denver was presided over by Congressman H. D. Clayton of Alabama, the permanent chairman, who delivered an able address. The committee on platform, with Gov. Haskell of Oklahoma as chairman, heard arguments in favor of many planks and announced that it could not report until the third day. The committee on credentials heard contests from five states and the District of Columbia.

The Democratic national convention was opened in the great Denver hall by National Chairman Taggart. Theodore A. ### JUMPING AT A CONCLUSION.

Marriage Did Not Follow the Nineteen Year's Courtship.

In the amiable way of villagers, they were discussing the matrimonial affairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden.

"'Tis all along o' these hasty marriages," opined one caustic old gentleman, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not understand each other; they'd nobbut knowed each other for a matter o' seven year."

"Well, that seems long enough," said an interested lady listener.

"Long eno'! Bah, ye're wrong! When a body's coortin' he canna be too careful. Why, my coortship lasted a matter o' 19 year!"

"You certainly were careful," agreed the lady listener. 'And did you find your plan successful when you married?"

"Ye jump to conclusions!" said the old man, impatiently. "I understood her then, so I didna' marry her!"—Tit-Bits.

Mrs. Snoblotts—I had to discharge her. She had no consideration for Fido.

Mrs. Snoblotts—So did I till I found she was using her own comb on him without first sterlizing it.

WIFE WON

Husband Finally Convinced.

Some men are wise enough to try new foods and beverages and then generous enough to give others the benefit of their experience.

A very "conservative" Ills. man, however, let his good wife find out for herself what a blessing Postum is to those who are distressed in many ways, by drinking coffee. The wife writes:

"No slave in chains, it seemed to me, was more helpless than I, a coffee captive. Yet there were innumerable warnings—waking from a troubled sleep with a feeling of suffocation, at times dizzy and out of breath, attacks of palpitation of the heart that frightened me.

"Common sense, reason, and my better judgment told me that coffee drinking was the trouble. At last my nervous system was so disarranged that my physician ordered 'no more coffee.'

"He knew he was right and he knew I knew it, too. I capitulated. Prior to this our family had tried Postum, but disliked it, because, as we learned later, it was not made right.

"Determined this time to give Postum a fair trial, I prepared it according to directions on the pkg.—that is, boiled it 15 minutes after boiling commenced, obtaining a dark brown liquid with a rich snappy flavor similar to coffee. When cream and sugar were added, it was not only good but delicious.

"Noting its beneficial effects in me the rest of the family adopted it—all except my husband, who would not admit that coffee hurt him. Several weeks elapsed during which I drank Postum two or three times a day, when, to my surprise, my husband said: 'I have decided to drink Postum. Your improvement is so apparent—you have such fine color—that I propose to give credit where credit is due.' And now we are coffee-slaves no longer."

CONVENTION IS NOW UNDER WAY

Democrats Begin Work of Nominating Candidates and Formulating the Principles of the Party

Denver, Col., July 7.—Chairman Thomas Taggart of the Democratic national committeee formally called the national convention to order almost precisely at noon.

The opening prayer was made by Rt. Rev. James J. Keane, archbishop of Wyoming, and after a short interval Urey Woodson of Kentucky, secretary of the national committee, read the call for the convention.

A period of delay followed during which the delegates exhibited symptoms of impatience, although the spacious auditorium, crowded as it was to the very doors, was delightfully cool, and then the committee on rules made its report and the officers of the convention were announced, as follows:

Temporary chairman—Theodore A. Bell, California.

General secretary—Urey Woodson, Kentucky.

Assistant general secretary—Edwin Sefton, Washington, D. C.

Sergeant-at-arms—John I. Martin, Missouri.

Chief assistant sergeant-at-arms—J. C. Fenn, Indiana.

Chaplain for opening day—Rt. Rev. James J. Keane, archbishop of Wyoming.

Chief doorkeeper—Eugene W. Sullivan, Illinois.

Parliamentarian—H. D. Crutchfield, Kentucky.

Official stenographer—M. W. Blumberg, Washington, D. C.

Bell Rouses Enthusiasm.

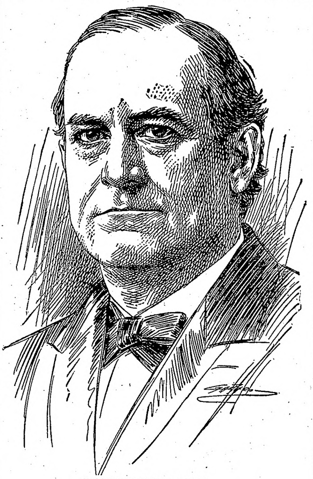
The eloquent speech of Temporary Chairman Bell was listened to with the deepest attention, but the enthusiasm of the audience found vent in long-continued applause when the speaker made a telling point or mentioned the name of some one or other of the acknowledged leaders of the party.



WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

All in Red, White and Blue.

Red, white and blue were the only colors used in decorating the auditorium, and the decorations were declared to be the most elaborate ever seen in a Democratic convention. A unique feature was 52 huge stars artistically arranged on the ceiling. These stars represented the states, territories and insular possessions, the names appearing in blue letters on a white background in the center of each star. The points of the stars were red and white.

Directly over the speaker's platform, against the wall of the building near the junction with the ceiling, was a large shield, 16 feet high, carrying six flags 12 feet long draped in artistic folds. In addition to this main shield there were four other shields over the platform, each ten feet high. The six flags on these shields were eight feet long.

Fine Portrait of Washington.

Just below the main shield hung a mammoth portrait of George Washington, 14 by 16 feet in dimensions. Red, white and blue bunting was draped from the sides of the shield to the bottom of the portrait of the "Father of His Country."

Directly under the last shield, on each side of the Washington portrait, was suspended a portrait, one of Thomas Jefferson and the other of Andrew Jackson. On each side of these pictures a large American flag was draped. These flags are 40 by 60 feet in dimensions. Beyond these pictures, at each end of the wall, and hanging above the gallery, was suspended a pendant, ten feet in diameter, upon which bunting was draped. Upon these pendants a tiger was painted. The back of the platform was banked with palms. Twenty stuffed American eagles, with extended wings, were suspended over the platform, each bird carrying in his bill red, white and blue silk ribbons that were draped back to the wall.

Large Amount of Bunting Used.

In the auditorium the balcony extends all the way around the huge building, but the galleries are limited to each end. The front of the balcony and the fronts of the galleries and boxes were draped with bunting, 55,000 yards being necessary to complete this part of the decorative scheme. At intervals of five feet shields, three feet high, were placed.

Thousands of yards of bunting were used in draping the corridors of the building and the walls of the balcony and galleries. Delegates were supplied with small American flags to wave when their feelings reached a pitch that compelled an extraordinary demonstration.

Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, three of the main thoroughfares in the city, were revelations in color. On Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets there are eight iron ornamental electric poles to a block, four on each side of the street. On these streets the poles were draped with red, white and blue bunting. Wires were stretched across the street from these poles and from each wire two American flags were suspended. The flags hung over the street and were "weighted" to prevent them from becoming tangled and torn by the wind.

On Seventeenth street the scheme was the same, except there were only six poles to each block, two at each corner and two at each alley.

Business Houses Decorated.

At each crossing two wires were strung diagonally across the intersection, from which red, white and blue incandescent lights hung. The business houses along the three streets were handsomely decorated with bunting and flags. Elaborate and costly electric display signs had been put in place on the buildings, and at night Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets were a blaze of light.

Electric display signs are one of the main features of business life in Denver. Every merchant has an electric sign, and as all of the streets that cross the three thoroughfares described are live business streets, the committee on illumination did not find it necessary to add much in the way of light to these avenues of trade. However, the business houses were handsomely decorated with bunting and flags, so the entire business section of Denver was a mass of color when the big convention opened.

Mrs. Frank Stroebe, R. F. D. 1, Appleton, Wis., writes: "I began using Peruna a few months ago, when my health and strength were all gone, and I was nothing but a nervous wreck, could not sleep, eat or rest properly, and felt no desire to live. Peruna made me look at life in a different light, as I began to regain my lost strength.

"I certainly think Peruna is without a rival as a tonic and strength builder."

Romance and Reality.

"Let the youngsters have their romance—an' it'll be all the better for 'em ef they git a purty good dose on it; but don't hide from 'em the fact that thar's somethin' in the shape of trouble a-waitin' fer 'em up the road," said Mr. Billy Sanders. "Not big trouble, tooby shore, but jest big enough to make 'em stick closer together. It ain't no use to try to rub out the fact that life is what it is. It's full of rough places, an' thar are times when you have to leave the big road an' take a short-cut through the bamboo-briers for to keep from slippin' in a mudhole. The briers hurt, but the mudhole mought smifflicate you. It ain't no use to deny it, trouble is seasonin'. I never know'd it to hurt anybody but the weak-minded; the willful an' them that was born to the purple."—Joel Chandler Harris, in Uncle Remus' Magazine.

Hurt a Convict's Pride.

A church missionary had a letter recently from a convict begging him to reform the writer's wife, who was also in prison.

The convict—who is serving a long term—was very anxious about the matter, because, as he said: "It was no credit to him to receive letters from such a place as prison."

Another convict, in the course of a letter to his brother, a pauper, remarked: "Well, Jack, thank goodness I have never sunk so low as the workhouse yet."—London Daily News.

May Have Accounted for His Proposal Being Turned Down.

Senator Beveridge described, at a dinner, an absent-minded farmer.

"The man was so absent-minded," he said, "that he couldn't open his mouth without making an arrant ass of himself.

"Once he courted a young woman. His suit looked promising for a time. Then, with a sorrowful visage, he ceased his courtship.

"'Yet she seemed infatuated with you, Jabez,' said I, one day when he came to me for sympathy.

"'She were, too,' Jabez agreed.

"'Well, what could have been the trouble?'

"'Dunno,' said he. He filled his pipe. 'Dunno; but when I perposed, she turned me down cold.'

"'Perhaps your proposal wasn't ardent enough?' I suggested.

"'Oh, it was fiery,' said Jabez. 'Hot as pepper. I told her she was the only woman I'd ever loved, ever looked at, ever thought of, or—'

"'But, said I, 'you forgot, then, you were a widower.'

"'Jingo,' said Jabez. 'so I did.'"

Bells.

Bells are understood to have had their origin in China, but at so remote a time that no precise date can be given. Their first use was to clear the air of evil spirits and to drive off the storms. Old European records tell how the tolling of bells kept the devils from assaulting believers; hence their connection with churches. Bells may be traced in Europe back to the sixth century, but were not generally introduced into the western church much before the eighth century.

FIRE SWEEPS BOSTON PIERS

ONE MAN MAY BE DEAD AND THE DAMAGE IS ESTIMATED AT $1,400,000.

The Fire Was Caused by Spontaneous Combustion or a Locomotive Spark and Fanned by a Brisk Wind Swept the Harbor Front.

Boston, July 9.—A fire believed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion or a locomotive spark, and fanned by a brisk northwest wind swept nearly a quarter of a mile of the harbor front of East Boston late yesterday, causing a property loss estimated at nearly $1,400,000. Much of the loss falls on the Boston & Albany railroad.

One man is reported missing and it is thought he perished in the flames. He is Daniel Sullivan, a watchman at the Cunard line pier.

Yesterday's fire was the biggest and most destructive that has broken out along the harbor front for many years. The flames spread with remarkable rapidity, and by the time the first fire fighting apparatus arrived on the scene they were beyond control and leaping from pier to pier.

Within half an hour of the time the fire was discovered, four piers, three warehouses, a grain elevator containing 30,000 bushels of grain, and many loaded freight cars had been destroyed. Several vessels and lighters narrowly escaped destruction.

The burned area includes piers 1 and 2 of the Grand Junction docks and the pier on which stood the big grain elevator, all owned by the Boston and Albany Railroad company and used by the steamers of the Cunard line, and Pier No. 6, owned by the Leyland line.

Men in Race for Life.

The fire started in the warehouse of pier 1, Grand Junction docks. In this building was stored an immense quantity of combustible material, including wool, Egyptian cotton, grease and oil. At the time there were about 100 laborers at work on the pier, and with all of them it was a race for life.

New York, July 9.—Hundreds of men are fighting a fire which is burning through the center of Long Island near Eastport. Several small dwellings have been consumed. The dryness of the woods prevent the fire fighters from putting out the flames.

THE FLEET SAILS

Leaves San Francisco On Its Long Cruise Around the World.

San Francisco, July 8.—With the turn of the tide yesterday, after the hour of noon, the Atlantic fleet of sixteen battleships hoisted anchor and, led by Rear Admiral Sperry's flagship Connecticut, turned their prows toward the Golden Gate and the open sea and their long voyage to a home port in the Atlantic.

The last calls were made, goodbys were said by officers to their families and friends, and when the sun peeped over the Berkeley hills, "Big-16," the backbone of the American navy, were ready to get under way.

There were many thousands of San Francisco's population gathered on the high hills to watch the fleet's departure, but there was no official recognition of the event. A few bay craft gave shrill blasts of their whistles as a parting salute and the watching crowds silently waved adieus. Beyond this there was nothing to mark the sailing of the great sea force more than the arrival or departure of other fleets.

LOSES HANDS AND EYES

Fourth of July Accident Terribly Cripples Twelve-year-old Lad.

Central City, S. D., July 8.—Throwing dynamite caps into a bonfire which they had built may cost the life of Iver Rudd, a twelve-year-old boy of this place, who were celebrating the Fourth with his companions. Rudd first threw in the caps singly and then to make more noise threw in the whole box. The resulting explosion, while the boy was standing over the fire, terribly mangled him. If he should recover he will be a helpless cripple for life, as he lost the sight of both eyes, and both his hands will have to be amputated. He received a score of other injuries.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

State Still After Taxes.

St. Paul—In addition to the taxes on gross earnings voluntarily reported by railroads and other public utility companies assessed under that plan, the state public examiner's department has succeeded, up to date, in collecting $270,000 on gross earnings omitted by the companies from their reports since 1902.

A considerable proportion of this amount has been collected recently as a result of a series of examinations of the books and accounts of the railroad companies, conducted by E. W. McGrew, deputy examiner.

In most cases the railroad companies have paid the claims of the state without protest, but in some instances there have been differences of opinion between the state officers and the officers of the roads as to the liability, and under those circumstances it has been necessary for the state to begin suit.

Anton Schaefer, public examiner, now has in hand a report under which the state will begin suit against the Soo road for $49,760.88 back taxes. This company recently admitted its liability for $10,000 of the taxes shown in the report and paid that amount.

A Bad Woman.

Rochester—A woman giving her name as Mrs. Adolph Nelson, and claiming to live near St. Paul, came into town Saturday night and put up at one of the rooming houses. In the morning she went to a lunch counter to get something to eat, and going behind the counter took possession of a knife and some dishes and threatened to clean out the establishment a la cowboy.

The proprietor sent for a policeman, who succeeded in capturing the woman and caging her. The next morning she appeared before the city justice and admitted that she was drunk and disorderly. She said it was morphine, but she admitted that beer also had something to do with it.

The justice fined her $5, which she paid.

Grow Alfalfa in Valley.

Crookston—Joel G. Winkjer, formerly deputy state dairy inspector for this part of Minnesota, now assistant dairyman for the government at Manhattan, Kan., and traveling over three of the West Central states, urged the farmers of the north valley here to take up the development and cultivation of alfalfa, the growth of which has been commanding a great deal of his attention and study. In Oklahoma they raise five crops a year which sells for more than $10 a ton, and in Kansas they raise four crops a year, which sells for $12, and he believes that a crop of better quality could be raised in the soils and climates of the north valley than anywhere else in the country.

Narrow Escape.

St. Paul—The hair comb which she wore at the back of her head saved Clara Ziesler, 674 Lee avenue, from being killed. Enraged with jealousy, her escort, said to be Stanley Ross, 315 Fauquier street, shot at the girl, shattering the comb to bits. The bullet penetrated her skull, inflicting a long gash in her scalp. Her injuries were declared not to be fatal at the city hospital. Ross, who is accused of the shooting, escaped after the shooting and had not been located by the police at a late hour.

The couple went to White Bear, and, it is said, quarreled several times on account of the actions of the young women with other men of her acquaintance.

Big Men at Fair.

Hamline—Special and urgent invitation is to be given by the board of managers of the Minnesota state fair to William H. Taft, William Jennings Bryan and Gov. John A. Johnson to speak at the 1908 state fair during the week of Aug. 31. The form and urgency of the invitation will depend upon the efforts of President B. F. Nelson, Vice President C. Milton Griggs, and Secretary C. N. Cosgrove, who, at the meeting of the board of managers, were made a special committee on securing these speakers for the state fair next fall.

Village Loses.

Crookston—The jury in the suit brought by Mrs. Laura M. Gaylord, wife of Attorney Gaylord, of Fertile, Minn., against the village of Fertile for $10,000 for damages alleged to have been incurred by slipping on ice caused by a broken waterspout in that village was decided in favor of the village by the jury. ## Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twentytwo per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirtyseven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. E. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. Edward Parrish, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

Dr. Norman M. Geer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "During the last twelve years I have frequently recommended your Casteria as one of the best preparations of the kind, being safe in the hands of parents and very effective in relieving children's disorders, while the ease with which such a pleasant preparation can be administered is a great advantage."

Indian Wedding at State Fair.

In a letter received by C. N. Cosgrove, secretary of the State Fair, from Major C. B. Jackson, Indian agent at the Sisseton Agency in South Dakota, it was suggested that a marriage in the Indian village, which is to be established on the Fair Grounds during fair week, might be an interesting feature of the fair.

Maj. Jackson, who is to bring 300 Sioux from his agency, to the fair, writes that there are several couples in the party who have indicated a desire to be married on the fair grounds, and it is quite possible that this feature will be arranged for. The event will receive ample publicity through the newspapers so that all who wish to see one of the brave warriors joined in wedlock to a coy and winsome squaw, will undoubtedly have the opportunity at some time during the fair.

An enthusiastic bunch of ball players from southern Emardville township came to town on Sunday last and and played a record breaking game with the local team. How the boys ever held out till the end of the game is a mystery as the final score was 39 to 37 in favor of the visitors. We are not quite sure of it but we think this establishes a record for long distance base running.

No Bridge at Present.

At the meeting of the county board last Monday the bids for the construction of a new steel bridge over the Clearwater river between Equality and Deer Park townships were all rejected and no further action was taken in the matter The bids were all well over the $2,000 mark and were considered to be away too high for the work. The people of Deer Park and Equality, who have been pushing this bridge project were not represented at the meeting, but we understand that one of the county officials took the trouble to oppose the bridge and point out to the board that such a structure was entirely unecessary. At any rate the board took no action in the way of re-advertising for bids and it now looks very much as though the project may be abandoned. The last legislature made an appropriat- of $500 to assist in the building of this bridge but it is probable that this money will not be available.

Postoffice Inspector Here.

Postoffice Inspector Hughes was here yesterday attending to business in his official capacity and had no fault to find with the Plummer postoffice. He is kept quite busy collecting fines from parties who send written communications in packages or papers with postage paid at a lower rate than first-class. The Department rules are very strict in this regard and the lowest penalty is a fine of ten dollars for each offence. Ten dollars pays a lot of postage on letters and it does not pay for any person to try and evade the payment of the proper rate of postage in order to save a penny or two.

BEING A TAXPAYER

It will interest you to know that the official county printing has cost over $500 less, up to the present time this year, than it would have cost at the price paid last year. In other words, the PLUMMER PIONEER has saved the taxpayers of Red Lake County a lot of money by smashing the printing "combine" and then sucessfully fighting the injunction proceedings started by H. E. Ives.

Stephen Bank Robber Gets Ten Years.

At Warren last week James E. Raymond, alias Zalinski, was sentenced to ten years in prison for the robbery of the Scandia State Bank of Stephen in April. Raymond and a companion named Nolan were arrested at Greenbush two days after the robbery and have been in jail ever since. When their trial came up Nolan weakened and made a confession, telling all about the robbery and the division of the spoils. There were four of the robbers and they divided the money equally. The money taken by Raymond and Nolan was recovered and a lot of bills that had been injured by the explosion which wrecked the bank safe. The other robbers have not been arrested but Nolan is being held while the authorities are looking for them. Nolan's punishment has not been decided as yet.

Clover Proves Its Worth.

For a sure crop, and one which will improve the land, there is no doubt but that the best thing that can be planted in this section is clover, and John Saugstad has put it to a practical test with the most gratifying results on his big farm near Climax, says the Crookston Times.

Two years ago he seeded a number of acres with one-half clover and one-half timothy. He then used it for pasture and a year ago this present month he cut nine loads of clover. He again used it for pasture, and this month he cut more by one-third, than he did the first year, and it was of the finest clover that can be found in the Northwest.

The first year the clover was filled with Canadian thisles, but this year it is a difficult matter to find one on the entire piece. The clover has cleaned the land until it is one of the most attractive fields in this section. Mr. Saugstad says that the piece of land was the oldest piece he had on the farm and the results were obtained entirely without resorting to fertilizing.

He believes the clover field has brought him larger returns than any other piece of land twice the size and at the same time through the cleansing process it has cleaned the land and made it worth practically double the value prior to the seeding of the clover.

Indian Wedding at State Fair.

In a letter received by C. N. Cosgrove, secretary of the State Fair, from Major C. B. Jackson, Indian agent at the Sisseton Agency in South Dakota, it was suggested that a marriage in the Indian village, which is to be established on the Fair Grounds during fair week, might be an interesting feature of the fair.

Maj. Jackson, who is to bring 300 Sioux from his agency, to the fair, writes that there are several couples in the party who have indicated a desire to be married on the fair grounds, and it is quite possible that this feature will be arranged for. The event will receive ample publicity through the newspapers so that all who wish to see one of the brave warriors joined in wedlock to a coy and winsome squaw, will undoubtedly have the opportunity at some time during the fair.

TO MOVE OUR PLANET

Power It Would Take to Raise the Earth One Foot.

THE WEIGHT OF THE GLOBE.

It Has Been Calculated to Be Some Six Million Million Tons—What Would Happen if the Earth Should Come to a Sudden Standstill.

It is not generally known that the rotundity of the earth and its movement were known long before Copernicus and Galilei. Thus, Aristotle says, "almost all those who claim to have studied heaven in its uniformity declare that the earth is in the center, but the philosophers of the Italian school, otherwise the Pythagoreans, teach entirely the contrary. In this opinion the center is occupied by fire and the earth is only a star, which by a circular movement round the same center produces night and day."

The following Greek philosophers believed in the rotundity of the earth: Pythagoras of Samos, Anaximander, Nicetas of Syracuse, Heraclides of Pontus, Aristarchus of Samos, Seleneus and Ecphantus. Heraclides and Ecphantus admitted that the earth moved only upon its own axis, the diurnal movement. The Pythagoreans held that each star was a world, having its own atmosphere, with an immense extent of ether surrounding it. Many centuries before Copernicus wrote his work on "The Revolution of the Heavenly Bodies," which was about 1542 A. D., the Jewish cabalistic book, called "Zohar," stated as to the cosmography of the universe:

"In the book of Hammannuah the Old we learn through extended explanation that the earth turns upon itself in the form of a circle; that some are on top, the others below; that all creatures change in aspect, following the manner of each place, keeping, however, in the same position. But there are some countries of the earth that are lightened while others are in darkness. These have the day when for the former it is night, and there are countries in which it is constantly day or in which at least the night continues only some instants. These secrets were made known to the men of the secret science, but not to the geographers."

Maimonides (1190 A. D.) held that the earth had the form of a globe; that it was inhabited at both extremities of a certain diameter; that the inhabitants had their heads toward heaven and their feet toward each other, yet they did not fall off.

In India at a very early period the astronomer Arya-bhata (born A. D. 476) held to the opinion that the earth revolved upon its own axis. It is known that the Chaldeans at a very ancient period calculated with certainty eclipses of the moon and closely approximated the time of eclipses of the sun. Dr. Schlegel gives the great antiquity of 18,000 years to the Chinese astronomical sphere.

Though astronomy affords the means of determining with great precision the relative masses of the earth, the moon and all the planets, it does not enable us to determine the absolute mass of any heavenly body in units of the weights used on earth. To determine the absolute mass of the globe its mean density must be known, and this is something about which direct observation can give no information, as we cannot penetrate more than an insignificant distance into the earth's interior. The most probable mean density of the earth is 5.6—that is, the earth is 5.6 times as heavy as a ball of pure water of the same size. From this and similar estimates the weight of the globe has been calculated to be six million million tons.

Archimedes, the greatest ancient geometer, is accredited with the saying, "Give me where I may stand, and I will move the world!" With a lever of sufficient length this task might possibly be accomplished. But let us see what it would require to accomplish it with the forces at our command. The weight of the globe has been calculated to be six million million tons.

To move this weight one foot a steam engine of 10,000 horsepower would have to work incessantly for a period of seventy thousand millions of years. During this time the engine would use up forty million million quarts of water, a quantity sufficient to cover the whole globe 300 feet high. Now, as to the fuel consumed by the engine, if its boiler was good and working economically it would require four thousand million tons of coal to feed it during the seventy thousand million years. To ship such a quantity of coal by railway it would take two hundred thousand million cars of a capacity of twenty tons each. These cars, when placed in a line, would form a train so long as to encompass the earth forty-five times, and if this train should move with a velocity of twenty-five miles an hour it would take it five million years before it could traverse the distance of its own length.

This calculation shows that the globe rests pretty firmly in the place assigned to it by nature and how difficult would be the task suggested by the great mathematician.

It is known what happens when a rapidly running train comes to a sudden standstill. We are thrown forward in the direction of its motion. The same result would follow the sudden stopping of the earth's motion, only on a much larger scale. Everything on its surface would be hurled into space with a velocity hundreds of times as great as that of the swiftest express train.

But we should have hardly the time to realize this somersault into space because of the other immediate result—viz. the transformation of the earth's motion into a heat so intense as to raise the temperature of the air by hundreds of degrees, turn seas, lakes and rivers into steam and instantly consume forests, buildings and cities. And men and animals would instantaneously perish from the mere breathing of the hot air, and their corpses would be incinerated in the general conflagration. In short, the result would be a tragedy such as is depicted by St. Peter for the judgment day.

Scientists have given the temperature which one would feel when penetrating to the center of the globe. To obtain this estimate of heat they had to confine themselves to simple observations on the rise of temperature in mine shafts. Geologists believed that the mean temperature of the earth increased by 1 degree with every hundred feet of descent. With these figures for a basis they calculated that the mean heat of the central nucleus must be 4,320 degrees F.

This was good mathematics, but incorrect, for observations made in Nevada with instruments of great precision showed that the heat of the central nucleus was much greater For the experiment of 1897 a silver mine was selected, and there they found that at 2,500 feet under the earth's surface the air showed a temperature of 94 degrees F. and the water of 120 degrees. In the vicinity, at Yellow Jack shaft, the mine reaches a depth of 3,000 feet, and the thermometer shows constantly 130 degrees F., so that miners cannot work there for more than fifteen minutes at a stretch. The works in the Simplon showed likewise an uncommon subterranean heat, and the calculations justify an assumption for the central nucleus of a temperature of 680,000 to 700,000 degrees, the same as is assumed of the sun.—Leon Landsberg in Chicago Record-Herald.

By Experience.

Quietly Jackson crept upstairs. A light was burning in the drawing room, by which he knew that his wife had been waiting for him. But he thought that if he could possibly slip into bed unheard he might gull his adored one when she arrived with the story that he had been in bed for hours.

Strains of music reached his ears. What perfect madness! One o'clock in the morning and a piano being thumped was not conducive to the friendliest relations with one's neighbors!

Hark! His wife was singing—singing some familiar song.

He strained his ears to catch the words. They floated up to him:

"Tell me the old, old story"—

He proceeded on his way.—London Scraps.

KNIGHTS OF THE MYSTIC SHRINE

ELECTRIC PARADE OF SHRINERS WAS A MOST GLORIOUS SPECTACLE.

Spectators Form Solid Row of Faces Along the Line. In Election of Officers E. L. Alderman of Marion, Ia., is Imperial Potentate.

St. Paul, July 15.—Yesterday marking the third day of Shriner's week, and the first day of the Imperial Council in actual business session was ushered in with nature cloaked in its most beauteous garb and went out in blaze of glory.

Both Minneapolis and St. Paul were enfete, but St. Paul caught the big end of the celebration. The most important events of the day were the breaking of ground for St. Paul's new $150,000 Masonic temple, the formal opening of the Imperial Council, the traditional banquet served the Imperial officers, and last and most noteworthy of all, the electrical parade of the evening along the business streets.

It is estimated, and most conservatively, that 150,000 men, women and children—and the number may have been in excess of 200,000—packed the streets along the line of march. It was almost impossible for the extra details of police to make room for the passing marchers.

The parade started from Capitol hill at 9:10. The line of march was along Cedar street to Seventh, thence to Broadway, Broadway to Sixth, Sixth street, Sixth to Sibley, Sibley to Third, Third to Jackson, Jackson to Sixth, Sixth to Wabasha, Wabasha to Fifth, Fifth to Washington, Washington to Third, Third to Franklin and Franklin to Fifth and Sixth streets.

The number of marchers was approximately 5,000. It took an hour and 15 minutes to pass a given point. The Arab patrols pleased the crowd along the line of march with exhibitions of military movements, executed, in the main, with a precision and smoothness which indicated many hours of constant applied drill.

It is estimated that 10,000 Minneapolitans witnessed the parade.

And St. Paul in wonder and pride watched the army of invasion roll onward, silent spectators at first and then as the winding chain of lovliness unwrapped before them they burst into wild cheers that reached far above the light sheen into the night.

For just an even hour the resplendent cohorts of the great prophet passed before the wonder-smitten villagers, and when the last of the glittering war captains had vanished in the distance St. Paul drew a long, satisfied breath. It had seen the best to be seen anywhere any time.

St. Paul, July 16.—The following is the list of officers elected by the imperial council of the Shriners at their session yesterday forenoon at the Auditorium.

Imperial Potentate, Edwin L. Alderman, Marion, Iowa.

Imperial deputy potentate, George L. Street.

Imperial chief rabban, Fred A. Hines, Los Angeles, Cal.

Imperial assistant rabban, J. Frank Treat, Fargo, N. D.

Imperial high priest and potentate, W. J. Cunningham, Baltimore, Md.

Imperial oriental guide, William W. Irwin, Wheeling, W. Va.

Imperial treasurer, William S. Brown, Pittsburg, Pa.

Imperial recorder, Ben W. Rowell, Boston, Mass.

Imperial first ceremonial master, John F. Barron, Columbia, S. C.

Imperial marshall, J. Putnam Stevens, Portland, Me.

Imperial captain of the guard, Henry F. Niedringhaus, Jr., St. Louis, Mo.

Imperial outer guard, Charles E. Ovenshire, Minneapolis.

After four days of merry making and conference and hilarity with the citizens of the Saintly City, which the wanderers from over the desert have enjoyed, their armed bands last night made an attack upon the sister city up the river and it fell without a blow before the oncoming hordes of the bold Arabians. Anxious to show other cities the prowess of their mighty bands, the Shriners sent their patrols to Minneapolis and paraded before a mighty gathering of onlookers.

Dreams of Wreck; Jumps.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

A Big Canal.

St. Peter—"If the people of the state would spend one-tenth of the time talking about improving the rivers of their state that they do in denouncing the railroads, there would soon be transportation facilities here for all the crops that this section of the Northwest can raise for several decades," said George Welsh, commissioner of immigration for Minnesota.

Mr. Welsh is pushing the idea of canalizing the Minnesota river, and he grows enthusiastic over the prospects that it offers to give the people of the southern and western part of the state an outlet for their products.

He presented the matter to the residents of Renville county July 4, when he spoke at Fairfax. Congressman Volstead, by previous arrangement, also spoke on the same subject in a neighboring town.

The plan of Mr. Welsh is to deepen and straighten the channel of the Minnesota from its mouth at Fort Snelling to Big Stone lake on the western border of the state. He then proposes that, by locks, Big Stone lake and Traverse lake be connected so that communication could be established between the Red River of the North and the Mississippi. This line of waterway, he points out, could provide a cheap means of moving the crops of this state, as well as those of Canada immediately to the north.

Health Too Expensive.

St. Cloud—"The creameries would be under little or no additional expense to pasteurize all the milk and cream," said W. W. Wall, secretary of the state dairy and food department, in discussing the best method of ridding the state of infected milk. "Every creamery in the state now has a pasteurization plant to treat the skimmed milk returned to the farms, and it would be only a little more trouble to pasteurize all the milk.

"Denmark is the most advanced dairy country in the world, and all of their milk and cream is pasteurized. Denmark has practically all the English butter trade.

"I must confess that I don't like pasteurized milk nor cream, but I am willing to sacrifice my taste, because we can't get money enough from the legislature to have $1,000,000 worth of cattle slaughtered every year."

Lawlessness Rebuked.

Aulis Patteway, a negro, who came here from Minneapolis, was arraigned before Judge Wilde on the charge of grand larceny, and was bound over to the grand jury under bail of $500. Patteway was janitor of the Merchants' National bank building of this city on the salary of $7 per month, his only visible income. Notwithstanding that he spent large sums, maintaining horses and equipages in which he entertained the colored section of the city.

AMERICA BEATEN IN OLYMPIC RACE

THREE-MILE TEAM RUN GOES TO ENGLAND IN AN EASY FINISH FOR BRITONS.

MOTHER COUNTRY HITS A VICTORIOUS STRIDE

In Five-Mile Contest Swede Wins Heat in Record Time, Demolishing Former Grecian Mark—Results of Many Other Events.

London, July 16.—The first real note of enthusiasm since the opening of the Olympic at the Stadium was struck Wednesday afternoon when Voight, one of the runners upon whom England was depending to maintain her superiority in the distance runs, won his heat, the second, of the five-mile run. The weather having greatly improved and Wednesday afternoon being a half-holiday in many of the London stores, the attendance was much better than that of the previous days, so that several of the stands were filled with people ready to proclaim a British victory. Voight's win, however, was not the best performance of the day, that honor being reserved for Sweden, whose representative, E. V. Lemming, won the javelin throwing contest in splendid style, breaking his own record by three feet 1½ inches.

There also was considerable interest in the first heat of the 100 kilometer cycling race in which Hanson of Sweden was first, and Lutz of France, Bailey of England, Texier of France, Bishop of England, and Robertson of England, finished in the order named; and with Bonnet of France and Mussen of England, qualified for the second heat.

Conclude Swimming Event.

The semi-final of the 400-meter swimming race also was concluded Wednesday, Scheff of Austria winning and Taylor of England finishing second in the first heat. The time was five minutes 40 3/5 seconds. Baurepair of Australia, and Foster of England, were first and second, respectively in the second heat of this event. Time, five minutes and 44 seconds. The third heat of the fancy diving was won by Metzell, Finland, with 83 points.

From the American point of view, the most interesting event of the day was the three-mile team race. This was won by England, with comparative ease, with America an easy second. The 200-meter breast stroke swimming match of which seven heats were decided Wednesday also afforded some good sport. There was only one American contestant in this event, A. M. Goessling, Missouri Athletic club, but he found Perrson, Sweden, and Baronyi, Hungary, too fast for him.

New Yorker Qualifies.

The Americans present were interested again in the preliminary heats of the five-mile run, H. G. Bellars, New York Athletic club, qualifying for the final by finishing second to Vioght of England, in the second heat. Edward P. Carr of the Xavier Athletic Association, New York, got second place in his heat in this event. The result of these heats came as a very great surprise, as Sweden had not been counted upon to figure in the distance runs. The ease with which J. E. Svanberg and Landquist, two Swedish runners, won their heats and the reserve they displayed in the final spurts makes it look as though England will have difficulty in holding her own in the final. Both the Swedes outclassed their opponents, being as far ahead of the second men as was Voight.

England added another gold medal to her winnings with the 660 yards' cycle race, Johnson taking this event by half a wheel from Demangel of France. This, with the gold medal for the team race, gives the mother country four gold medals to America's two and Sweden's one.

Swede Smashes a Record.

J. F. Svanberg, Sweden, won the first heat of the five-mile run. His time was 25 minutes 46 1/5 seconds, which beats the Olympic record.

The third heat of this event was won easily by Landquist of Sweden. Time, 27 minutes 1/5 second. Edward P. Carr, Xavier Athletic association, New York, finished second, and qualified for the final. C. L. Hall, Irish-American Athletic club, finished fourth.

The fourth heat was won by Murphy of England in 25 minutes 59 seconds. Meadows of Canada was second.

The fifth heat went to A. J. Robertson, England, in 25 minutes, 50 1/5 seconds. Fitzgerald, Canada, was second. H. L. Trube, Cornell and New York Athletic club, did not finish.

Dakota Democrats Nominate.

"You would?" exclaimed Henley in honest surprise, and to this day he can't understand why Miss Fairley thinks him a man of little taste and less tact.

Since our arrival many people whom we have hitherto believed respectable have gone out of their respective ways to speak kindly to us.

DIFFERENT NOW

Athlete Finds Better Training Food

It was formerly the belief that to become strong, athletes must eat plenty of meat.

This is all out of date now, and many trainers feed athletes on the well-known food, Grape-Nuts, made of wheat and barley, and cut the meat down to a small portion once a day.

"Three years ago," writes a Mich. man, "having become interested in athletics, I found I would have to stop eating pastry and some other kinds of food.

"I got some Grape-Nuts, and was soon eating the food at every meal, for I found that when I went on the track, I felt more lively and active.

"Later, I began also to drink Postum in place of coffee, and the way I gained muscle and strength on this diet was certainly great. On the day of a field meet in June I weighed 124 lbs. On the opening of the football season in Sept., I weighed 140. I attribute my fine condition and good work to the discontinuation of improper food and coffee, and the using of Grape-Nuts and Postum, my principal diet during training season being Grape-Nuts.

"Before I used Grape-Nuts I never felt right in the morning—always kind of 'out of sorts' with my stomach. But now when I rise I feel good, and after a breakfast largely of Grape-Nuts with cream, and a cup of Postum, I feel like a new man." "There's a Reason."

Clock Is Stopped.

Leading up to the nomination were hours that began with picturesque enthusiasm, which grew into uncontrollable disorder. The nominating speeches were made amid scenes akin to panic at certain stages.

At 12 o'clock midnight the convention clock was stopped, so that constructively the nomination of Bryan would take place at Thursday's session of the convention. Will the Friday hoodoo be overcome by this technical evasion? is a question that was in the minds of enthusiastic Bryan Democrats, as they wended their way from the convention hall in the early morning hours.

Wild Scene of Confusion.

A wilder demonstration than that over the first mention of Bryan's name on Wednesday followed the concluding word of the speech of Ignatius J. Dunn of Nebraska, which formally presented the name of Democracy's champion to the convention.

An hour and seven minutes, against the one hour and 28 minutes of the day before, marked the cheering and tumult, but the densely, overcrowded auditorium made the confusion worse confounded.

Nobody had any respect for the rights of anybody else. Everybody was there to see the spectacle, if not to take part in it, and those not able to look out for themselves were trampled upon.

Johnson and Gray Named.

Gov. John A. Johnson of Minnesota and Judge George Gray of Delaware were placed in nomination along with Bryan. Small as was the following of either, in comparison with that of the Nebraskan, the scenes of confusion, owing to the uncontrollable size of the crowd, were approximately great.

Gov. Johnson was placed in nomination by Winfield Scott Hammond of Minnesota, Connecticut yielding to the gopher state.

Judge Gray's name was presented by Irving F. Handy of Delaware. Mr. Handy felt how sadly he was in the minority when, after he had talked awhile, the crowd attempted to choke him off.

Seconding Speeches.

Seconding speeches for Bryan were made by Senator Gearin of Oregon, Gov. Glenn of South Carolina, and Gov. Claude Swanson of Virginia. Gov. Glenn's speech created much excitement, being devoted largely to a defense of Bryan against attacks branding him as a Socialist. At the conclusion of his remarks, which were not in accord with the spirit of the convention, Permanent Chairman Clayton, who at the day session has superseded Temporary Chairman Bell as wielder of the gavel, exclaimed that William Jennings Bryan needed no defenders, and elicited tremendous applause.

The opening session lasted three hours and brought about the completion of the permanent organization of the convention, with the resounding address of Congressman Clayton of Alabama, permanent chairman of the convention. When the session opened at night, every formality of organization had been accomplished and the decks were clear for the supreme work of adopting the platform and naming the candidates.

Clayton Delivers His Address.

The scenes within the convention amphitheater repeated those of previous days in the magnitude of the gathering and the eager enthusiasm of the throngs. There were frequent demonstrations as the names of party idols or Jeffersonian principles were pronounced, but there was no repetition during the early session of the tumultuous record-breaking demonstration of Wednesday.

The address of the permanent chairman, Mr. Clayton, proved to be a caustic arraignment of the failure of Roosevelt policies, and an enunciation of Democratic doctrine. The ringing voice of the orator and the emphasis of his gestures stirred the listening thousands to frequent demonstrations of enthusiastic approval.

At 2:30 o'clock the platform committee was not yet prepared to report, and the convention took a recess until evening, so that all remaining differences of detail on the platform could be reconciled and the document be ready for adoption and the presidential nomination be reached before the adjournment of the night session.

A small American flag had been placed on every delegate's chair prior to the beginning of the evening session. This was the unmistakable evidence of the nominating session of the convention and increased the interest of the spectators, who early made a rush for the galleries, filling them to overflowing.

At seven o'clock there were few of the delegates in their places. They had lingered long at dinner, the slow-dying twilight of the Colorado evenings proving deceptive as to the hour.

Rumors of another delay in receiving the report of the platform committee filled the air as the delegates assembled, and they prepared for another probable season of convention oratory before the important businesss of the session could be reached. The wait for the rap of Chairman Clayton's gavel was robbed of much of its tediousness through the efforts of the quartette, whose members sang popular songs and concert numbers at frequent intervals.

Every One Has a Flag.

At 7:15 the galleries were completely filled, and the majority of the delegates were in their seats, but the officers of the convention were still waiting for the report of the committee on resolutions. The band in the gallery worked with great industry, and when it struck up "Dixie" the demonstration that followed gave a glimpse of the scenes certain to occur later in the night. The delegates, as the first notes of the old war song floated out, sprang up and waved their flags. It was instantly shown that the galleries, too, had been provided with them and in an instant the convention hall was a tossing sea of fluttering flags.

It was 7:50 o'clock when Chairman Clayton began to rap for order, which he secured within the minute.

Pending the report of the committee of inquiry, Thomas P. Ball of Texas was invited to address the convention.

After his speech came talks by Senator Grady of New York, Judge Wade of Iowa and Champ Clark of Missouri.

Mr. Clark concluded with a tribute to Mr. Bryan as "the greatest living American."

"The secretary will now proceed to call the roll of states for nominations for the office of president of the United States," shouted Chairman Clayton.

"Alabama," called the clerk.

The chairman of that delegation arose and was recognized.

"Knowing that Nebraska will make no mistake in nominating the right man," he said, "Alabama yields to Nebraska."

"I. J. Dunn of Omaha will speak for the Nebraska delegation," announced the chairman of that state, while the cheering which followed the first statement from Alabama continued unabated.

Dunn Nominates Bryan.

Mr. Dunn, who was to make that speech of the convention in which the greatest interest was felt by the delegates and the spectators, is scarcely of middle age. His clean-cut, determined-looking, clean-shaven face is surmounted by dark brown hair, which owing to the emphatic manner in which he emphasized his speech with his head, was soon touching the center of his forehead. He spoke clearly and with a pleasing manner of delivery. As Mr. Dunn proceeded, almost every allusion he made to the character of Mr. Bryan was enthusiastically applauded, although he had not yet mentioned the name of the Nebraska candidate. When Mr. Dunn declared that his candidate was the choice of the militant Democracy of the country the convention broke in with wild cheers. The ever ready flags were tossed aloft and a roar of applause swept through the hall.

Big Demonstration Starts.

Mr. Dunn brought out the name of "William Jennings Bryan" with intense dramatic force, and the response from the great throng was electric. The delegates sprang up, the galleries followed suit, and the demonstration was under way in a manner that promised to rival Wednesday's exhibition of enthusiasm.

A few moments after the cheering began an immense oil painting of Mr. Bryan was lowered from behind a monster American shield which had reposed over the chairman's desk ever since the convention began. The appearance of the picture raised the pitch of the outburst, and the enthusiasm was still instence when the convention adjourned until 1 o'clock Friday afternoon.

KERN FOR VICE-PRESIDENT.

Convention Names Indiana Man as Running Mate for Bryan.

Denver, Col.—At one o'clock Friday afternoon, the hour to which the convention had adjourned, not one-fourth of the delegates were in their seats, and they were coming slowly into the hall. The heat was even greater than on Thursday and the temperature inside the hall was high and uncomfortable. The public, however, seemed to have as much interest as ever in the convention, and the galleries were packed long before any considerable number of delegates had arrived.

The convention was called to order at 1:40.

The nomination of a candidate for vice-president was the only business before the convention. J. J. Walsh presented the name of Archibald McNeill of Connecticut. Gov. Thomas of Colorado named Charles A. Towne of New York. Thomas R. Marshall urged the claims of John W. Kern of Indiana, and the convention cheered the presentation of the name of the Hoosier statesman.

Gov. Folk of Missouri seconded the nomination of Mr. Kern.

Gov. Hill of Georgia put in nomination Clark Howell.

Hill of Georgia withdrew Howell's name and seconded the nomination of Mr. Kern.

Charles A. Towne also withdrew from the contest, and urged his friends to unite on Kern.

The withdrawals increased the vigor of the demonstrations in favor of Kern, and on the motion that he be nominated by acclamation, which was carried, the cheering resembled closely the enthusiasm which had been evinced at the nomination of Mr. Bryan the day before.

Wearied by the two tumultuous sessions, the delegates left the convention hall and the great gathering was at an end.

Sketch of Kern's Career.

John Worth Kern was born in Howard county, Indiana, December 20, 1849. He graduated from the University of Michigan in 1869 at the age of 20 years, with the degree of doctor of laws. His first official position which brought him into the public eye was when fulfilling his duties as a reporter of the supreme court of Indiana, which office he held from 1885 to 1889. For four years—1892 to 1896—he was a state senator. He became city attorney of Indianapolis in 1897, and held that office for four years. A year before he gave up the office he ran for the gubernatorial chair in Indiana, and was beaten. Four years later—in 1904—he also tried for the governorship on the Democratic ticket, and was again defeated. Later he received the complimentary vote of the party for United States senator.

WOULD ACCEPT BUT ONE TERM.

Mr. Bryan Asserts He Would Never Be Candidate for Re-Election.

Fairview, Lincoln.—The following statement was made by William Jennings Bryan when he received announcement of his nomination as the candidate of the Democratic party for president:

"The honor is the highest official possession in the world, and no one occupying it can afford to have his views upon public questions biased by personal ambition. Recognizing his responsibility to God and his obligation to his countrymen, he should enter upon the discharge of his duties with singleness of purpose. Believing that one can best do this when he is not planning for a second term, I announce now, as I have on former occasions, that if elected I shall not be a candidate for re-election.

"This is a nomination as purely from the people as can be, and if elected, my obligation will be as purely to the people. I appreciate the honor the more because it came not from one person or a few persons, but from the rank and file, acting freely and without compulsion."

HADN'T WALKED ALL THE WAY.

Prisoner at Least Had Change While Crossing River.

"Down in Alabama," said John D. Fearhake, "there's a deputy marshal who doesn't let any such trifles as extradition laws stop him. Term of court was about to begin at one time, and a gentleman who was out on bail was reported to be enjoying himself over in Georgia. Deputy Jim went after him. Next day he telegraphed the judge: 'I have persuaded him to come.' A few days later he rode into town on a mule, leading his prisoner, tied up snugly with a clothes line. The prisoner looked as if he had seen hard service.

"'Why, for heaven's sake, Jim,' said the judge, 'you didn't make him walk all the way from Georgia, did you?'

"'No, sir,' said Jim.

"'I hoped not,' said the judge.

"'No,' said Jim, 'part of the way I drug him, and when we come to the Tallapoosa river, he swum.'"—Woman's Home Journal.

TWO CURES OF ECZEMA

Baby Had Severe Attack—Grandfather Suffered Torments with It—Owe Recovery to Cuticura.

"In 1884 my grandson, a babe, had an attack of eczema, and after trying the doctors to the extent of heavy bills and an increase of the disease and suffering, I recommended Cuticura and in a few weeks the child was well. He is to-day a strong man and absolutely free from the disease. A few years ago I contracted eczema, and became an intense sufferer. A whole winter passed without once having on shoes, nearly from the knees to the toes being covered with virulent sores. I tried many doctors to no purpose. Then I procured the Cuticura Remedies and found immediate improvement and final cure. M. W. LaRue, 845 Seventh St., Louisville, Ky., Apr. 23 and May 14, '07."

OFFICIAL PAPER of RED LAKE COUNTY

Subscription price, $1.50 per year

Entered at the Post-office in Plummer, Minn. as Second Class Mail Matter.

It is generally conceded that Congressman Steenerson will have no opposition in his candidacy for re-nomination. The same may be said of his re-election as it will be impossible to beat him at the polls.

There is quite a difference between a local reputation and a national. Gov. Johnson looks quite big to the Minnesota democrats, but at Denver he took last place among the candidates for the presidencyial nomination.

Yes, Bryan was nominated again as the democratic candidate for president. As a piece of machinery the Denver convention was a triumph that makes Jo Cannon and the other big guns look pretty small as master machanics compared to Bryan.

Editor L. E. George, of the Fertile Journal, has filed as a candidate for the legislature from Polk county. Bro. George is better qualified for the office he seeks than some of the other editors who are looking for legislative honors and has no bad record behind him to be thrown back on.

For the first time in many years Judge Taft is now a private citizen and is enjoying the high honor of being one. He has been in public life in some capacity for many years and no man is better acquainted with the needs of the people than him. That he will make good there is no doubt and when he leaves the office to which he has been nominated he will be as popular as his worthy predecessor. This is the prediction of this newspaper on the ground that he will be elected for there is little doubt of that.—Granite Falls Tribune.

VOORHEES AND MONEY.

The Famous Orator Was Genial, Generous and Careless.

A majority of congressmen are improvident and when they are compelled to leave Washington have only a sufficient surplus on hand to carry them home. It matters little how much these men make, the result is the same, for they live up to their revenue.

Among the many was Daniel W. Voorhees, so well known in his public career as a famous orator, a genial, generous, good fellow and boon companion. In money matters Voorhees was as simple and ignorant as a child. He parted with his money with no thought of its value. The middle of the month generally found him "broke," but this worried him little, for he managed to get along just as well until pay day. He ordered what he wanted and had it charged and then forgot all about it. The funny part of his nature was that, while he did not remember his creditors, he always kept in mind his friends and would give them the last cent he had if they applied for assistance.

One day an old constituent of Mr. Voorhees from the Wabash, in Indiana, called at the capitol to see the senator. Not finding him in, he went to the sergeant-at-arms, that position then being held by R. J. Bright, also from Indiana and an intimate friend of Mr. Voorhees. The old man told his story to Bright and the reason why he was in search of Voorhees. In effect it was that he was "hard up" and Voorhees owed him $150 on a note and he needed the money badly and was there to collect it. Bright thought the story over and said:

"Now, my friend, if you go to Dan to collect this money he will not pay you a dollar. On the other hand, if you will go to him, tell him a hard luck story and put up a poor mouth he will raise and give you every dollar he can."

The man took his advice and, meeting Voorhees, told him what a bad fix he was in and his need of a little assistance. Voorhees affectionately put his arm over his shoulder and said: "William, I am very sorry for you, and I will help you all I can. Come with me to the clerk's office. I do not know whether I have any money there or not, but I will give you all I have."

The clerk informed the senator that there happened to be over $200 to his credit. This surprised Voorhees, but he said, "Give it all to my friend here, as he is a long way from home and needs it more than I."

Mr. Voorhees devoted the last ten years of his life to the Congressional library. Until his death he took no interest in politics or anything else but the library, and to him more than to any one else is due the completion of the beautiful structure. He died poor and in debt.—O. O. Stealey in Success Magazine.

Saving Himself.

"You don't mean to say," remarked Wise, "that you made a present of that $5 to Borrowman?"

"Yes," replied Markley. "I had to save my own self respect."

"I don't understand. I thought you loaned it to him?"

"So, I did, not knowing any better. But now I don't want anybody to believe I was ever foolish enough to expect it back."—Catholic Standard and Times.

A Dear Friend.

"I hear yer frien' Tamson's married again."

"Aye, so he is. He's been a dear frien' tae me. He's cost me three waddin' presents an' twa wreaths."—Dundee Advertiser.

Buttermaker's Scores.

In the State Butter and Cheese scoring contest for July there were 196 samples of butter and 20 06 cheese. In the hand separator class of butter the highest score was 94½, awarded to J. N. Gardner, of Nerstrand. The buttermakers from this part of the state scoring 90 or better were;

| | |
|---|---|
| L. HASLERUD, PLUMMER | 93½ |
| O. C. Toftner, Erskine | 92½ |
| John Horms, Ada | 92 |
| C. M. Davidson, Climax | 91 |
| L. W. Leffker, Hendrum | 91 |
| A. B. Stensgaard, Ada | 90½ |
| H. C. Lidenberg, Fosston | 90 |
| Geo. L. Austin, St. Hilaire | 90 |

In the cheese department the following Red Lake county men won high scores:

| | |
|---|---|
| H. Clement, Terrebonne | 97¾ |
| Theo. Fournier, Wylie | 96½ |
| C. Robidoux, Lambert | 94 |
| H. Parenteau, Brooks | 93 |
| Jo Parenteau, Red Lake Falls | 93 |

By the above scores it will be seen that the Plummer Creamery has secured pretty high honors. In the June contest Mr. Haslerud's score was 93 and the scores for the two months prove that the Plummer buttermaker understands his business. It is such good work as this that is placing the reputation of the Plummer creamery near the head of the class and the entire community has a right to feel proud of it and help boost it at every opportunity.

A bunch of the live young people of Brooks, and some of the live older ones, came up last Sunday intending to play a game of ball with the Plummer nine. On their arrival they found out that all the Plummer players had gone elsewhere. Then it rained, but the combination of adverse circumstances did not discourage them. They organized two teams from among their own numbers and captured Wm. Erb, who has a crippled hand, and could not get away, to officiate as umpire. Then they sported around on the Plummer diamond in a manner to remind the field of the bunch that used to prance thereon three years ago. They did not finish the game but they showed up as the right kind and willing to make the best of what came their way.

BEING A TAXPAYER

It will interest you to know that the official county printing has cost over $500 less, up to the present time this year, than it would have cost at the price paid last year. In other words, the PLUMMER PIONEER has saved the taxpayers of Red Lake County a lot of money by smashing the printing "combine" and then sucessfully fighting the injunction proceedings started by H. E. Ives.

For NeW Ditch in Mayfield.

L. T. Bergh, of Mayfield township, was a transient visitor in town on Tuesday evening on his way home from Red Lake Falls where he had been to attend a special meeting of the county board to consider a ditch petition filed by L. T. Bergh and others for a ditch in Mayfield township. Mr. Bergh reported that the board appointed C. H. Martz as engineer on this ditch and Jo Belair and Fred Zaiser, of Red Lake Falls, and Gilbert Haavi, of Thief River Falls, as viewers. The engineer and viewers will make their survey and estimates as soon as possible after which the board will determine whether or not the ditch will be established. Mr. Bergh says he is well pleased with the appointments of the board and has no fear but that the ditch will be ordered established and perhaps the contract let this fall.

Didn't Want to Tell.

The late Professor Greene, author of Greene's Analysis and the English Grammar with which so many have wrestled in their school days, was one of the most genial and fatherly of men. During the later years of his life he was professor of mathematics and astronomy in a New England college. There was in one of his classes a somewhat slow witted though studious young man, whom we will call Jones. On a certain occasion after Jones had repeated carefully the text book statements about the effects of the motions of the earth and was trying to remember what came next in the book the professor interposed with:

"Were you ever in the shadow of the earth, Mr. Jones?"

Jones (slowly)—No, sir.

Professor—Where do you spend your nights, sir?

Jones didn't want to tell.—Universalist Leader.

A Bank of the Year 600 B. C.

The very earliest banking firm of which there is any record was that of Egibi & Sons, an institution which carried on advance, exchange and general financial business in Babylon in the year 600 B. C. Knowledge of this firm is obtained from certain records on clay tablets which have been found in recent excavations made by a party of English and French archaeologists near the site of the ancient city above mentioned. Bills of credit, drafts, etc., in the form of small burnt clay tablets, each bearing the characteristic signature of Egibi & Sons, have been found in many other parts of Asia Minor, and it is believed that close study will prove that some of the clay tablets found in tombs and pyramids in Egypt will finally prove to be Egibi "negotiable notes."

Passed College "Exams" at Seven.

Few people in Connecticut realize that there once lived a boy in Waterbury who possessed the remarkable precociousness which enabled him to pass the Yale examination at the age of seven years. He didn't enter Yale until his thirteenth year, yet the record remains and ought not to be lost sight of. The boy's name was John Trumbull, born in 1750, and he died full of honor, scholastic and political, at the ripe age of eighty-one years in 1831. He was frail and tender as a youngster, and his remarkable intellect overbalanced his physical makeup. Nobody thought he would grow up, and his mental achievement at an age when most boys nowadays are entering the district school attracted the attention of scholars and distinguished men in his day.—Hartford Courant.

FALL FROM GREAT HEIGHTS.

The Sensation Described by One Who Experienced It.

A German scientist, Professor Albert Heim, who fell over a precipice in the Alps, but lived to tell the tale, makes that story a very encouraging account to those with an inclination to high jumps and the like.

His fall was only seventy feet, yet that would be more than enough to satisfy a temperate person. His story is full of interesting detail.

At first he seemed to himself to be flying through the air. His fall really could have occupied only a few seconds, but his train of thought was long and full of interesting details.

"I clearly saw," he says, "the possibility of my fate. I said to myself 'The rocky wall from which I am now being hurled prevents my seeing what is at its base. The snow may be melted there or there may be none. If there is any, my life may be saved. Otherwise death is inevitable.

"'If I am conscious on reaching the earth, I have by me a bottle of aromatics and my alpenstock. I will grasp it, for it may serve me in good stead.' I thought, too, of removing my eyeglasses lest their splintering might cause injury.

"Other and gentler thoughts for those I was to leave behind came upon me. For myself I felt indifferent, caring really little whether I should be much injured or not, but from motives of consideration for others I felt impelled, as it were, to make light of the matter. I seemed to call aloud, 'I am not much hurt!'

"I recollected that in five days more I was to have delivered an inaugural discourse and thought of the grief my death would cause to those near and dear to me. Anon, lying, as it were, on the limit of a far distant horizon, appeared distinct and divers images and episodes of my past life. The whole mental picture stood out clear cut and illumined by divine and mysterious light.

"All things seemed lovely and of good report. There were no misgivings, no anxieties, no sorrow, pain or terror.

"There were no sensations of contest or strife. All was merged in feelings of genial good will and kindly feeling. Such feelings predominated over all and formed what was truly a unique and lovely picture.

"Gradually a heaven of glorious blue flecked with crimson clouds of gossamer lightness surrounded me. In them I was wafted to and fro, borne up from below, but painlessly and pleasantly, while a vast and moving snow field seemed to accompany me. Anon the perception of objects, subjective thoughts, a medley of various feelings, seemed to circle in concentric mazes around as a common center.

"Then came a dull thud, which I heard very distinctly, but did not feel, and my fall was ended. At that instant a dark veil passed before me.

"I called aloud three or four times 'I am not much hurt,' grasped my glasses, which lay near me, and touched my limbs to make sure they were not broken.

"Then I saw my companions slowly approaching. They told me a good half hour had elapsed after my fall before I spoke.

"I had lost consciousness, and that explains the dark veil. Later the power of thinking returned. I was conscious only so long as I was falling of the perception of beautiful images. At the moment of contact with earth they disappeared."

On another occasion Dr. Heim was injured in a carriage accident. He said that he distinctly heard and counted the bone fractures—seven in all—which he received. He quotes the evidence of an Italian who had a similar experience.—Gateway.

A Horseman's Getup, 1662.

"If the sword be not bought," writes Sir James Verney, "I had much rather have one according to the mode, and the rather because a black one is more agreeable to my phancy. I hope you have given my tailor full directions about the belt, for I can by no means trust to his judgment. As for the saddle you mention, I am very much obliged to yourself for borrowing and to Sir Rich: Temple for lending it, if he knows for whom it is, but my feare is that I shall not become a saddle of that worth, if it belongse to him as Kt. of the Bath, and I question whether I may have it for both assises. As for the horse I have at Sutton, I feare he will be too high for a low fellow to gett upon; if so, I shall be bold to send for yours. I am unwilling to look like a jackanapes on horseback. You mention topps to be laced, which I suppose are to be worn upon my leggs; if so, I feare there will be so much topp, as there will be but little bottom to be seen. My leggs all are short enough in conscience allready, and if the fashion must needs make them shorter I must strutt it out as well as I can."

"Yes," she replied, "but you told me before we were married that you would give me all I wanted."—London Tatler.

HARBOR BUOYS.

Their Different Colors Serve as Guides to the Mariner.

If you examine the buoys on entering any harbor in the world, you will find that those on your right are painted red and those on your left black. If you should see one painted in red and black horizontal bands, the ship should run as close to it as possible, because that indicates the center of a narrow channel. Buoys with red and black vertical stripes always mark the end of spits and the outer and inner ends of extensive reefs where there is a channel on each side. When red and black checkers are painted on a buoy it marks either a rock in the open sea or an obstruction in the harbor of small extent, with channel all round. If there are two such obstructions and a channel between them, the buoy on the right of you will have red and white checkers and the one on your left will have black and white checkers. When a wreck obstructs the channel, a green buoy will be placed on the sea side of the wreck, with the "Wreck" plainly painted on it in white letters, provided there is a clear channel all around it; otherwise an even number will be painted in white above the word "Wreck" when the buoy is on the right side of the channel and an odd number if the buoy is on the left.—Pearson's Weekly.

TRICKY JAIL BIRDS.

Many Ways the Convicts Have of Feigning Sickness.

"Hear the song of the dear little jail birds," said the jailer as a burst of ribald melody came down the gray corridor. "The dear little jail birds!" He shook his head and sighed.

"They are all playing sick in that ward," he resumed. "There's nobody can malinger like a jail bird. His tricks are amazing.

"To fake a fever he will whiten his tongue with chalk, flush his cheeks with a red flannel undershirt and disorder his stomach by swallowing a quid of tobacco.

"To fake consumption he will cut his gums so as to spit blood and go through a terrific kind of Swedish movement in bed so as to produce night sweats.

"Some jail birds have brought on nettle rash by temporarily poisoning themselves with smuggled crab or lobster. Some chew soap so as to froth at the mouth in fake fits. Some even thrust needles down to the lids of the eye to bring on cataract."—Minneapolis Journal.

How to Be Happy Though Married.

Wives, make much of your husband. Flatter him discreetly, laugh at his jokes, don't attempt to put down his club, never tell him home truths and never cry. Husbands, praise and admire your wife, and let other men admore her too. Don't interfere in her department. Be reasonable about money if you cannot be generous and not overfond of your own voice. And both of you: Be very tolerant, expect little, give gladly, put respect before everything, cultivate courtesy, and love each other all you can. If you do all this you are sure to be happy though married.—Maud Churton Braby in Grand Magazine.

$29,240,000 FINE ANNULLED BY COURT

UNITED STATES APPEAL BODY REVERSES FAMOUS DECISION OF JUDGE LANDIS.

NEW TRIAL ORDERED; TRIBUNAL ARRAIGNED

Jurist Who Imposed Record Penalty Is Hauled Over the Coals by Men Who Decide Against His Ruling—Grosscup Gives Opinion.

Chicago, July 23.—Federal judges in the court of appeals lifted the burden of a $29,240,000 fine from the shoulders of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana Wednesday and reversed the judgment of Judge Landis, by which the heaviest fine ever imposed in a federal court was saddled upon the oil company, found guilty on 1,462 counts of accepting rebates from railroads. Speedy rehearing of the case, which has attracted widespread attention, is considered improbable, and the counsel for the oil company contend that a second conviction cannot be obtained.

The case was remanded with instructions that a new trial be held.

The jurists making up the court of appeals are Judges Grosscup, Seaman and Baker.

Judge Grosscup delivered the opinion of the court, Judges Baker and Seaman concurring, and in sharp arraignment of the conduct of the trial judge intimated that he may have presumed to hold himself above the law.

Judge Landis Called Arbitrary.

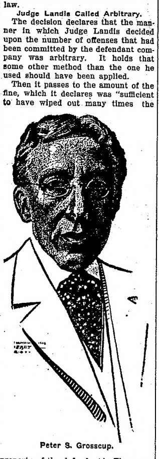
The decision declares that the manner in which Judge Landis decided upon the number of offenses that had been committed by the defendant company was arbitrary. It holds that some other method than the one he used should have been applied.

Then it passes to the amount of the fine, which it declares was "sufficient to have wiped out many times the property of the defendant.' The court holds that the only company on trial was the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. It says that this corporation alone could be punished and that to attempt to punish its holding corporation would be to assert that a person could be punished who was never before the court or who had never stood trial. This, the judges say, would be to assert a startling principle of law.



Peter S. Grosscup.

Others Than Commerce Law.

The court declares that the arraignment of the violation of an interstate commerce law was to be commended and that the results of such violations were not too strongly stated. It says, however, that the interstate commerce law is not the only one in the United States, and that it is because there are others that the case is reversed and remanded.

On the amount of the fine, the upper court said:

"Did the court in the fine imposed abuse its discretion? The defendant indicted, tried and convicted was the Standard Oil Company, a corporation of Indiana. The capital stock of this corporation is $1,000,000. There is nothing in the record in the way of evidence that some of the assets of the corporation were in excess of that amount. It may therefore be safely assumed that but for the relation of the defendant to another corporation not before the court, the court would have measured out punishment on the basis of the facts just stated."

Comment on Punishment.

The judges then commented on the punishment of the defendant in such a large amount and continued, saying:

"Briefly stated, the reason of the trial court for imposing this sentence was because it was brought out on examination that the capital stock of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana was principally owned by the New Jersey corporation, a corporation not before the court. The trial court, adding that in concessions of the character for which the defendant before the court had been indicted, tried and convicted, the New Jersey corporation was not a 'virgin' offender.

"Can an American judge, without abuse of judicial discretion, condemn any one who has not had his day in court? That, to our minds, is strange doctrine in Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence."

History of the Great Case.

In the summer of 1906 indictments against the Standard Oil Company of Indiana were returned in the federal court charging the corporation with obtaining concessions from railroads in shipments of oil from Whiting, Ind., where its plant is situated. At the trial of the case involving the Chicago & Alton, which began in March, 1907, many counts of the indictment were quashed, leaving 1,462 counts on which judgment was asked.

The hearing continued six weeks, and many witnesses were examined. The jury returned a verdict finding the defendant company guilty and leaving the sentence to be fixed by Judge Landis. In determining the amount of the fine the judge caused John D. Rockefeller of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey to testify as to the real ownership of the Indiana company, this furnishing one of the most sensational incidents in the case.

Maximum Fine on Every Count.

Following all the testimony Judge Landis imposed the maximum fine of $20,000 on each of the 1,462 counts of the indictment, making the total of $29,240,000 the largest fine known to the history of the courts.

One of the points argued in the appeal was that the fine was excessive and would wipe out the assets of the Indiana Oil Company. In an effort to increase the amount of the appeal bond counsel for the government introduced testimony on the earnings of the company taken in a New York court.

The case against the Standard Oil Company was prosecuted by District Attorney Edwin W. Sims and James H. Wilkerson as special assistant. Attorneys John S. Miller and Moritz Rosenthal of Chicago, John Virgil P. Kline of Cleveland, Chauncey W. Martyn and Alfred D. Eddy, western counsel for the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, represented the defendant company.

COMMENT ON OIL DECISION

W. H. TAFT.

"There is nothing I can say regarding the overruling of Judge Landis in the rebate case."

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER.

"I am not at home to visitors and anyhow I haven't anything at hand which might bear upon the decision."

W. J. BRYAN.

"I am astonished as well as eager to know the grounds upon which it was based. I will not, however, permit myself to be drawn into a discussion of the case."

M. F. ELLIOTT.
(Standard Oil Lawyer.)

"While I am pleased at the result, I can not make any comment until I have had opportunity to examine the decision carefully in full."

SOLICITOR-GEN. HOYT.
(Acting Attorney-General.)

"It can not be determined at once whether the department of justice will seek to have the decision of the circuit court of appeals reviewed on a writ of certiorari by the supreme court of the United States at this stage or will press for a new trial promptly, until the opinion of the court of appeals has been received and carefully considered. One course or the other will be taken as promptly as possible."

CHARLES J. BONAPARTE.
(Attorney-General.)

"A suit of such importance certainly ought to be submitted for final decision to the supreme court of the United States. But since the court of appeals has decided, this cannot now be done. There is no good reason of justice or public policy why there should not be an appeal from this decision by the United States. But the statutes permit none, although the congress has been repeatedly urged by successive attorney-generals to enact a more comprehensive law permitting appeals by the government in criminal cases. As I said in my last annual report, I think this gives an unreasonable and unfair advantage to the wealthy defendants in such cases, and I hope the defect in the law will be remedied at the next session of congress."

Minnesota Road to Raise Toll—Will Fight Through Courts.

St. Paul, Minn., July 23.—The Minneapolis, Red Lake & Manitoba Railroad Company Wednesday served notice on the state railroad and warehouse commission that beginning August 1 it would charge a passenger fare of three cents a mile, thus ignoring the two cent fare law.

This is considered a forerunner of similar action on the part of all the smaller roads of the state.

Fire Fatal to Two.

St. Louis, July 23.—Four men and a boy were hurt, two of them probably fatally, in a fire Wednesday in a South Second street boarding house. Two of the injured jumped from second-story windows, being trapped in their rooms by the flames.

Beheaded for Murder.

Freiberg, Saxony, July 23.—Grete Beier, the 18-year-old daughter of the mayor of Freiberg, was beheaded sometime between dark and dawn in punishment for the murder of the man to whom she was engaged to be married.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

The Great Northern Must Pay.

St. Paul—Gross earnings taxes paid to the state by the Great Northern road will be increased $60,000 a year if a decision filed by Judge O. B. Lewis in the Ramsey county district court is upheld by the higher courts.

The suit to which Judge Lewis' decision applies has been in the Ramsey county court for years. It was begun by the state to enforce payment of the gross earnings tax of the Great Northern road at the rate of 4 per cent as provided by a law of 1903, and involves the difference between that rate and 3 per cent, which the company contended was its rate of taxation as fixed for all time by a territorial law.

For every year since the enactment of the law of 1903 the company has paid taxes at the rate of 3 per cent, and the state, to bring the legal question to a test, began suit for 1 per cent additional on the earnings for 1905, the total tax at 4 per cent for that year being $120,737.38.

The beginning of the present Great Northern system was the old Minnesota & Pacific, for which the territorial legislature granted a charter in 1857, in which it was provided that the company should pay 3 per cent on its gross earnings in lieu of all other taxes. The railroad company has contended that under the terms of this charter it is exempt from the requirements of the law of 1903.

Lid on Diners.

Minneapolis—It is unlawful for railway companies to sell liquor in their dining or buffet cars, a custom which has long been in practice. This is the opinion of the state attorney general's office, written yesterday afternoon by George W. Peterson, assistant attorney general.

The question of the right of the railways to sell liquor to their patrons has never before been presented to the attorney general, but no permission to conduct a retail business can be found in the law, and in the absence of that permission the act is declared unlawful. The decision will affect nearly every railway line in the state.

"My opinion," says Mr. Peterson, "is that the sale is unlawful, and that chapter 16 of the Laws of 1905 does not contemplate the sale of liquor on trains."

If this opinion is sustained by the courts the railroads are liable to prosecution in every county through which their dining cars run.

Grotesque Holdup.

Minneapolis — Two highwaymen eclipsed all records for daring when they entered Striegl & Glassbrenner's meat market, 2003 Washington avenue south, locked Mr. Glassbrenner in the refrigerator and looted the cash register.

The men entered the place when no one was there but the proprietor and asked for some lard. To get this Mr. Glassbrenner had to go into the refrigerator. As he went in one of the robbers sprang for the door and closed it on the outside with the night lock.

The two men then went to the cash register, opened the drawer and took the money, amounting to about $40.

Glassbrenner at first attempted to open the door and failing in this he broke the glass in a window with his fist. He was badly cut in doing so, but he crawled through the window and out into the market just as the men darted out the front door.

Much Cash.

St. Paul—Minnesota had more cash on hand the 18th than on any day since the state was organized. The total of $3,013,274 was credited to the state, all drawing interest at 2 per cent. The pile may get still higher, but never before has it passed the $3,000,000 mark.

This plethora of cash is due to the advance payments by the three large counties. The public examiner last year suggested that it would be only fair to advance money on payments due the state, just as they do to the various cities and special funds. Not for a month or more after the taxes are received is the amount to the state figured, but by handing over a good share of what will be the state's the interest which formerly went to the counties for a month and a half or two months, now goes to the state.

Advance payments have been made by St. Louis county, $225,000; Hennepin county, $150,000; Ramsey county, $100,000.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul—The body of an unidentified man was found hanging in a stone yard at the foot of Chestnut street.

Minneapolis—For ten years preceding last year, when the sane Fourth idea was first realized in Minneapolis, the average fire loss per year on this day was $1,918.12. In 1907, when the sane Fourth was first celebrated, the total fire loss was only $35. This year the total loss from fire on the Fourth was only $25.

Rockford—Breaking into the house of William Lessner, 15 miles from here, neighbors found his 11-year-old stepson, Leo, almost dead from a severe beating given him by his mother and stepfather.

St. Paul—The monthly accident report of the state labor bureau for June shows 55 accidents, of which two were fatal. Lumber yards were the scene of 24, railroad repair shops 23.

AN HONEST DOCTOR ADVISED PE-RU-NA.

MR. SYLVESTER E. SMITH, Room 218, Granite Block, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "Peruna is the best friend a sick man can have.

"A few months ago I came here in a wretched condition. Exposure and dampness had ruined my once robust health. I had catarrhal affections of the bronchial tubes, and for a time there was a doubt as to my recovery.

"My good honest old doctor advised me to take Peruna, which I did and in a short time my health began to improve very rapidly, the bronchial trouble gradually disappeared, and in three months my health was fully restored.

"Accept a grateful man's thanks for his restoration to perfect health."

A. W. Perrin, M. D. S., 980 Halsey St., Brooklyn, N. Y., says:

"I am using your Peruna myself, and am recommending it to my patients in all cases of catarrh, and find it to be more than you represent. Peruna can be had now of all druggists in this section. At the time I began using it, it was unknown."

ONE ON THE DOCTOR.

St. Peter's Query Decided Reflection on Medical Attendant.

Dr. Arthur T. Holbrook told a story on his profession.

"A man by the name of Evans died," he said, "and went to heaven, of course. When he arrived at the pearly gates he said to St. Peter:

"'Well, I'm here.'

"St. Peter looked at him and asked his name. 'John Evans,' was the reply.

"St. Peter looked through his book, and shook his head.

"'You don't belong here,' he said, pointing to the exit.

"'But I am sure I belong here,' said the man.

"'Wait a minute,' said St. Peter.

"He looked again and in the back of the book found his name.

"'Sure,' said the guardian of the gate, 'you belong here. But you wasn't expected for 20 years. Who's your doctor?'"—Milwaukee Free Press.

ITCHING HUMOR ON BOY

His Hands Were a Solid Mass, and Disease Spread All Over Body —Cured in 4 Days By Cuticura.

"One day we noticed that our little boy was all broken out with itching sores. We first noticed it on his little hands. His hands were not as bad then, and we didn't think anything serious would result. But the next day we heard of the Cuticura Remedies being so good for itching sores. By this time the disease had spread all over his body, and his hands were nothing but a solid mass of this itching disease. I purchased a box of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment, and that night I took the Cuticura Soap and lukewarm water and washed him well. Then I dried him and took the Cuticura Ointment and anointed him with it. I did this every evening and in four nights he was entirely cured. Mrs. Frank Donahue, 208 Fremont St., Kokomo, Ind., Sept. 16, 1907."

Where the Urchin Scored.

The busy man stopped before an office building and leaped from his carriage. At the same moment an ambitious urchin ran forward and piped: "Hey, mister, kin I hold yer horse?" "No, you can't!" snapped the busy man. "Won't charge y' much," insisted the urchin. "I don't care about the charge," impatiently responded the man, throwing a blanket over his bony steed. "My horse will not run away." "Gee, mister, I didn't think he'd run away!" "No?" "No, I thought he might fall down."

A MAN, A WOMAN AND A BABY

BY C. F. MARTIN

(Copyright, by Shortstory Pub. Co.)

He was very small, very plump, and very pretty; he was possessed of a somewhat philosophical turn of mind. He spent most of his time lying in a soft bed in a bright, sunny nursery, and he was regularly given his dinner in a nicely warmed bottle.

The person who was most familiar to his wondering eyes was a dainty, white-clad, white-capped girl, who was always cheerful and happy. It made the baby happy to look at her; he expressed his pleasure by crowing in a language which he and the nurse seemed perfectly to understand.

He was dimly aware that outside the narrow limits of his nursery there existed a big, noisy, confusing world. He had received vague impressions concerning it during the brief hours which he usually passed outside on sunny afternoons. On these occasions, however, the fresh air always put him to sleep so promptly that he had had but little opportunity to examine the strange things surrounding him.

Remotely connected with his inner life there appeared to be other personalities than that of his nurse, although he had never been able to satisfactorily analyze their relationship.

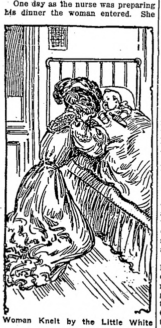
On rare occasions a man had made brief visits to the nursery. He generally looked gravely at the baby for a short time, asked a few calm questions of the white-capped nurse, and went out.

The baby always felt much in awe of the man; he never crowed when the man was present.

More frequently the baby had a visitor who in some respects resembled his nurse, except that she was much more beautiful and more dazzlingly attired. She often bent long over the bed, and looked earnestly at the baby. Her face, despite its beauty, never seemed happy like that of the nurse, and she never talked in the language which the baby and the nurse understood.

The baby's face always grew solemn with wonder and expectation when the woman stood over him. Somewhere in his being he felt a prompting to crow to her; he somehow felt that it might bring a smile to her sad eyes—but he had never quite dared.

One day as the nurse was preparing his dinner the woman entered. She was very pale, and her beautiful eyes were shadowy.



Woman Knelt by the Little White Bed.

"You may go out for an hour, Lizzie," she said, "I will give the baby his bottle to-day."

The nurse's eyes opened wide with astonishment, but she made no comment as she complied.

After the nurse had gone the woman knelt by the little white bed, and mystified the baby beyond measure by bursting into tears. For a time she sobbed uncontrollably, while the baby forgot his bottle in his wonder.

When she grew calmer she poured out her heart to the baby. He seemed to understand, and she had no other confidant. She told him many things of neglect, misunderstandings, and heartbreaks. Finally she ceased talking, and sat motionless, her dark eyes gazing absently out of the window.

The door opened softly, and the woman started to her feet; when she saw the man a quick flush sprang to her cheeks.

"I beg your pardon," he said, instinctively lowering his eyes, "I did not mean to intrude—I did not know you were in."

"I—I have been giving the baby his bottle," she stammered, conscious of her tear-stained face. "Don't let me drive you away," she continued, as he half-turned toward the door. "Did you come to see the baby? I didn't know you—"

"Ever came to see him?" he supplemented, as she hesitated. "Yes, I come in now and then to see how he is getting along; Lizzie is rather young to have the care of a baby."

"Don't you think he is a little pale to-day?" she asked.

The man studied the baby gravely for a moment. "It seems to me he does look a bit under the weather," he said, judicially. "I wonder if he gets enough to eat."

The baby, emboldened by the contents of his bottle and somewhat reassured by the attention he was receiving, gave a little gurgle, followed by the best crow he was capable of producing. Then he smiled cordially at the two grave faces above him, confident that they would understand that he was ready to accept overtures for his favor.

The woman's eyes lighted up; she looked at the man. He met her gaze for a moment, and glanced away.

"Queer how thoroughly his eyes are like yours," he said, with an effort at common-placeness.

"And his mouth and nose are replicas of yours." She stooped impulsively and kissed the baby's tiny mouth. Looking up, she caught the man's eye, and something she saw there brought the rosy flush back to her cheek.

"It's been a long time," he said, slowly, "since—"

"Yes, a long time," she murmured, as if phrases did not have to be completed to be understood.

"Ever since—" he began, and stopped again.

"Since that night in the conservatory," she mused, "when you saw Cousin Tom—"

"What do you mean?" he interrupted, quickly. "Do you mean it wasn't Dick Challoner that kissed you!"

"He has never done such a thing in his life!" she exclaimed.

"Oh, Mary," he cried, with a rush of understanding, "why didn't you tell me it was Tom?"

"Because you never asked me," she replied, "you chose to put your own construction on things, and to treat me coldly, and to act horrid with—"

But her speech was never finished, and the baby squealed with delight at seeing such demonstrations from this enigmatical man.

When the nurse came in a few moments later she found that the man and the woman had learned the language of the baby so well that all three were holding an animated conversation, and the subject of it all seemed to be the baby.

"Lizzie," said the woman, whose eyes were shining, "hereafter I will give the baby his bottle every day at this hour."

MAKING GODS FOR INDIA.

Foreign Countries Cutting Into Profitable Native Industry.

Few of us realize that into the vast triangle of Hindustan is packed one-fifth of the entire human race—more than 200,000,000 Hindus, 60,000,000 Mohammedans, 10,000,000 aborigines and well over 35,000,000 of other miscellaneous peoples, making up a population of over 300,000,000, speaking scores of different tongues and divided into hundreds of separate states.

The most important industry of India is agriculture, for the people are a race of farmers, and nearly two-thirds of the masses cultivate the soil, eking out a living so scanty that the slightest failure of the monsoon brings acute distress, if not positive famine.

It is perhaps for this reason that India is the most god-ridden region on earth. Her deities are numbered in millions, for, quite apart from the greater gods, every little hamlet between the tremendous Himalayas and Cape Comorin has its own set of deities, dreadful and beneficent.

From this it will be seen that god-making in India must necessarily be an immense business, and just now there is much feeling among the native artificers over this holy and profitable industry being cut into by foreign merchants and traders. Only the other day an enormous five-tiered Juggernaut car of gayly painted wood and steel was made in Calcutta, and of late years Birmingham and Philadelphia have both secured big slices of the traffic in gods.

Every village, especially in South India, is supposed to be surrounded by evil spirits, always on the watch to inflict disease and misfortune on the people. At the same time every little hamlet has also its guardian spirits.

Our Older Civilization.

You always have to travel to the east for monuments of a time older than your own. New Yorkers go to Europe, Europeans go to China and Japan. But it is not often that New Yorkers think of themselves as typifying something of this kind to others, says the New York Press. Yet in a recent issue of a Chicago paper the editor of questions answered column suggests to one of his readers that she go to the Catskills or White mountains for a walking tour rather than to Colorado, the one given reason for the eastern trip being that the inquirer "will meet an older civilization."

It Took Everything.

Naybor—Sorry to hear you had scarlet fever at your house. That's a bad disease. They say it usually leaves you with something.

Popley—Huh! It isn't likely to leave me with anything, judging from the doctor's bill.

SYMBOL OF SWASTIKA

RESEARCH SHOWS THAT IT IS OF VAST ANTIQUITY.

Commonly Accepted as the Sign of Good Luck—Traces Found in Records of Every Known Race.

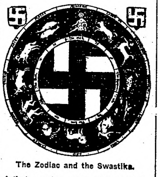
Washington.—The Swastika is the oldest known symbol, having its origin in the cross and the circle. As far back in the night of time as we are able to trace the records of man's life on the globe by the sculptured remains of temples and pillars we find the cross and circle, painted on ancient pottery, broidered on sacred vestments, sculptured on ruined monuments and figuring in the religious mysteries of all races.

To form an estimate of the age of the Swastika we must look back, archaeologists tell us, to the period of time when the pole star was in Cygnus, 17,000 B. C., apparently that of the first conception of the zodiacal year.

While the Swastika is held in common acceptation to be a lucky and auspicious object, meaning to thousands simply good luck, it is interesting to trace the origin of the belief and find why for ages upon ages it has been so held by races widely divergent in place and time.

It may be safely asserted that investigation of the records of every known race has revealed traces of the Swastika. It has been found on the pottery of the mound builders in Mississippi, showing identity of design with symbols from India, in what is called the Swastika—sitting position of the Hindus—and those of the Mayas and Aztecs, while in the remains of the prehistoric race of lake dwellers in Switzerland the Sistres is identified with the staff of jingling bells held in the hand of a statue of Buddha in India on whose base is a row of Swastikas.

It appears on the foreheads of gods in temples and on the walls of the cave temples in India, and also on Brahmin mountains. It is placed on the breast of the dead in Thibet, and ornaments the petticoats of the women of that country. It is shown in the ruins of Algeria and on the bronze ingots of aborigines in Ashantee. In our own America numberless ruins give testimony to the antiquity of this symbol.



The Zodiac and the Swastika.

In 1901 Dr. Berson, a German savant,, discovered the ruins of an Aztec temple in which he reports "constantly finding the Swastika in its primeval, in its derived and in its highly advanced forms," in his opinion positively identifying them with an age prior to that of Enoch.

Although greatly obscured since the days of the "Divine Dynasties," yet we owe to the Egyptians the preservation of many of these symbols and the recovery of many of the truths so veiled. Each of the many discoveries of archaeologists in Egypt at the present time is proving a rich treasure to those who hold the astral key of interpretation.

These spiritual truths became in course of time materialized and, losing sight of the real mysteries, the symbols became objects of worship. Hence in this day we see this grandest of all cosmic symbols dergraded in popular estimation to a charm or amulet worn to bring "good luck."

From the illustration some idea of the formation of the Swastika and its relation to the zodiac is seen, the outer rim being the "wheel" of Ezekiel, and the four beasts forming the arms of the cross, named in the Bible as the bull (Taurus), the lion (Leo), the eagle (Scorpio, anciently symbolized as an eagle), and the man (Aquarius). These "beasts" correspond to the four elements, so called, of earth, air, fire and water, which are the foundations of the manifested universe.

Cabalistically the Swastika corresponds to the number ten. Ten has always been esteemed the number of the Deity. The number one expresses "the universe visible," and the cipher at its right hand "the infinite vast," which we cannot conceive. The Rosicrucians referred the highest and most abstract ideas of number to the ten emanations of the Deity, for in them they recognized "the key to all things."

The winged sphere of the Egyptians is another form of symbolizing the same truth, with the wings added, which imply spiritual victory over planetary influences and release from the wheel of Samsara, which means being reborn on earth over and over again, "called a wheel because we whirl about from one life to another so long as we are overcome by desire." Those who hold to the latter belief are somewhat superstitious about wearing the Swastika, inasmuch as it is said to precipitate one's "karma," which "the lords of the four angles (or angels)" rule.

Hope Abandoned After Physicians' Consultation.

Mrs. Enos Shearer, Yew and Washington Sts., Centralia, Wash., says: "For years I was weak and run down, could not sleep, my limbs swelled and the secretions were troublesome; pains were intense. I was fast in bed for four months. Three doctors said there was no cure for me, and I was given up to die. Being urged, I used Doan's Kidney Pills. Soon I was better, and in a few weeks was about the house, well and strong again."

WAS ONLY RED BLOOD.

And Three-Year-Old Had Been Told That It Was Blue.

Three-year-old Allan had a very aristocratic grandma, who prided herself on her own and her husband's blue-blooded ancestry. She told him heroic deeds of them and warned him from ever playing with boys of low degree.

One day Allan came screaming upstairs to his mamma and grandma, holding his hand up covered with blood, where he had cut his little finger. They were both greatly alarmed, as he was a child who rarely cried or complained when hurt. Mamma washed the blood off and, examining the cut, said:

"Why, dear, it's not so very bad. Does it hurt you so much?"

"I'm not cryin' 'cause it hurts," he said, "but 'cause it's only red blood, and grandma said I had blue."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"William," said the head of the firm, looking at his watch, "I have business out of town this afternoon and may be detained several hours. If anybody should call—"

"Ther' ain't no ball game to-day, Mr. Spotcash," interrupted the office boy.

"I said nothing about ball games, William," rejoined his employer, eying him sternly. "However, my business is such that it can wait until some other day. That will be all just now, William."

Had Been Attended To.

An Italian went up to the civil service commissioners' rooms in the federal building the other day to be examined for a laborer's position. He answered most of the questions correctly. Finally they asked him if he had ever been naturalized. He seemed a bit puzzled, but at last his face lighted up.

"Ah, I know whata you mean. Scratcha de arm. Yes, lasta week."—Philadelphia Ledger.

DROPPED COFFEE

Doctor Gains 20 Pounds on Postum.

A physician of Wash., D. C., says of his coffee experience:

"For years I suffered with periodical headaches which grew more frequent until they became almost constant. So severe were they that sometimes I was almost frantic. I was sallow, constipated, irritable, sleepless; my memory was poor, I trembled and my thoughts were often confused.

"My wife, in her wisdom, believed coffee was responsible for these ills and urged me to drop it. I tried many times to do so, but was its slave.

"Finally Wife bought a package of Postum, and persuaded me to try it, but she made it same as ordinary coffee and I was disgusted with the taste. (I make this emphatic because I fear many others have had the same experience.) She was distressed at her failure and we carefully read the directions, made it right, boiled it full 15 minutes after boiling commenced, and with good cream and sugar, I liked it—it invigorated and seemed to nourish me.

"This was about a year ago. Now I have no headaches, am not sallow, sleeplessness and irritability are gone, my brain clear and my head steady. I have gained 20 lbs. and feel I am a new man.

"I do not hesitate to give Postum due credit. Of course dropping coffee was the main thing, but I had dropped it before, using chocolate, cocoa and other things to no purpose.

"Postum not only seemed to act as an invigorant, but as an article of nourishment, giving me the needed phosphates and albumens. This is no imaginary tale. It can be substantiated by my wife and her sister, who both changed to Postum and are hearty women of about 70.

"I write this for the information and encouragement of others, and with a feeling of gratitude to the inventor of Postum."

BORAX! NATURE'S DISINFECTANT, CLEANSER AND PURIFIER

Everybody realizes the necessity of some method of purification of sinks, drains and utensils in which may lurk the germ of a dreaded disease.

Health is a question of cleanliness and prevention.

Most people are familiar with the use of disinfectants in their ordinary sense—all of which are unpleasantly associated with disagreeable odors, on which are depended to kill the contagion (which disinfectants must of necessity be of a more or less dangerous character) and must be used for this purpose and for no other, and in consequence kept from children and careless handling.

There is, however, within the reach of all our readers a simple, safe and economical article that will not only answer for every disinfecting purpose—but can also be used for a multitude of domestic cleansing and purifying purposes—Borax.

Borax is a pure, white harmless powder coming direct from Nature's laboratory; in fact Borax has often been called "Nature's Cleanser and Disinfectant."

Two tablespoonfuls of Borax in a pailful of hot water poured down the grease-choked pipes of a sink, or flushed through a disease-laden drain, cleanses and purifies it, leaving it clean and sweet.

Bed clothing and clothes used in a sick room can be made hygienically clean and snowy-white, if washed in a hot solution of Borax water.

Kitchen and eating utensils, used during illness will be kept from all possibility of contagion if Borax is used when washing them. Pure as snow and harmless as salt, and because it can be used for almost every domestic and medical purpose, Borax must be considered the one great household necessity.

The Candy Girl.

He was one of those sentimental chaps who imagine the only way to capture a girl's heart is to send her volumes of poetry. Selecting a book of seasonable verse he sent it to his lady fair with the following scribbled on the fly-leaf:

> "Dearest, as I seek your heart,
> A book of verse I do impart!"

And the pretty but sensible girl, who did not care a rap if Shakespeare had been a pirate instead of a poet, returned the verses with the following lines:

> "To the woods with this sludge.
> If my heart you'd really budge,
> Send me up a pound of fudge."

Helie de Sagan is a serene highness. Think of a "serene highness" rolling down the steps of a church after a base lowness has spit in his eye and caressed his coattails with a boot.—Minneapolis Journal.

Rockefeller is alleged to have become very religious and devout as old age creeps upon him. The common idea is that he had his nearest taste of heaven when he heard that the supreme court had turned down the decision of Judg Landis imposing the celebrated $29,000,000 fine on the Standard Oil Co.

The June statement of business of the Plummer creamery, published in our news columns this week, shows a big increase over last year. With the rapid development of the dairy industry and the improvement of farm lands in this vicinity by drainage the future looks most promising for the village of Plummer and its splendid territory. Now is the time for every citizen to boost the town and country and quit knocking each other. Plummer can treble its size in the next three years if the people in the village will pull together and try to do something to help the general progress and each other.

If there is anything that would make hair grow on John D's head the remanding of the famous $29,000,000 case against the Standard Oil Company for re-trial ought to do the business. The safeguards which the law throws around a defendant—especially if the defendant be prominent or wealthy—are such that a re-trial is expected, and almost inevitable, and ultimately justice is worn out and defeated. Meanwhile, the people pay the bills and the law, which is supposed to be for the protection of the people, is continually and systematically broken in the interest of influence and capital. We think we are not guilty of lese majeste in saying that the people are justified in a loss of faith in the efficiency of the law as the conservator of popular rights.

Ole Tommerdahl, a farmer on the eleven towns near Highlanding, committed suicide last Sunday morning by drinking a quantity of carbolic acid. He was a little over forty years of age and leaves a wife and three small children to fight life's battles.

Indians Convicted For Moose Killing.

Game Warden William Munch, of Crookston, and Sheriff Nelson, were up to Little Oak the first of the week and caused the arrest of three Indians and a settler, charged with killing, selling and buying moose meat out of season.

Mek-ee-nock, which in English is snapping turtle, plead guilty to having shot the moose and was given a sentence of 90 days in the Red Lake county jail.

May-qna-me-wap (sitting on the ice) and No-te-ne-ba-ness (windy prairie chicken) each plead guilty to having sold moose meat to Mrs. John Lundblad, wife of a homesteader living in the town of Hickory, and receiving seven cents per pound for the same. They were each given a sentence of 90 days in the county jail.

John Lundblad plead guilty to the charge of buying the moose meat, although his wife was the guilty party, and was fined $50 and costs. The case against his wife was dropped.

Justice Toupin, of Red Lake Falls, fined the parties.

This is sasd to be the first case in the state of Minnesota where Indians have been convicted for the violation of the game laws of the state.—Thief River Falls News.

Peculiarities of Bats.

In one respect at least bats are the most remarkable of all the creatures possessing the power of true flight. Bats, as most people know, are mammals—they belong to the great class of "higher animals" which comprises man himself. Moreover, it is not a little remarkable that among the host of extinct animals with which, thanks to the labors of geologists, we are now acquainted not one has been discovered in any way connecting bats with other mammals. Thus bats stand alone, while how and why they became vested with the power of flight are questions shrouded in mystery. The framework of the bat's wing is furnished by the fore limb. Indeed, the bones corresponding to those of our own hand constitute its most important parts; hence bats are known as chiroptera, or hand winged animals. The thumb of the bat is free and terminates in a hooked claw, but the "fingers" are enormously lengthened, while between them stretches a skin or membrane, to which in certain species the bones of the tail give additional support. All things considered, bats appear to be better models than birds for those who attempt to attain flight by mechanical means.—Scientific American.

Conferring a Knighthood.

Sir James Knowles, the editor of the Nineteenth Century, used to describe with enjoyment the fashion in which he was knighted. He was at Sandringham one Sunday evening, and the king said to him: "Knowles, I want you to be a knight. Will that please your wife?" "I'm sure she will be charmed by your thought of her, sir." "Well, then, send word to her in town." Sir James was discovered a little later by his majesty writing a letter. "No, no," said the king. "I've given it to the court newsman, and she will very likely see it in the papers before she gets the letter. Write out a telegram, and I will see that she has it tonight." And she had. "It was not the honor," added Sir James in telling the story, "that I valued so much as the way in which it was conferred."

Australia.

The first civilized settlement in Australia was made at Botany bay in 1788 by some 1,030 persons, mostly convicts. In 1825 Moreton bay, New South Wales, was settled. The settlement of Western Australia dates from 1829. Explorations of Australia began in 1815 and have been kept up at intervals ever since. The greater part of the interior of the continent is little better than desert, being either sand or dense shrub or porcupine bush. In 1875 Giles traversed a territory 2,500 miles in extent which was declared "unfit for human habitation." And yet the artesian well may yet make Australia bloom like a garden.—New York American.

DUELING STORIES.

Girardin's Satisfaction and a Winning Choice of Weapons.

M. de Girardin, the father of the statesman and author, Emile de Girardin, on one occasion entered a place where several men were firing at a target. A gentleman present, whom M. de Girardin did not know, hit the bullseye at every shot. Several bystanders expressed themselves in very great admiration of the gentleman's precision.

"Yes," said De Girardin, "he shoots remarkably well, but it's quite a different thing to hit a man in a duel from hitting a piece of pasteboard."

The marksman overheard the remark and was offended.

"I think you are mistaken, sir," he said to De Girardin. "I assure you that if I had you before me I shouldn't miss you."

"You can have me when you like," said De Girardin.

"Let it be immediately, then," said the other.

An attempt was made to patch the matter up, but neither man would agree to an amicable settlement. The seconds were chosen, and the men went to a locality favorable for the duel. It was decided that they should fire separately, and it was left to a decision by lot which fired first.

The lot fell to the mysterious marksman. He fired at M. de Girardin and missed him. De Girardin stood still, making no sign as if to fire at his antagonist.

"Come, why don't you shoot?" asked his seconds.

"Why should I shoot?" asked De Girardin. "There is no reason why I should kill this gentleman. I maintained that even a crack shot could easily miss his man at twenty-five paces. This gentleman maintained the contrary. He must now be convinced that he is wrong. I owe him no ill will for having discovered that."

A better method of meeting a dueling challenge was no doubt one which was employed on a certain occasion by a French statesman against M. Victor Noir, an illiterate bully of the press in the time of the second empire. The statesman received from Noir, for no real reason whatever, a challenge to fight a duel.

Noir was a densely ignorant man, and nearly every word in the challenge was misspelt. The statesman responded with the following letter:

> Dear Sir—You have called me out without any good reason. I have therefore the choice of weapons. I choose the spelling book, and you are a dead man.

The duel was never fought.—London Tit-Bits.

POISONING AS A FINE ART.

Scale of Prices Submitted to the Venetian Council of Ten.

Venetian poisoners first came into notoriety in the fifteenth century. At that period the mania for poisoning had risen to such a height that the governments of the states were formally recognizing secret assassination by poison and considering the removal of emperors, princes and powerful nobles by this method.

The notorious council of ten met to consider such plans, and an account and record of their proceedings still exists, giving the number of those who voted for and who voted against the proposed removal, the reasons for the assassination and the sum to be paid for its execution.

Thus these conspirators quietly arranged to take the lives of many prominent individuals, and when the deed was executed it was registered on the margin of their official record by the significant word "factum."

On Dec. 15, 1543, John of Raguba offered the council a selection of poisons and declared himself ready to remove any person whom they deemed objectionable out of the way. He calmly stated his terms, which for the first successful case were to be a pension of 1,500 ducats a year, to be increased on the execution of further services.

The presidents Guolando Duoda and Pietro Guiarni placed this matter before the council on Jan. 4, 1544, and on a division it was resolved to accept this patriotic offer and to experiment first on the Emperor Maximilian. John, who had evidently reduced poisoning to a fine art, submitted afterward a regular graduated tariff to the council. The highest fee was for poisoning the sultan, 500 ducats; for the king of Spain, 150 ducats, including the expenses of the journey; for the Duke of Milan, 60 ducats; for the Marquis of Mantua, 50 ducats; for the pope, 180 ducats.—Health.

New Light on the Zones.

A class of boys averaging about twelve years of age had been examined in geography, which had been preceded the day before by grammar. Among the questions in the geography paper was the following:

"Name the zones."

One promising youth of eleven years wrote this answer:

"There are two zones, masculine and feminine. The masculine is either temperate or intemperate; the feminine is either torrid or frigid."—New York Sun.

HE DIDN'T GO HUNGRY.

Neither Did His Partner After Their Scheme Succeeded.

The man who once was down and out, but is so no longer, was telling the other day of one of his poverty time devices.

He was traveling with another chap just as much down and out as he, and both were hungry. Their capital was insignificant, and they didn't intend to spend any of it. But they had a revolver, which suggested to the first man a scheme. It worked out something like this:

"I went into a pretty good looking restaurant," said the prosperous one, taking a long draw at his cigar, "and as my clothes looked pretty good I wasn't an object of suspicion. I had an overcoat which belonged to my partner.

"As the overcoat and the revolver were chief characters in the ensuing drama, they have to be mentioned prominently. I got a seat right near the door and hung up my coat so that it was only a step away from the door.

"Then I sat down and ordered a square one, a meal that it would be impossible to describe it was so good. It was flavored with the sauce of abstinence—from food.

"I ate and ate and ate, and by and by my partner came along. Without his overcoat—and it was a cold day—he didn't look good. He hung around the door for a long while, looking like a hobo getting up his nerve to come in and beg.

"Just about the time he made a signal to me that showed he was about to enter I got up to go to the cigar counter to pick out a nice after dinner smoke. In came my partner and slunk up to the desk to ask for a bit of food.

"Nothing doing. He was turned down cold. Then to make the thing work better he came up to me and asked: 'Say, boss, won't you give me a lift? I'm down and out.' I repulsed him sternly, and after looking around he started out.

"I said to the proprietor in a virtuous way, 'I don't believe in helping those bums,' to which he answered with a smug shake of the head, when my partner grabbed the overcoat. I knew what he was doing, but I pretended to be very much interested in the cigar until the proprietor yelled out, 'Hey, he's stealing your coat!'

"I held on to the cigar, wheeled around and started for my partner. He was half out of the door. I yelled, 'Drop that!' and for answer he drew the revolver and flourished it.

"The proprietor dropped behind the counter, and the waiters fled to the kitchen. From his place the proprietor called out: 'Look out! He'll shoot you!' And, taking my cue, I let him run out.

"Then when the excitement cleared off I raised an awful row about losing the coat, and the proprietor finally came up with the money for a new one, say about $30. Well, did that meal pay me? What?"—New York Sun.

HISGEN AND GRAVES NAMED BY INDEPENDENCE PARTY

Ticket Put Up and Platform Adopted by Convention in Chicago--Kansan Nearly Mobbed for Presenting Bryan's Name.

Chicago.—For President—Thomas L. Hisgen of Massachusetts.

For vice-president—John Temple Graves of Georgia.

The above ticket was nominated Tuesday night by the Independence party at its first national convention.

The friends of Mr. Bryan made an effort during the night session to bring his name before the convention and the man who atempted it nearly produced a riot and narrowly escaped physical violence at the hands of the indignant delegates. The man who sought to place Mr. Bryan in nomination was J. I. Shepard of Fort Scott, Kan. He did not succeed in his mission, for being called to order by the convention and questioned by Chairman Charles A. Walsh, he admitted that it was his intention to name Mr. Bryan. That was the first and last time he mentioned the name of the Democratic leader. He was promptly ruled out of order by the chairman and under the guard of several sergeants-at-arms he was hustled out of the hall while some of the incensed delegates vainly attempted to strike him with fists and one of them swung at him savagely with a cane.

Three Ballots Needed.

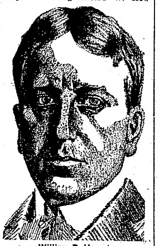
The nomination of Mr. Hisgen was made on the third ballot, his chief competitors being Milford W. Howard of Alabama and John Temple Graves of Georgia. Reuben R. Lyon of New York received a complimentary vote on the first ballot and William Randolph Hearst had 49 friends who voted for him on the first two ballots.



William R. Hearst.

The nomination of Mr. Graves was made unanimously, all the other candidates having been withdrawn.

Mr. Hearst's Speech.

In the course of his "keynote" speech, Temporary Chairman Hearst said:

"In 1792 Thomas Jefferson, who had penned the principles of the Declaration of Independence, founded the Democratic-Republican party to perpetuate those principles.

"In 1840 this party, founded to be the party of the people, had become the party of privilege, and the Democratic party came into being and crystallized about the personality and principles of Andrew Jackson. In 1854 the Democratic party had become the property of an arrogant aristocracy which denounced the self-evident truths of the Declaration of Independence as 'self-evident lies.' Then the Republican party was born to restore the action of the government to the principles of Washington and Jefferson, and Abraham Lincoln led it to victory.

"Is it not time, is there not need, for a new party which shall take up the work of the parties of Jefferson, of Jackson and of Lincoln and preserve for us and for the citizens of the future the rights and liberties which these parties in their hour of usefulness preserved for the citizens of their time?

Calls Old Party Faithless.

"The old parties, in this day of their decadence, are no longer equal to this work, for they have become unfaithful to the principles which inspired them and unworthy of the patriots who founded them. The Republican party is the open and avowed handmaiden of the trusts. It scorns those who would rescue it, repudiates those who would reform it, and glories brazenly in its profitable infamy. The Democratic party is merely envious of its sordid sister's ill-gotten finery. It upbraids her at one election and imitates her at the next. The Republican leaders are the political attorneys of trusts and monopolies, the representatives in public life of those giant corporations which have superseded the people in this republic as the source of power and the seat of authority.

Bryan Has Falstaff's Army.

"The Democratic vanguard is a Falstaff's army. It is led by a knight arrayed in a motley of modified professions and compromised principles of altered opinions and retracted statements. It is officered by such soldiers of fortune as Sullivan and Hopkins, and Murphy and McClellan, by Tom Taggart, the roulette gambler; and Tom Ryan, the Wall street gambler; and Belmont, the race-track gambler. It is composed of such political mercenaries as Bailey of the Standard Oil and Williams of the Southern railway, and Hinky Dink, and Bathhouse John, and Red Duffy, and Nigger Mike—all harmonized at last and all marching together in a rhythmic cadence strongly suggestive of the lockstep. A Falstaff's army, whose banner bears on one side a watchword for the people and on the other a password for the trusts, whose only object is office at any cost, whose motto, 'After Us the Deluge.'

Known by His Company.

"Assuming that Mr. Bryan himself is all that his most ardent admirers claim him to be, a great lawyer, an enlightened statesman, an inspired patriot, still a man is known by the company he keeps, and no decent Democrat can tolerate his free companions. No honest citizen can let down the bars of office to such an Ali Baba's band of boodlers and braves. No prudent citizen will support a combination to which Taggart supplies a candidate and Parker a platform, for which Ryan will pay the freight and the people will pay the penalty.

"No man can serve two masters and no man can conciliate the conflicting elements of the Democratic party. He who tries must serve one and deceive the other—must make public pretense to the people and private compact with the trusts."

Platform of New Party.

The committee on resolutions had a lively debate over the currency plank, several members threatening to return to the Republican party. The plank as adopted demands the creation of a central governmental bank through which the currency shall pass to the people.

Other planks favor the recall, initiative and referendum, direct nominations and legislation against corrupt practices at elections. The platform condemns the arbitrary use of the writ of injunction and contempt proceedings and demands various laws for the benefit of the laboring classes. Revision of the tariff by "the friends of the people" is demanded, as is adequate legislation to prevent rebating and other offenses by railways, and against illegal trusts. Yet other planks favor exclusion of Asiatic labor, the parcels post and postal savings bank, an adequate navy, and speedy improvement of the inland waterways.

Hisgen a Rich Oil Man.

Thomas L. Hisgen, candidate of the Independence party for president of the United States, was born of German parentage November 26, 1858, at Petersburg, Ind. He received a common school education, and then began work in a country store. Later he engaged in a small way in the oil business at Albany, N. Y. He was successful, and in a few years became president of the Four Brothers Oil company.

Through his connection with the oil business Mr. Hisgen came into personal contact with the Rockefeller corporation. He was one of the principal witnesses for the government in the suit which is still pending to disorganize the Standard Oil company. Mr. Hisgen's company is said at one time to have been offered $600,000 for its property by the Rockefeller concern. The offer was declined.

Mr. Hisgen's home is at Springfield, Mass. In 1907 he was the Independence candidate for governor of the Bay state and received more votes than the Democratic candidate, his total being 75,000.

Graves a Journalist.

John Temple Graves, the vice-presidential candidate, is from the south, though for some time he has been engaged as an editorial writer for the Hearst newspapers. He first attracted attention to himself by openly advocating lynching for certain crimes at a Chautauqua meeting in Atlanta, Ga.

He went to Atlanta in 1887 and founded the Atlanta Journal.

Mob Burns Negro to Death.

Dallas, Tex.—"Tad" Smith, a negro boy 18 years old, charged with assault on Miss Viola Delancey at Clinton, Hunt county, was captured by officers Tuesday. He was hurried to the Greenville jail. Before arriving there, however, a mob of citizens overpowered the officers and took the prisoner. Fagots were piled up in the public square at Greenville and the negro was placed thereon. Kerosene oil was poured on and a match applied. Smith slowly burned to death while 1,000 people looked on.

Prince of Wales Departs.

Quebec, Can.—Tuesday was the last day of the prince of Wales' visit, and he sailed on the Indomitable soon after midnight. He visited Victoria park during the day and planted a tree in the presence of a large crowd. Later he was present at a garden party at Spencer Wood.

Desperadoes Steal $40,000.

Tiraspol, Russia.—A band of men Tuesday attacked the office of the cashier at the local railroad station and got away with $40,000.

Law Is Valid.

St. Paul—The state board of control by a decision of the supreme court will now be able to proceed with the location and erection of the state hospital and farm for inebriates. The court has affirmed the decision of the lower court in a test case brought by the board of control against the city of Morris and held the law constitutional which sought to establish the farm.

The law was passed by the last legislature and provided that 2 per cent of the income from liquor licenses in all the municipalities of the state was to be sent to the state treasurer for a separate fund for the maintenance of a farm and hospital for habitual drunkards. Morris refused to pay the 2 per cent, alleging that it was taking property which was not subject to a tax and that the state didn't have the right anyway to put a man in a hospital because he drank too much and the law must be wrong. But the supreme court, in a decision written by Chief Justice Start, says that the law is all right and that nothing was enacted which cannot be carried out in a legal manner.

First New Grain.

Minneapolis—First new grain from the harvest fields northwest struck town the 27th, the Great Western bringing in a car of barley, shipped by C. D. Orr, of Northfield, to McIntyre-Frerich of the Chamber of Commerce.

Much interest always attaches to the first movement and buyers watch it closely as price and quality indication for the big run later on. The Northfield car tested 47 pounds to the bushel, was a good berry, of medium color, and with buyers crowding about and inspecting it, was sold finally to T. M. McCord for 56 cents a bushel. Such a price for barley, after taking out freight and charges, leaves a profitable return for the producer, and as there is a good big barley crop in the Dakotas and Minnesota this year the season has opened auspiciously.

A car of new rye, from Ottawa, shipped to Brenner, was received here later. It was delivered to W. T. Fraser.

Lemon for Women.

St. Paul—The attorney general's office slipped a lemon to the women of Minnesota when it rendered an opinion that women would not be allowed to vote this fall on a constitutional amendment concerning the qualifications of county superintendents of public instruction. The opinion was written by C. Louis Weeks of the attorney general's department on a letter of inquiry from J. W. Olsen, state superintendent.

Women are permitted to vote on matters pertaining to the schools and as the amendment relates to the officers of the schools, many believe they should be allowed to cast their ballot for the amendment to Article 7 of Section 7 of the constitution, which relates to school officers.

But the legal opinion shuts out the women of Minnesota from the only possible chance they have had since the creation of the state to vote on a proposition of state-wide interest.

Nine-Word Name.

Hamline—After considerable correspondence with the representative of the United States government, it has been discovered that the name of the chief of the Sioux Indians, who are to make the attack on Fort Ridgely on the State Fair grounds each evening of the Minnesota State Fair, from Aug. 31 to Sept. 5, is Wicasta-hunkexni-matooyuspe, the translation of which is "Man-that-runs-slow-to-catch-the-bear."

Experts in nomenclature are invited to make any suggestions as to capitalization of this nine-jointed name that may occur to them. This is, in no sense, a prize contest, although the State Fair officials regard it as a prize name.

Wool Center.

Minneapolis—Minneapolis, in being selected as the storage point for the National Woolgrowers' association, which met at Cheyenne, Wyo., not only receives marked recognition of its importance as a distributing center, but gains a valuable addition to its annual volume of business. One immediate benefit will be the investment of $100,000 in a plant for the storage of wool, while it is awaiting shipment.

CUTICURA CURED FOUR

Southern Woman Suffered with Itching, Burning Rash—Three Little Babies Had Skin Troubles.

"My baby had a running sore on his neck and nothing that I did for it took effect until I used Cuticura. My face was nearly full of tetter or some similar skin disease. It would itch and burn so that I could hardly stand it. Two cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment cured me. Two years after it broke out on my hands and wrist. Sometimes I would go nearly crazy for it itched so badly. I went back to my old stand-by, that had never failed me—one set of Cuticura Remedies did the work. One set also cured my uncle's baby whose head was a cake of sores, and another baby who was in the same fix. Mrs. Lillie Wilcher, 770 Eleventh St., Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 16, 1907."

A SURGICAL OPERATION

If there is any one thing that a woman dreads more than another it is a surgical operation.

We can state without fear of a contradiction that there are hundreds, yes, thousands, of operations performed upon women in our hospitals which are entirely unnecessary and many have been avoided by

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

For proof of this statement read the following letters.

Mrs. Barbara Base, of Kingman, Kansas, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For eight years I suffered from the most severe form of female troubles and was told that an operation was my only hope of recovery. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has saved my life and made me a well woman."

Mrs. Arthur R. House, of Church Road, Moorestown, N. J., writes:

"I feel it is my duty to let people know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female troubles, and last March my physician decided that an operation was necessary. My husband objected, and urged me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to-day I am well and strong."

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, and backache.

REALLY AFRAID TO BE LUCKY.

One Man of Superstitions Who Is Bound to Be Unhappy.

"It's bad enough to be superstitious in any case," said the man who is, "but there are some uncomfortable home-made superstitions which I can't get rid of.

"For instance, when I'm bound up town in a hurry and get into the subway to take an express train I am always afraid that I'm not going to get what I'm after, if I catch just the train I want right away. If I want to go up on Lenox avenue and the first train aleng is a Lenox avenue express, I take it with a haunting fear that things are breaking too well for me right at the start for success in my errand.

"Then, again, when I come home, if I dip into my pocket and get the right key for the outside door the first time, I feel afraid that something will be wrong when I get inside. Now most persons would think that I ought to be pleased with being lucky like that, but I always reason it out the other way.

"Come to think of it, thus far I haven't really suffered by these minor successes at the start. But—" and he knocked on the wooden edge of the table at which they were sitting.—New York Sun.

ODD NAMES OF BRITISH INNS.

Tourist Recorded Some That Were Especially Striking.

The little inns which we passed going from London to Scotland, and even the wine shops, gloried in the pretentious names which were generally displayed in illustrated signs hanging on brackets. We had great fun in watching these old signs and writing down some of the most unusual. "We passed "The Red Bull," and in neighborly proximity "The Red Cow" and "The Dun Cow." Sir John Barleycorn" was near enough to hear "The Five Bells," and just beyond this, as if not to be outdone in the bell line, the proprietor of one inn called his place "The Ring o' Bells." Later we passed "The Easy Chair" and "Wait for the Wagon," "The Nag's Head," "The Spread Eagle," and down near the end of the list we had recorded "The Black Boy" and "The Head, Hand and Stomach."—Frank Presbrey, in Outing Magazine.

Resistance of Snow.

During certain government experiments at Washington with reference to the effects of sudden pressures, attention was called to a singular experience, which sometimes happens to people who go shooting in winter. If the muzzle of a gun happens to become plugged with a little snow, the gun invariably bursts when fired in that condition. Light as the plug of snow is, it requires a definite time for a finite pressure, however great, to get it under way, and during this short time the tension of the powder gases becomes so great that the barrel of the ordinary fowling piece is unable to withstand it.

Test for Hydrochloric Acid.

A curious mishap has given us a very delicate test for hydrochloric acid in the atmosphere. In a North of England locality many houses have curtains of the cream color produced by metanil yellow—popularly known as "dolly" cream dye and to science as "the sodium salt of meta-amido-benzine sulphonic acid-azo-diphenylamine." Some of these cream-colored curtains suddenly changed to heliotrope. Investigation showed that an accidental escape of hydrochloric acid from a neighboring alkali plant had discolored the curtains and the dye became a most useful test.

The girl who hid stolen money beside a tombstone and was captured a few minutes after is likely to be superstitious about cemeteries henceforth.

MRS. BRYAN AT HOME

WIFE OF DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT.

Has Been of Great Help to Famous Nebraskan—Has Studied Law and Been Admitted to Bar—Her Home Life.

Lincoln, Neb.—Mrs. Bryan, the wife of William Jennings Bryan, Democratic candidate for president of the United States, shares every confidence, and is on all occasions a most reliable helpmeet by her husband's side. The home life of Mr. and Mrs. Bryan truthfully demonstrates the old adage, "The twain are one."

Mrs. Bryan is not only a homemaker, but a home-keeper, and manages the daily routine at Fairview with utmost system. Whatever interruptions are crowded into the day, the household machinery remains unchanged and Mrs. Bryan always maintains a calm exterior.

It always has been Mrs. Bryan's fervent ambition to keep abreast with her husband's intellectual progress. This she has accomplished, and in doing so gives example by precept, for she has studied side by side with Mr. Bryan in every phase of life's problem in which he has at any time been interested. When Mr. Bryan decided upon law as his profession, then it was that he took one step in advance of Mrs. Bryan, but it was not to be for long, for when Mrs. Bryan came to Lincoln she immediately began a course of law studies, and after graduating was admitted to practice in all courts of the state. When asked why she studied such a dry, musty subject as "law," she modestly declared it was just because she did not want Mr. Bryan to become conversant with a subject of which she was ignorant. She said the course was really easy and any woman who has the time could do as she has done.

Mrs. Bryan leads a very active and busy life, but having everything so well systematized, manages to keep ahead of her work. She has for a number of years had entire charge of Mr. Bryan's personal correspondence and has been what he calls his "confidential secretary." Just now Mr. Bryan's official stenographer, who has helped in previous campaigns, is a resident at Fairview, but this does not relieve Mrs. Bryan from looking after Mr. Bryan's private correspondence. She takes up the consideration of the mail immediately after breakfast, which, by the way, is a very early meal for Mrs. Bryan, as she is usually about the house planning various lines of work and outlining her duties for the day at five o'clock in the morning. Mr. Bryan dictates his letters to Mrs. Bryan and as a rule his editorials. Mrs. Bryan did not attempt to learn any defined system of shorthand when first undertaking this work, but immediately arranged a contracted system of her own, which she has found to be adequate in every way. About five years ago she began using the typewriter and now has become such a rapid operator she frequently takes dictation direct on the machine.

Mrs. William J. Bryan.

Mr. Bryan's mail does not comprise all that is received at Fairview, for Mrs. Bryan herself daily receives more letters than any other woman in the land, unless it should be the wife of President Roosevelt. Everybody who has any sort of a question to ask, concludes at once Mrs. Bryan is the proper person to whom to apply.

Mrs. Bryan is an ardent church worker, giving according to her means, and always lending her influence to the smaller organizations where it is most needed. When she moved to Fairview she attended the little church at Normal, but lately a mission church was established in South Lincoln and she and her husband severed their connection with the fashionable First church of the city and placed their names on the membership roll of the new organization, known as Westminster church.

Mrs. Bryan is dearly loved by all who serve her, and though often troubled in securing competent help, she is always able to retain her household servants.

She has a masterful personality, the influence of which is far-reaching. She possesses a large degree of tactfulness, which is not assumed, for Mrs. Bryan is always perfectly natural, and one always sees her as she really is. Her manner is cordial, and when conversing her face lights up with a smile which makes her at once seem a friend.

CHINESE PIGEON WHISTLES.

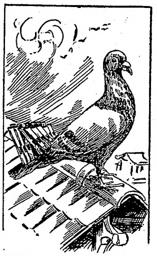
Queer Contrivances by Which Aerial Concerts Are Produced.

Among the curious objects included in the Chinese collection recently obtained for the American Museum of Natural History by Dr. Berthold Laufer are samples of the whistles by means of which music-loving Chinese obtain pleasing melodies from flocks of pigeons whose tails are adorned with the contrivances.

The Chinese lover of birds does not always confine his pets to cages. When he goes for a walk he may take a bird with him, carrying it on a stick, to which one of its feet is fastened by a thread long enough to allow it freedom of motion. Where the shade of a tree invites him to rest he permits the bird to perch on a twig, watching it hour after hour.



Chinese Pigeon with Musical Whistles.

Another curious expression of the pleasure Chinese find in pets is the application of whistles to a whole flock of pigeons. These whistles are attached to the tails of young pigeons soon after their birth by means of fine copper wire and when the birds fly the wind blowing through the whistles produces a melodious open-air concert, for the instruments in one flock are all tuned differently. In Pekin, where these instruments are manufactured with great cleverness and ingenuity, it is even possible to enjoy this aerial music while sitting in one's room.

In spite of the seemingly large variety of whistles there are but two distinct types—those consisting of oblong bamboo tubes placed side by side, and those consisting of tubes attached to a gourd body or wind chest. They are lacquered in yellow, brown, red and black. The tube whistles have two or three or else five tubes. In some specimens the five tubes are made of horn instead of bamboo.

As to the materials and implements used in the manufacture of pigeon whistles, there are small gourds that serve for the bodies; halves of large gourds of a particular species imported from Shantung to Pekin for this special industry, from which stoppers are made that fit into them, and four kinds of bamboo, cylindrical pieces of a large species that grows in the south, for making the mouthpieces of the large tubes; thin sticks for making those of the small ones, hard bamboo for the large tubes themselves, and a soft kind for smaller ones.

The separate pieces are fastened together by means of fish glue. A razor-like knife is used for splitting the bamboo sticks and a chisel to break the harder pieces. For the general work a dozen spatulas are required, and awls are used for drilling the small mouthpieces.

Some of the whistles, especially the smaller ones, require much skill in their making. One workman is said to be able to turn out about three specimens a day, which shows the difficulty of the work.

NEW STAR FOR AMERICAN FLAG.

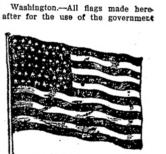
Since July 4 Emblem Contains Forty-Six in the Field.

Washington.—All flags made hereafter for the use of the government will contain 46 stars in the field or union to conform in number to the states. The additional star follows the admission of Oklahoma to the family of states, an act of congress in the early part of the nineteenth century requiring that on the admission of a new state one star is to be added to the flag, to take effect on the July 4 next succeeding such admission. Oklahoma came into the union November 16 last.



American Flag Up-to-Date.

The 46 stars are to be in six rows; the first, third, fourth and sixth rows to have eight stars, and the second and fifth rows seven stars each. The stars rest on a blue field. A great many American flags now flying from public buildings will have to be altered to meet the new conditions.

REALLY AFRAID TO BE LUCKY.

One Man of Superstitions Who Is Bound to Be Unhappy.

"It's bad enough to be superstitious in any case," said the man who is, "but there are some uncomfortable home-made superstitions which I can't get rid of.

"For instance, when I'm bound up town in a hurry and get into the subway to take an express train I am always afraid that I'm not going to get what I'm after, if I catch just the train I want right away. If I want to go up on Lenox avenue and the first train along is a Lenox avenue express, I take it with a haunting fear that things are breaking too well for me right at the start for success in my errand.

"Then, again, when I come home, if I dip into my pocket and get the right key for the outside door the first time, I feel afraid that something will be wrong when I get inside. Now most persons would think that I ought to be pleased with being lucky like that, but I always reason it out the other way.

"Come to think of it, thus far I haven't really suffered by these minor successes at the start. But—" and he knocked on the wooden edge of the table at which they were sitting.—New York Sun.

ODD NAMES OF BRITISH INNS.

Tourist Recorded Some That Were Especially Striking.

The little inns which we passed going from London to Scotland, and even the wine shops, gloried in the pretentious names which were generally displayed in illustrated signs hanging on brackets. We had great fun in watching these old signs and writing down some of the most unusual. "We passed "The Red Bull," and in neighborly proximity "The Red Cow" and "The Dun Cow." Sir John Barleycorn" was near enough to hear "The Five Bells," and just beyond this, as if not to be outdone in the bell line, the proprietor of one inn called his place "The Ring o' Bells." Later we passed "The Easy Chair" and "Wait for the Wagon," "The Nag's Head," "The Spread Eagle," and down near the end of the list we had recorded "The Black Boy" and "The Head, Hand and Stomach."—Frank Presbrey, in Outing Magazine.

Resistance of Snow.

During certain government experiments at Washington with reference to the effects of sudden pressures, attention was called to a singular experience, which sometimes happens to people who go shooting in winter. If the muzzle of a gun happens to become plugged with a little snow, the gun invariably bursts when fired in that condition. Light as the plug of snow is, it requires a definite time for a finite pressure, however great, to get it under way, and during this short time the tension of the powder gases becomes so great that the barrel of the ordinary fowling piece is unable to withstand it.

Test for Hydrochloric Acid.

A curious mishap has given us a very delicate test for hydrochloric acid in the atmosphere. In a North of England locality many houses have curtains of the cream color produced by metanil yellow—popularly known as "dolly" cream dye and to science as "the sodium salt of meta-amido-benzine sulphonic acid-azo-diphenylamine." Some of these cream-colored curtains suddenly changed to heliotrope. Investigation showed that an accidental escape of hydrochloric acid from a neighboring alkali plant had discolored the curtains and the dye became a most useful test.

The girl who hid stolen money beside a tombstone and was captured a few minutes after is likely to be superstitious about cemeteries henceforth.

Lincoln, Neb.—Mrs. Bryan, the wife of William Jennings Bryan, Democratic candidate for president of the United States, shares every confidence, and is on all occasions a most reliable helpmeet by her husband's side. The home life of Mr. and Mrs. Bryan truthfully demonstrates the old adage, "The twain are one."

Mrs. Bryan is not only a home-maker, but a home-keeper, and manages the daily routine at Fairview with utmost system. Whatever interruptions are crowded into the day, the household machinery remains unchanged and Mrs. Bryan always maintains a calm exterior.

It always has been Mrs. Bryan's fervent ambition to keep abreast with her husband's intellectual progress. This she has accomplished, and in doing so gives example by precept, for she has studied side by side with Mr. Bryan in every phase of life's problem in which he has at any time been interested. When Mr. Bryan decided upon law as his profession, then it was that he took one step in advance of Mrs. Bryan, but it was not to be for long, for when Mrs. Bryan came to Lincoln she immediately began a course of law studies, and after graduating was admitted to practice in all courts of the state. When asked why she studied such a dry, musty subject as "law," she modestly declared it was just because she did not want Mr. Bryan to become conversant with a subject of which she was ignorant. She said the course was really easy and any woman who has the time could do as she has done.

Mrs. Bryan leads a very active and busy life, but having everything so well systematized, manages to keep ahead of her work. She has for a number of years had entire charge of Mr. Bryan's personal correspondence and has been what he calls his "confidential secretary." Just now Mr. Bryan's official stenographer, who has helped in previous campaigns, is a resident at Fairview, but this does not relieve Mrs. Bryan from looking after Mr. Bryan's private correspondence. She takes up the consideration of the mail immediately after breakfast, which, by the way, is a very early meal for Mrs. Bryan, as she is usually about the house planning various lines of work and outlining her duties for the day at five o'clock in the morning. Mr. Bryan dictates his letters to Mrs. Bryan and as a rule his editorials. Mrs. Bryan did not attempt to learn any defined system of shorthand when first undertaking this work, but immediately arranged a contracted system of her own, which she has found to be adequate in every way. About five years ago she began using the typewriter and now has become such a rapid operator she frequently takes dictation direct on the machine.

Mrs. William J. Bryan.

Mr. Bryan's mail does not comprise all that is received at Fairview, for Mrs. Bryan herself daily receives more letters than any other woman in the land, unless it should be the wife of President Roosevelt. Everybody who has any sort of a question to ask, concludes at once Mrs. Bryan is the proper person to whom to apply.

Mrs. Bryan is an ardent church worker, giving according to her means, and always lending her influence to the smaller organizations where it is most needed. When she moved to Fairview she attended the little church at Normal, but lately a mission church was established in South Lincoln and she and her husband severed their connection with the fashionable First church of the city and placed their names on the membership roll of the new organization, known as Westminster church.

Mrs. Bryan is dearly loved by all who serve her, and though often troubled in securing competent help, she is always able to retain her household servants.

She has a masterful personality, the influence of which is far-reaching. She possesses a large degree of tactfulness, which is not assumed, for Mrs. Bryan is always perfectly natural, and one always sees her as she really is. Her manner is cordial, and when conversing her face lights up with a smile which makes her at once seem a friend.

CHINESE PIGEON WHISTLES,

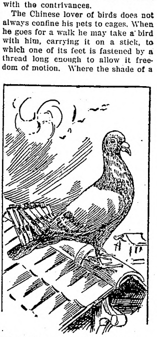
Queer Contrivances by Which Aerial Concerts Are Produced.

Among the curious objects included in the Chinese collection recently obtained for the American Museum of Natural History by Dr. Berthold Laufer are samples of the whistles by means of which music-loving Chinese obtain pleasing melodies from flocks of pigeons whose tails are adorned with the contrivances.

The Chinese lover of birds does not always confine his pets to cages. When he goes for a walk he may take a bird with him, carrying it on a stick, to which one of its feet is fastened by a thread long enough to allow it freedom of motion. Where the shade of a tree invites him to rest he permits the bird to perch on a twig, watching it hour after hour.



Chinese Pigeon with Musical Whistles.

Another curious expression of the pleasure Chinese find in pets is the application of whistles to a whole flock of pigeons. These whistles are attached to the tails of young pigeons soon after their birth by means of fine copper wire and when the birds fly the wind blowing through the whistles produces a melodious open-air concert, for the instruments in one flock are all tuned differently. In Pekin, where these instruments are manufactured with great cleverness and ingenuity, it is even possible to enjoy this aerial music while sitting in one's room.

In spite of the seemingly large variety of whistles there are but two distinct types—those consisting of oblong bamboo tubes placed side by side, and those consisting of tubes attached to a gourd body or wind chest. They are lacquered in yellow, brown, red and black. The tube whistles have two or three or else five tubes. In some specimens the five tubes are made of horn instead of bamboo.

As to the materials and implements used in the manufacture of pigeon whistles, there are small gourds that serve for the bodies; halves of large gourds of a particular species imported from Shantung to Pekin for this special industry, from which stoppers are made that fit into them, and four kinds of bamboo, cylindrical pieces of a large species that grows in the south, for making the mouthpieces of the large tubes; thin sticks for making those of the small ones, hard bamboo for the large tubes themselves, and a soft kind for smaller ones.

The separate pieces are fastened together by means of fish glue. A razor-like knife is used for splitting the bamboo sticks and a chisel to break the harder pieces. For the general work a dozen spatulas are required, and awls are used for drilling the small mouthpieces.

Some of the whistles, especially the smaller ones, require much skill in their making. One workman is said to be able to turn out about three specimens a day, which shows the difficulty of the work.

NEW STAR FOR AMERICAN FLAG.

Since July 4 Emblem Contains Forty-Six in the Field.

Washington.—All flags made hereafter for the use of the government will contain 46 stars in the field or union to conform in number to the states. The additional star follows the admission of Oklahoma to the family of states, an act of congress in the early part of the nineteenth century requiring that on the admission of a new state one star is to be added to the flag, to take effect on the July 4 next succeeding such admission. Oklahoma came into the union November 16 last.

American Flag Up-to-Date.

The 46 stars are to be in six rows; the first, third, fourth and sixth rows to have eight stars, and the second and fifth rows seven stars each. The stars rest on a blue field. A great many American flags now flying from public buildings will have to be altered to meet the new conditions.

WHAT THE ATLANTIC FLEET SAILORS SAW THERE

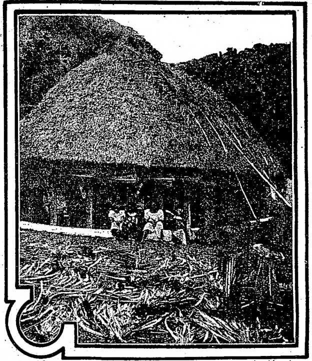
THE EXECUTIVE BUILDING, HONOLULU.



NATIVES OF PAGO PAGO, SAMOA WITH PALM THATCHED HUT

IN Hawaii and Samoa sailors of the Atlantic fleet saw a mid-Pacific paradise peopled by a noble race whose hospitality is a proverb beautifully expressed in their own charming words of greeting, "Aloha" in the Hawaiian islands and "Talofa" in the Samoans, signifying "Love to you," in both languages. Our "alohas" and "talofas" ("howdies" and "halloes") are formal and often hollow and heartless, while those of the Kanakas may be counted on as sincere and heartfelt. Not so much does the paradise consist in shaven lawns, castle homes, and pampered luxury in domestic life, as rather in the simple homes of the natives, in the charming villas of the foreigners nestling in tropical luxuriance, and in a climate of a soft variableness of only ten degrees, never leaping from the rigors of Antarctic to crucible calorics as in the temperate zones, which are often not temperate but excessive in both heat and cold.

When the navy lads entered the harbor of Honolulu they saw to landward a sky-line of peaks and craters, some grim and somber in a mail of ancient lava, others fresh and green with a boskage produced by an unstinted moisture and a tropical warmth. Many of these peaks are extinct craters whose fiery energies ceased in the remote past, and are now grazing lands whose inner bounds are animated with feeding flocks and herds. One of these, known as the "Punch-bowl," forms a stable and lofty background for the beautiful city spread out between it and the sea. But, alas! if there were a thirsty "jacky" among all the boys, this crateriform punch bowl contains not even so much as a "drop-of-the-crater,"—only an occasional herder's cot, whose occupants, all unconscious of the bustling city not far away, are familiar with the note of the quail and the plover and the vanishing song of the sky-lark.

When the boys went ashore and into this mid-ocean metropolis they found few remains of aboriginal conditions. They found everything up-to-date; the streets regular, broad, and well paved; the buildings substantial and modern. Electricity illumines the streets and the street-cars. Beautiful mansions and costly villas are hidden among bowers of tropical trees and shrubs. Avenues of tall royal palms sway their fronds against the sky, and vistas of cocoanut palms lead the way to cottages away from the thoroughfares. Artistically trimmed lawns and hedges and well-kept gardens meet the eye at every turn. Ornamental flower-beds furnish the necessary color in the prodigality of tropical green. Gorgeous hibiscus spangles the hedge rows, and the pomegranate in fruit and bloom presents a novelty to unfamiliar eyes from northern latitudes. The churches have donned the hederal gowns as in European countries.

Many sampled the national dish called poi, a favorite comestible curiously made and partaken of with great zest at the Hawaiian "Luau" or feast. Poi is made from the bulb of a water plant called taro by the natives; it is a plant of the arum family resembling the calla lily; it has an oblong root, which, when baked and mashed, forms a glutinous paste without much taste, except to an educated poi-palate; however, Jack tried the poi.

Before he got clear of the landing place to enter the city he saw the flower sellers who work special kinds of flowers into various fantastic decorative ornaments such as wreaths and hat-bands. The Kanakas are a musical and flower-loving people; and the boys were not many hours in the insular capital before they had evidence of their musical bent and at least a commercial love of flowers. They were also reminded how different peoples by some circumstance of fortuity are led into a peculiar personal habit of decoration, the Japanese and Manchurian women into giving chief attention to fantastic and elaborate coiffure, the Chinese to "lily-feet;" the women of other nations into loading their arms and ankles with bracelets and anklets, others again into trimming the ears and nose with rings.

Rice fields were familiar to boys from some of our southern states, but they were a novelty to those from the north who know rice only in a rice-pudding; the sugar cane plantation recalled the fields of fodder-corn on the northern home farm. Instead of the chestnuts, beech nuts, butter nuts of a northerner's boyhood be found chiefly.

If the boy from the fleet could not find his accustomed muskmelon with which to slake a tropical thirst, he found an excellent substitute in the succulent and well pepsinized pawpaw, a wonderfully wholesome and refreshing tree fruit, plantations of which he saw in the immediate suburbs of Honolulu. He did not look for apples as a native product, but in lieu thereof he indulged his frugiverous instincts on oranges, mangoes, pomegranates, guaves, and the finest pineapple in the world, some of which exceed ten pounds in weight. Some visited the great pineapple plantations a few miles out of the city.

Having mentioned a few of the many interesting places and things that the boys of the fleet saw in this delightful mid-ocean territory, let us pass on to another. When they took leave of Honolulu they had a sail of 2,270 miles a little each of south, before they were greeted by the "talofas" of our most southern wards in the south Pacific, the natives of the Samoan islands. These islands are nearly 1,000 miles south of the equator, and I do not recall that we can claim a foot of territory in the southern hemisphere barring the island of Tutuila and its insular appendages. The two latter islands of the group belong to Germany. It is just 140 years since this group was first visited by Europeans; but it is claimed by apparent authority that they were first peopled about 800 years ago, and strange to say, by people from the island of Sumatra, some 50 of whom had set out in crazy old canoes in search of some imaginary devil whom they wished to destroy. After wandering over the illiminate Pacific for long, weary months—touching at the Philippines and at the Hawaiian islands, they finally reached the Samoans.

It is claimed that the Samoans are the finest native race in the world. The boys of the fleet saw a fine type of an aboriginal in the Kanaka of the Hawaiians and here again they saw another branch of the same racial tree; but it is difficult sometimes to reconcile all the theories as to origins of primal races; it has been claimed also that the aborigines of Australia came from Sumatra; the Australian, the lowest aboriginal known, and the Samoan the highest, both from the same parent stock about the same time. It appears a little awkward historically. We will leave that matter with the ethnologist. Our sailors saw for themselves that the typical Samoan is generally a fine specimen of physical development and possesses pleasing, moral qualities.

Most people remember how the island of Tutuila came into the possession of the United States in 1899 with some unimportant surrounding islets; and will recall also the international squabble involving England, Germany, and the United States, as to whether Mataafa or Malietoa Laupepa should be king. England withdrew and the home governments compromised on an agreement that the islands should be divided between Germany and the United States, the latter taking over the island of Tutuila which contains the small but fine harbor of Pago Pago.

The island of Tutuila is 17 miles in length and three or four in width, and the inlet constituting the harbor of Pago Pago is about two miles in length and a half mile in width, surrounded by heavily wooded mountains.

The native people with warm brown skin, their houses without any inclosing walls and with palm-thatched roofs, most attracted the attention of the naval lads. The typical Samoan must not be judged by the "beach" types who are generally menialized by contact with travelers and sea-faring men. The true characteristics of the Samoan, as in other parts of the world, must be sought among the rural folks, and this can only be done during a prolonged sojourn. A foreigner need have no fear in penetrating the interior; he is quite safe and even welcomed with a sincere "talofa." The tapo or belle of the village kindly receives him, and most likely presents him with a cup of their favorite beverage called Kava. Poi, as already mentioned, is a national dish with the Kanaka, which the fleet boys sampled; at Pago Pago they tried the Samoan national drink. Although the tapo be fair as fairness goes in Samoa, and also be the daughter of a chief or family of high rank as she usually is, and although womanhood generally is here of a vigorous order, the well known gallantry of over sea warriors was hardly equal to a cup of the refreshing Kava after the process of manufacture became known. Kava is made from the root of the plant Piper methysticum, and its chemistry involves a rather unusual manipulation, or I should rather say, mastication. The prettiest maids are selected for Kava making; they are seated around a huge wooden bowl; the green or dry Kava root is cut into small pieces; and after the girls have been required to rinse out their mouths, they all proceed to chew the sliced root. As fast as thoroughly chewed it is stored up in their cheeks, chipmunk fashion, until the fullness becomes burdensome, when they disgorge into the wooden bowl until sufficient has been chewed for the company present. This finely comminuted pulp is diluted with water and stirred with a bunch of roots, and delivered in a cocoanut cup, first to the most important guest, who drinks and spins the empty cup back to be refilled for the next in point of rank, and so on. There were few boys in the fleet polite enough, gallant enough, brave enough, to drink Kava with the Samoan lassies. Talofa Samoa!

BEWARE! END OF THE WORLD ONLY 12,000,000 YEARS AWAY!

High Browed Scientists Have It All Worked Out—"Things Are in a Bad Way," Warns Adherent of Nebular Hypothesis—World's Center Giving Forth Warmth May Save Us for a Time, But Ultimate Destruction Is Inevitable, Wise Ones Say.

REASONING from the principles of the pretty generally accepted nebular hypothesis the end of the world is to be reached very gradually through the increasing reign of cold and the lengthening of the earth's day. For it is evident that the sun cannot keep on radiating heat at the present rate, or, indeed, at any rate, forever. As Lord Kelvin has well said, we know that the sun is cooling off just as certainly as we should know that a hot stone which we encountered in a field was cooling off, though we had not seen it long enough to measure the rate of its cooling. Heat is not a permanent quality of any known object. The sun must be losing its heat, and hence in time will become a cold and lifeless object.

IT WILL NOT ALWAYS BE THUS!!!

If things continue to go on as they now do, astronomers tell us, the sun will lose its life-giving heat long before 12,000,000 years have elapsed. Like all other cooling bodies, the sun must be diminishing in size. Its diameter must be contracting. Newcomb estimates that in less than 5,000,000 years the sun's diameter will contract to one-half its present length, so that the sun will occupy only one-eighth of the space it now occupies. It is hardly possible for it after that to continue to furnish as much heat as it does now, but it must then cool off with great rapidity.

This reasoning is based on the supposition that the sun is not yet a solid body, but is so hot that its mass is still in a gaseous state. But the force of gravity upon the sun is so great that the gas is compressed into a much smaller proportionate compass than it is on the earth. The force of gravity on the surface of the sun is 27 times that on the earth, so that a man weighing 150 pounds on the earth would weigh nearly two tons on the sun. So great is this pressure of gravity on the gases of the sun that are they reduced to one-quarter the density of the solid nucleus of the earth. But so long as the nucleus of the sun continues to be gaseous it will continue to grow hotter as it diminishes in size. So soon, however, as it loses sufficient heat to allow the material to take on the solid form, a crust will be formed and the radiating heat will rapidly diminish. Probably, also, the heat radiated will diminish long before that time, even though the sun is growing hotter, because of the diminishing size of the globe.

The only way that the astronomers can see to avoid this slow paralysis of the sun, and so of the whole solar system, is that lately proposed by Prof. Langley in a sensational article depicting what would happen if a dark world moving at an incredible speed in space should come so near our sun that the two would collide. In this case the original heat of the sun might be restored, but the catastrophe would practically produce such an expansion of its volume and such an increase of its radiating power that everything on the earth would be burned up, producing about such phenomena as are described by the Apostle Peter. Indeed, the resemblance between the words of the apostle and the theory of the Washington astronomer was as striking as it was unexpected, so much so that some readers may not know from which source the following quotation is taken:

"The heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall be dissolved with fervent heat, and the earth and the works therein shall be burned up."

But the suggestion of the astronomer was pure speculation. There are no apparent signs of any such approaching catastrophe as Dr. Langley suggests as possible. At any rate, we may settle down to the conclusion that so far as astronomical forces are concerned the present order of things will not be disturbed for three or four million years.

But an equally gloomy prospect is before the world in the distant future from another cause which is in slow operation. The length of the earth's day is slowly increasing through the retarding influence of the tides produced by the moon. To be sure, this effect is so slight that it has not been directly perceptible since accurate methods of measuring the time of the earth's revolution on its axis have been observed. But that it must be taking place is as sure as that friction will stop a railroad train when the steam is turned off.

The tides raised by the moon's attraction are distributed by the continents so as to present many anomalies, but when considered in themselves they act the same as a wave three feet high constantly running in an opposite direction to the revolution of the earth, and so by friction retarding its motion. Astronomers are agreed that similar tides produced on the moon have reduced her revolution on her axis to a period of 28 days. Eventually the revolution of the earth will be reduced so that our day will be several times longer than now. When that time comes the nights will be so cold that nothing can stand it, and if they could the days will be so hot that what was left by the cold would be destroyed by the heat. But that time, also, is so far in the future that the present generation may put it out of their minds. This catastrophe will not arrive for many million years yet. Indeed, before that time arrives the sun will have become so far cooled off that we shall be indifferent to everything else that happens.

Another limit to the future of the habitable portion of the earth is brought to light by the rapid progress of erosion that is going on all over the land surface of the world. Wallace estimates that one foot of the earth's surface is, on the average, washed away by the streams every 3,000 years and deposited at the bottom of the ocean. This amounts to more than 300 feet in a million years. As the main elevation of North America is 748 feet, and that of Europe 671 feet, it follows that by the operation of present forces Europe will be washed into the sea in 2,000,000 years, and America in 3,000,000 years. What providence has in store for us after that, no man knows. If the sunken portion shall rise at the end of that period, as it did at the end of the coal period, there will be dry land to live on, but it is doubtful if it have such stores of iron and coal as have blessed the present race of human beings.

There are two other sources of heat to which we may look with much confidence and hope. It was more than a dream of Ericsson to invent an engine which could be run by collecting the direct rays of the sun through immense sun-dials, thus generating the heat necessary to set in motion the wheels of industry. But the successful carrying out of his plans would necessitate the transfer of our great manufacturing centers to the rainless regions of the world where perpetual sunshine prevails. It, therefore, will not be impossible that the desert of Sahara and the sandy wastes of Central Asia shall in the future usurp the place now assumed by the localities in proximity to the great coal fields of the world, while the latter become overgrown with briars and brambles like the mounds of many an ancient center of civilization.

Still another possible source from which we may draw infinite quantities of heat and power is to be found in the heated center of the earth. As we descend below the surface of the earth, the temperature rises on an average of one degree in 60 feet. At a depth of two miles, therefore, the temperature of boiling water would be reached, and at a depth of five miles a temperature of more than 400 degrees. It would, therefore, not seem by any means impossible to bore into the earth deep enough to make a portion of its heat available for all ordinary purposes.

The world, however, is concerned with impending catastrophes nearer at hand. The prosperity of the present time is largely due to the rapidity with which we are using up the reserved stores of nature upon or near the surface of the earth.

Thus geology, while it opens up to mankind the stores of good that are buried for safekeeping in the depths of the earth, points to their limited quantity, and calls upon men to use them economically and leave as much as possible for future generations. Wastefulness of these limited stores is a sin. At the same time it gives the philosophical student of history a sobering view of the destiny of man. Nothing is more certain than that man has not been always on the earth, and that he is not always to stay here. The world is like a transcontinental railroad train and the human race like a passenger who gets on at one end and has to get off at the other. Out of mystery man came and into mystery he goes. The visible world is a passing show. All that is unchangeable lies in the world of the unseen.

How England Has Held Down India

By ST. NIHAL SING

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

While the educated people of India appear to be content with carrying on wordy warfare over political questions and arraigning the British administrators of Hindostan for inaugurating a reign of terrorism in the country, impending famine is hanging over the heads of the country's 300,000,000 inhabitants. Crops have failed in many sections, and already half-famished Hindoos are face to face with the specter of starvation.

During the latter portion of the British administration of India, famine has followed famine with direful frequency. Within the last 25 years 19,000,000 Hindoos have died of sheer starvation. Grinding poverty is so omnipresent in the country that many millions of East-Indians are perpetually in a half-starved condition. The scarcity of food becomes more pinching and accentuated when times are harder. Then the poor Hindoos, instead of starving inch by inch, are quickly blotted out.

The impoverishment of the masses defies portrayal. It is much uglier, much more poignant and painful than that which is to be found in the Ghettos and poor quarters of American cities. It is estimated that an average East-Indian requires at least a dollar to a dollar and a half a month merely to exist; but since his income is computed by recognized British authorities to be only 50 cents a month, it will be seen that he lives considerably below the poverty line. During the last two years the government has expended out of the revenues collected from the East-Indian tax payers over $130,000,000 in trying to keep the impoverished millions of Hindostan alive. One out of every 16 of the 300,000,000 inhabitants has been in receipt of actual charity relief. This was the case in practically normal years. Now that the scarcity is assuming vaster dimensions and appears to be developing into a colossal famine, a greater proportion of the people will have to be saved at the expense of the public.

The abnormal poverty has augmented the death rate. Figures collected from official records show that mortality has increased from 25 per 1,000 to 35 per 1,000 within the past ten years. Chronic starvation has led to the propagation of cholera and plague to such a fearful extent that during the last decade 5,000,000 East-Indians have perished from the latter.

In such desperate straits the masses of India find themselves to-day. The very existence of the farmer, the artisan, the workingman, the laborer by day or month, the petty business man and the clerk, is in serious jeopardy through famine and plague.

---

That India should be sunk in the mire of fearful and agonizing poverty is no cause for wonder. For two centuries or more India has been in the position of a pig, whose throat has been slit, and the animal hung up by the heels to permit the blood to drain from its body. Hindostan has been bled—bled profusely, unmercifully, continuously by a conscienceless and mercenary alien government. The knife thrusts have been directed toward the most vital parts of the body politic. The arteries of industry, manufacture and agriculture have been slashed and the life-blood of the country drained away to enrich the occidental island which controls affairs in India.

---

It was a company of British commercialists who founded the British rule in India. To students of history it is patent how the British monopolists, under the aegis of British East-India Company, used notorious and unscrupulous methods to plunder Hindostan. When the British crown took the reins of India in her hands in 1858, the policy of governing India remained unchanged. As in the days of the East-India Company, it continued to be the exploitation of Hindostan for the benefit of the English. It still continues to be the same.

As an essential feature of this policy of repression, England has ceaselessly endeavored, and with great success, to keep fanning the flames of religious and racial animosities among the people. Divide and rule has been the motto of the British official in India, and he has done everything in his power to keep the congeries of East-Indian populace from fusing into one mass of people with a community of interest and with patriotic, nationalist ideals and ambitions. By means of playing the Hindoo against the Mohammedan, the Sikh against the Hindoo; by petting the military races of India and leaguing them against the non-military East-Indians, 150,000 Britishers have despoiled 300,000,000 natives.

The same policy is responsible for emasculating the people in general and the martial races of India in particular. An arms act has been enforced which has made it impossible for the natives of the land to carry weapons or learn to defend themselves with skill and success. The manhood of India has been cauterized to such a fearful extent that the British recruiting officer is finding that it is almost impossible to fill the ranks of the native soldiers who drop out of the army through death, resignation and desertion.

A spurious system of education retailed from schools and universities built and engineered by British officials, with East-Indian money, has also been used to weaken the people. The young men on graduation from college have found that their physiques have been ruined. Physical culture has been conspicuous in the educational system by its woeful absence. The instruction has been of a nature that has invested the young men and women with a contempt for agricultural and trade work; and has engendered within their hearts a hatred for men and women of sects and castes other than their own. Nothing has been taught in the schools and colleges that would tend toward uniting the people and evolving an East-Indian nation. The history of India has not been given so that it would stimulate the pride of the people and invest them with the desire to emulate those who have gone before them and to keep abreast of the march of civilization. In the school text books emphasis has been laid on the achievements of foreigners; on what aliens did for India; and much has been made of the degradation in general, and especially of the defeat at arms of native East Indians when combating the aggression of the greedy Britishers.

The universities were established in India with a purely economic motive. "The nation of shopkeepers" started the educational system with a view to prepare East-Indian young men to fill the lower ranks in government service. The native agency being as efficient and much cheaper than the British, was given preference. Moreover, the occidentals, unacquainted with the language, customs, religions and modes of life of the natives, and with a very poor capacity for adjusting themselves to the climate and other conditions prevailing in India, and for learning languages, could not carry on the plunder of the country without the assistance of the natives.

That altruistic motives were not responsible for the establishment of schools and colleges in India by the British government is evident for many reasons. The first and foremost is the sad insufficiency of schoolhouses and teachers in India. Four-fifths of the East-Indian villages are without a school. After a century and a half of British administration, more than 99 per cent. of East-Indian women and 90 per cent. of Hindoo men are utterly illiterate. To show the contrast, it may be mentioned that in less than one-fourth of the time the little kingdom of the mikado has been able to educate its masses almost to the extent of those living in wide-awake occidental countries. Another and a very powerful proof of the sordid motives with which the educational policy was framed and engineered in India is that the British authorities have done practically nothing to train the natives in the use of up-to-date farm and manufacturing machinery and methods. The East-Indian agriculturist and artisan have been allowed to play with their industries in their old-fashioned ways.

While the education has been of a nature which has utterly failed to modernize the people and render them capable of employing the new methods of tilling land and making articles of merchandise, the law has been so made and administered that the people have been reduced to the state of hewers of wood and drawers of water, and their industries have withered and died. The policy of England has been to force India to remain a producer of raw materials, for the benefit of British laborers and manufacturers.

England's repression of India is unrivaled in the history of the world. As a direct result of the mal-administration of Hindostan the people are sunk in poverty, superstition and ignorance, festered with plagues and famines, weak in mind and body. From the standpoint of unity, the teeming millions of India are the worst situated in the world.

But the most heart-rending feature of British exploitation is that the people have been kept under a state of hypnosis for such a long time that only a small percentage of them are alive to the seriousness of the situation. But the educated community is increasingly awakening to a full realization of the white man's purpose and work in India, and this awakening is developing into a revolutionary attitude toward the Britisher.

Famines and plagues are wielding their combined influence in breaking the crust of fatalism native to the East-Indian. The wolf of hunger and the fell epidemics are slowly but steadily making the ignorant millions pause and consider that something is positively wrong in the "system." They have not yet come into a realization that their country has been woefully bled and that the resources of the land have been misappropriated by foreigners. Their awakening is yet in its infant stage. It is hazy and undefined and as yet a mere speck on the horizon. But it is fast developing, and as the educated East-Indians have commenced an aggressive campaign for the uplift of the masses, it is destined to assume greater proportions day by day. Where it is to end, no one can prophesy.

They shall report as part of such tabular statement the damages awarded to each municipal or other corporation for injury to any road or roads and from the necessary construction and maintenance of any bridge, culverts or other works rendered necessary by the establishment of said ditch, stating the same separately. They shall also report the total estimated benefits in respect to said ditch, entire and branches thereof, if any; and also, whether or not in their opinion the estimated expense of the construction of said ditch, including the damages assessed therefor, is greater than the utility of said proposed ditch, and whether or not said proposed ditch is impracticable for any reason, and if so, stating the reason why it should not be constructed. ## POOR BUSINESS FOR MINISTER.

Marriage Ceremony Left him Something Out of Pocket.

Several years ago Rev. Mr. G—— was one of the leading Baptist clergymen in one of our Eastern cities. One Sunday evening after the usual service a couple came up to him and asked if he would marry them. He agreed to, and the ceremony was performed without incident. After the usual blessing the newly married couple went down the aisle toward the door. When they reached the entrance, however, something seemed suddenly to occur to the bridegroom, for he left the bride and came back to the pulpit where the minister was, and said:

"Parson, I haven't got any money to pay for this job, so I'll be glad if you will trust me. I'll pay you as soon as I get the money."

"All right," replied Mr. G——. "Pay me whenever it is convenient," and the man again started for the door.

A second time he came back, this time to say:

"Parson, it's raining. Excuse me, but will you lend me 50 cents so we can get home? I can't take her out in this rain, you know."

He got the 50 cents.

BEAUTIES OF A FLY BLISTER.

Clearly They Must Be Experienced to Be Appreciated.

The Marshfield News tells how Herman Bauer treated himself for pain in the back. Instead of forgetting it Mr. Bauer slapped a Spanish fly blister on his person. A fly blister is a good deal like hiring a butcher to skin you. In about five minutes it set up a conflagration on Herman like a fire in a paint shop.

He at once separated himself from the plaster, but the latter left its warm, cheery influence behind. There was no let up to the pain it gave him. At three in the morning it was still burning like a coal of fire, and, unable to stand it any longer, he telephoned for his family doctor, who happened to be eight miles out in the country. Herman now imagined he could smell burning flesh. Daylight brought the doctor, who with proper solutions soon got the fire under control. There is a spot on Herman's back about the size of a wool hat, but the other pain has quit.

If you must put a fly blister on somebody, put it on the baby. He will holler, anyhow. Or on the policeman. —Minneapolis Journal.

First English Pawnbroker a Bishop.

No one would guess that "Uncle" had so illustrious an ancestor as a right reverend prelate, yet this seems to be so, for pawnbroking was first introduced into England by Michael de Northburg, bishop of London, in Edward III.'s reign. He set up an establishment for lending money to the poorer Londoners on portable property, and according to Dugdale if any sum so borrowed was not paid at the expiration of a year the preacher at St. Paul's Cross was to announce that the pledge would be sold unless previously redeemed.—Pearson's Weekly.

Teacher—Your composition is very good, my dear, but I don't understand the title you have given it. Why "Afterward"—that name has nothing to do with it.

Small Scholar—You told us to.

Small Scholar—Yes, ma'am; you said we must write a description of our Saturday and name it afterward!

Milk and Water.

A Scottish farmer one day called to a farm lad: "Here, Tam, gang roon and gee the coos a cabbage each, but min' ye gie the biggest to the coo that gies the maist milk."

The boy departed to do his bidding, and on his return the farmer asked him if he had done as he was told.

"Aye, maister," replied the lad. "I gied 'em a' cabbage each, and hung the biggest een on the pump handle."

Post-Graduate Work.

"When you graduate from that cooking school," asked Tess, "do you get a diploma?"

"Sometimes," replied Jess, "you get a certificate for a post-graduate course."

"A certificate?"

"Yes, a marriage certificate."

FERGUSON'S BEAT

By F. D. BENNETT

(Copyright, by Shortstory Pub. Co.)

Every eye in the courtroom was fixed upon Richard Ferguson, reporter for the Morning Post. The young journalist stood facing the judge in silence.

It was the second time in a single day that Ferguson had emerged conspicuously from the ranks of his profession. The first occasion was in the morning when he scored a "beat" for his paper on the conviction of an accused millionaire, the events of whose sensational trial had filled columns of the press for many days. The jury had deliberated for three days and two nights and the defendant's fate had not been decided until the early hours of the morning.

The verdict was sealed and the envelope containing it had been left in the court vault. Yet the judge had read in his morning paper, two hours before he appeared in his chambers, the result of the jury's deliberation, the number of ballots taken and the way the jurors stood at each vote.

So positive had been the announcement in Ferguson's paper that there was no room for belief that he had made a lucky guess. His report was so accurate that it made the reading of the real verdict a farce. The judge looked sternly at the reporter, whom he had known for years.

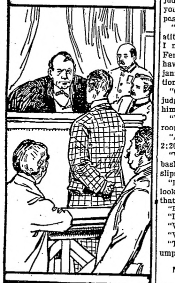
"Did you write that article?" asked the court.

"I did, your honor."

"I shall demand a full explanation of you, and perhaps of other persons," —the judge was severe now—"for there is something radically wrong here. I cannot cite you for contempt until I know more of the case. Do you object to replying to my questions?"

"Not in the least," replied Ferguson, in the best of spirits.

Representatives of the other papers had permitted admiration to take the place of envy and they crowded closer, in anticipation of hearing something interesting. The jury was present, all of the court officers were on hand, and even the night janitor had come in response to a hasty summons.



"Did You Write That?" Demanded the Judge.

"What has occurred this morning," began the judge, slowly, "is an imposition on this tribunal. These 12 gentlemen, pledged to secrecy by their oath, the bailiff in charge of the jury, and the officers who guarded the jury room are under a pall of suspicion.

"In some manner a representative of the press has obtained information from the sacred precincts of the jury room. Some person or persons must be guilty of contempt, if not a more serious charge.

"A point arises here which it has been my fortune never to have encountered personally before. There are limits to the latitude which newspapers can demand. Mr. Ferguson has expressed his willingness to answer truthfully the questions which I shall put to him."

The silence was oppressive, and the crowd surged against the rail, leaning over to catch every word that was uttered.

"Mr. Ferguson," the judge began again, "I know that you did not guess at this verdict?"

"I did not."

"Will you read the marked portion of this newspaper clipping and tell us if these are the words you wrote?"

Ferguson picked up the paper and read: "The first ballot was eight for conviction and four for acquittal; the second ballot was ten for conviction and two for acquittal; the third was the same, and at the fourth Juror Stephenson alone held out against capital punishment. Not until the fifth ballot did the jury agree to send the accused millionaire to the gallows."

"Did you write that?" demanded the judge, leaning far over the bench until he could look squarely into Ferguson's face.

"I did."

"When did you learn of these facts?"

"About 2:25 this morning. I barely had time to reach the office and write it for the last edition of the paper."

"Did any of the jurymen tell you what had transpired in their room?"

"No, your honor."

"Did you contrive to overhear their deliberations and arguments?"

"That would have been impossible through an ante-room and three doors. I did not learn it in that way."

"Did any of the bailiffs give you information?"

"No, sir."

"Did you tamper with the envelope?"

"I did not."

"Who told you, then?"

"No one."

The judge was perplexed. He knew that Ferguson told the truth, and that he was endeavoring to keep the source of his information a secret. Suddenly an inspiration came to him and he smiled because he had not thought of it before.

"Did somebody write you the information?" The court was sure that this would bring the desired result.

"No one wrote it for me," replied Ferguson, "and no human being gave me the information."

A stir went through the courtroom at this announcement and the judge seemed completely baffled.

"Would you so state under oath?"

"Under oath, yes, sir," echoed Ferguson. "No one knew those details at that hour but the jurymen and myself, and I may add that I have not exchanged a word, letter or signal with any of these 12 gentlemen."

The foreman of the jury was called before the bar.

"Mr. Tillotson," said the judge, pointing at Ferguson, "Have you seen this man before?"

"Yes, your honor, during the trial."

"Did you speak or communicate with him since the verdict was agreed upon or sealed?"

"I did not, and I can safely vouch for my colleagues, also."

"Well, then, Mr. Ferguson," said the judge, turning to the reporter, "will you kindly explain how you came into possession of this information?"

"I could refuse to answer on constitutional grounds—on the plea that I might incriminate myself," replied Ferguson. "I will not do that, but I have a favor to ask. May I put to the janitor of the courthouse three questions?"

"Certainly," assented the astonished judge, and he called the janitor before him.

"When did you clean out the jury room?" asked Ferguson.

"As soon as the jury left it—about 2:20 this morning," was the response.

"Where did you empty the waste basket containing the jury's ballot slips?"

"In the alley, sir." The janitor looked apprehensive, as if he feared that he was about to get into trouble.

"Did you see a man out there?"

"I did."

"What did he look like?"

"Very much like you, sir."

"That's all," replied Ferguson, triumphantly.

MORE THAN HE DESERVED.

Careless Husband Tells of Experience with Wife's Money.

Frank J. Reed, general passenger agent at Chicago of the Monon railroad, was in Indianapolis the other day, telling a good story on himself. It had to do with his wife's bank account. "A couple of months ago," he said, "I was about to leave the house when my wife handed me her bankbook with $300 to deposit for her. I promised to attend to the matter promptly.

"I went down to my office and forgot all about the errand I had promised to perform. Three weeks later Mrs. Reed said to me that she had some more money to put in the bank, and inquired what I had done with her book. My mind was a blank on the subject, but I lamely suggested that perhaps I had left it at the bank to be balanced. With fear and trembling I hurried off to the bank to find the book and was startled to learn that it was not there.

"All that I had ever heard about lost letters and careless husbands and such things flashed across my mind. I realized that I would have to make good in some way. Thinking the bankbook and money might be in my desk, I tore off to the office. In throwing off my overcoat I felt a package in one of the pockets. I had the contents of that pocket in my lap in a jiffy. It was my wife's bankbook and her $300 just as snug and safe as if it had been on deposit with the trust company.

"During the three weeks' disappearance of that money I had traveled thousands of miles, checked that overcoat in ten or fifteen different hotels, had it checked in as many checkrooms and barber shops, had it brushed by hotel and Pullman car porters, and had jostled against hundreds of people. All this time that money rested there safely."

"Does Mrs. Reed know about it?" asked another railroad man.

"I should say she does," replied Reed, "and I can't get her to trust me with the mailing of even a postal card."—Indianapolis Star.

FARM and GARDEN

DELIVERING MAIL.

Trolley System for Bringing Letters from the Road.

Where the house stands some distance back from the highway a trolley can be rigged up to save steps in getting the mail, suggests Farm and Home. The box is hung on two pulley door hangers, as shown in cut. A strong post, with a bent arm, is set next the highway, and a wire, a, suspended between it and the house, on which the box runs. A pulley is fastened in, or to, the post, and over it runs a cord, b c, to pull the box back and forth between the house and the road. The box is sent down to meet the carrier, who places the mail in it, and then it is quickly pulled back to the house.

HAY STACKING DEVICE.

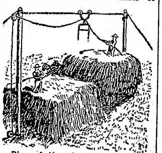
Handy Device That Will Do Good Work Anywhere.

This handy device for stacking hay in the field can be set up anywhere in a very short time. It consists of two telegraph poles, two guy ropes, and an iron rod of cable, on which runs a carrier. By this method, says the Prairie Farmer, one can build as large a stack as he wishes, and do it quicker and better.



Plan of Hay Stacking Derrick.

OYSTER SHELL BARK LOUSE.

It Is a Hard Pest to Fight, But Keep at It—Destroys Shade Trees.

The oyster shell bark louse is a hard customer. Last season two neighbors called my attention to the shade trees in front of their residences. They were seven black ash trees of 15 to 20 years' growth. Three trees were covered with the louse on the trunk and out to the extreme end of the branches. Many of the limbs had died, and two trees had been cut down two years previous, having been killed by the scale.

These trees, explains the writer in Farm and Home, I soon discovered, needed radical treatment in order to be saved in one season, so I decided on one careful application. Making a kerosene emulsion of one to seven strength, arming myself with scrub brushes, a ladder and saw, I started to work as soon as the scales began to lift, which was the first of June. All limbs that were dead or quite sure to die were sawed out to be burned, and the remainder, with the trunk, were scrubbed with the emulsion until all scales were rubbed off.

The work was out of the ordinary method for large trees, but had the desired effect. They started at once into new growth and now are in a very promising condition. The owners were well satisfied to pay for the work. The kerosene emulsion was made of one gallon kerosene, two gallons boiling water and half pound soap, then agitated while hot for ten minutes with a foot pump. By adding five gallons water I had sufficient mixture to go over the seven trees.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

Treat your own family as politely as you do your neighbor Jones.' You live a good deal nearer to them.

If rats are bothering your corn get some wire netting of half-inch mesh and line the corn crib while it is empty.

The man who persists in growing noxious weeds will never sit in the legislature or win prizes at the county fair.

The "man with the hoe" is no longer typical of the farmer. He rides in an auto and plows with one if he wishes.

Sweet clover has some value for pasture, but little for hay. It is of some good as fertilizer or to plow under in thin lands. It grows well on waste lands and is a good thing to hold new hillsides from excessive washing.

Varieties of Soil.

There are more than 500 varieties of soil, and each variety needs just a little different treatment from any other variety of soil. Also each variety has in it a different combination or fertilizers from any other variety. Therefore we have before us a problem worthy of the efforts of the wisest men. The man that best understands the various soils with which he has to work is the man that will generally succeed best in the cultivation of his land. The tendency is to dodge the study of the soil because it is a difficult study.

A PERFECT TERROR.

Horace—Yes, I'm a fearful fellow when I'm roused.

Maud—Really! What time do they waken you?

Politeness.

It was the last day of the term in one of our public kindergartens. The children were all seated around the tables thoroughly enjoying the treat of ice cream which the teacher always provided on this occasion.

Glancing around the room at the beaming faces of the children, the kindergartner noticed one child pick up his plate and lick it.

She went up to him and said in a low tone of voice: "Freddie, put down your plate; it is not polite to pick it up and lick it."

Fred obeyed at once, quietly placing his plate on the table. He then put his head down to the plate and licked it.

Weary Willie's Complaint.

William J. Ryan, president of the supreme council of public hackmen of New York, said the other day that the winter panic had reduced the hackmen's receipts considerably.

"We'll have to come down to English rates—12 cents a mile instead of 50 cents—if we have many more such panics," Mr. Ryan said. "Everybody felt the pinch. I overheard a tramp grumbling in a public square.

"'The trade ain't like it used to be,' he said. 'Here ten times running today I've asked for a bit of bread, and what do they give me? Why, durn it, just a bit o' bread.'"—Exchange.

HEALTH AND INCOME

Both Kept Up on Scientific Food.

Good sturdy health helps one a lot to make money.

With the loss of health one's income is liable to shrink, if not entirely dwindle away.

When a young lady has to make her own living, good health is her best asset.

"I am alone in the world," writes a Chicago girl, "dependent on my own efforts for my living. I am a clerk, and about two years ago through close application to work and a boarding house diet, I became a nervous invalid, and got so bad off it was almost impossible for me to stay in the office a half day at a time.

"A friend suggested to me the idea of trying Grape-Nuts, which I did, making this food a large part of at least two meals a day.

"Today I am free from brain-tire, dyspepsia, and all the ills of an overworked and improperly nourished brain and body. To Grape-Nuts I owe the recovery of my health, and the ability to retain my position and income." "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Costly Popularity.

France's cruiser Leon Gambetta is named after the famous politician, who died on December 31, 1882. In the times of his intense popularity Gambetta had an experience which he was wont to tell against himself. In Paris admirers unyoked his horses and dragged the carriage to his house. Gambetta would narrate this with an air of pride, and he would add, with a smile: "But I never saw my horses again!"

No Running About.

Mrs. Ascum—Why so?

Mrs. Gadder—Why, how can one shop by mail? You can only buy things by mail.

OFFICIAL PAPER of RED LAKE COUNTY

Subscription price, $1.50 per year

Entered at the Post-office in Plummer, Minn. as Second Class Mail Matter.

The Thief River Falls assesor seems to have been the only one in the entire county who took a really optimistic view of the situation when assessing real estate. The county board of equalization raised the valuation in every other district in the county and lowered it one-third in Thief River Falls.

Judge Taft has been officially notified that he was nominated as the Republican candidate for president. He was, of course, very much surprised and pleased. Incidentally he made a few remarks calculated to make one Samuel Gompers think he had been buncoed to some extent by the democrats' acceptance of his injunction plank.

Somebody has started a movement for a county Agricultural school to be established in St. Hilaire. The project will have to be voted on and the voters should know how much it will cost and who will pay the bill. It is also well to find out what advantages such a school will offer over the State Agricultural school at Crookston either as to convenience for the people of Red Lake County or the quality of the instruction given in the agricultural branches.

THE ROUGH DIAMOND

Three Processes Through Which the Uncut Stone Passes.

SPLIT, CUT AND POLISHED.

The Flaws In the Gem Decide the Number of Parts Into Which It Must Be Split—The Difference Between the Roses and the Brilliants.

The first of the three processes through which the rough, uncut diamond has to pass is that of splitting the stone. Men are employed at this task, which is all done by hand without the aid of machinery. It is not a lengthy process unless the stone contains a great many flaws, for an ordinary diamond weighing about ten carats can generally be split in fifteen minutes. The object is to divide the rough, uncut diamond containing flaws into several pure, flawless stones, and in order to do this strong pressure is exerted on the weak spots caused by flaws by means of a diamond tipped tool, which is held in the right hand. It is an old and well recognized principle that "nothing but a diamond will cut a diamond." In the left hand is held a curiously shaped little frame into which the rough diamond now to be split has been firmly fixed. Great pressure is then used on the weak spot, and in a few moments the diamond splits into two portions.

Should there be any more flaws in either of these sections the process is repeated until several pure, flawless diamonds lie on the rough wooden tables of the workmen, ready now for the second process—that of cutting. This process, like the first, is almost entirely performed by hand, but by women and girls instead of men. Only in the case of very hard, difficult stones is machinery necessary, and then men are employed to use it.

The work of diamond cutting is a delicate and difficult task, very trying to the eyes, too, for some of the diamonds are so minute that 400 of them or more may weight only half a carat.

Each worker is responsible for the packet of diamonds she receives at intervals from the forewoman, and if by accident she loses one of the precious stones she has either to find it again or refund its value. The tools employed in diamond cutting are very similar in appearance to those used in diamond splitting. In both cases diamonds are used as knives, after having been firmly fixed into the tip of pear shaped tools. The women hold in the left hand the rough diamond they wish to cut, which has also been firmly fixed into a wooden frame. Little jets of gas are always kept burning on the various tables ready to be used at any moment when melted wax is necessary.

The only real difference in the two processes of diamond splitting and diamond cutting lies in the fact that whereas the men who split the diamonds use pressure on one spot only (where the flaw occurs) the women devote themselves to rounding the whole stone and carefully cutting off all angles to be seen on its surface by means of the sharp diamonds they hold in their right hand. Occasionally they have very large diamonds to cut which take a great deal of time, but an ordinary stone weighing about ten carats would not take so very long.

When the diamond has been sufficiently cut and rounded, it is then ready for the third and last process, that of polishing. This work requires a great deal of time and skill and is performed entirely by machinery, a steam engine supplying the motive power for all the iron disks. The process consists in giving to the rounded diamonds what is termed in technical language their necessary "sides."

All diamonds are divided into two classes, "brilliants" and "roses," although the only real difference between them lies in the number of sides they individually possess after having been polished in one of the many diamond factories. A brilliant must possess fifty-eight sides (a few years ago the lowest number was sixty-four, for there are fashions in diamond cutting), but a rose need only possess twenty-four sides.

Another, though slight, difference between them is that a brilliant is pointed at both ends, while a rose diamond has one end flattened and the other pointed. When the diamond is ready to be polished it has first to be soldered into a pear shaped frame made of zinc and then dipped into a preparation of oil and diamond dust before being fastened, with three others, into a strong frame placed in close proximity to an iron wheel.

This little disk is then set in motion by connecting it with the great engine, and the wheel immediately turns at the rate of 2,000 revolutions to the minute.

As it revolves the four diamonds set in the adjacent frame are gradually polished by means of the friction produced on their surface by the particles of diamond dust still adhering to the oil into which they had been previously dipped.

Only one portion of a diamond can be polished at once, and consequently when this part has been dealt with the stone has to be resoldered, so that another portion of its surface may be subjected to the friction of the wheel.

The process of resoldering takes place about twenty times in the case of every brilliant before it can be considered to be thoroughly polished.—Exchange.

Land Man Suicides.

John Lund, the well konwn land man of Minneapolis, committed suicide at his office in that city on Tuesday afternoon by shooting himself with a revolver. He was generally considered to be wealthy and prosperous and the newspaper accounts of the suicide assign various reasons for his act. He is said to have grieved much since the death of his wife about a year ago: to have suffered a lot from an operation some time ago for appendicitis and to have worried about the financial affairs of a brother. It will be some time before his business affairs can be straightened out.

Mr. Lund was at one time a member of the state legislature and was in the campaign as a candidate for the governorship two years ago.

Nany Thrills in "Fort Ridgley."

The largest out-door spectacular production ever attempted will be the feature of the evening entertainment in front of the grandstand, at the great Minnesota State Fair, which is held midway between St. Paul and Minneapolis, the first week in September. This fair, which is the largest on the American continent, has always been foremost in its amusement department, and for the past eleven years, has produced in front of its grandstand, night and day, various entertainments, many of which make large circus owners look closely to their laurels.

This year, in addition to the regular program of special attractions, running racer by search light, balloon races, fireworks, etc., there will be offerd a huge historical scenic spectacle, in which will be utilized 1,000 people, 300 of which will be genuine Sioux Indians, from the Sisseton agency, in South Dakota, who with their ponies will be brought to the fair for this purpose.

The spectacle will be known as "Fort Ridgely in 1862," and will be based on one of the events in the Sioux war, which took place in Minnesota in the summer of 1862.

A reproduction of Fort Ridgely will be constructed in the infield of the half-mile track, and an attack on the fort by Indians, several of them actually took part in the original fight, will be portrayed

The splendid location for the production, together with the extraordinary number of participants, make this attraction one to be eagerly looked forward to, for while it is expected to be made most realistic, all terrifying or gruesome features will be eliminated.

It is not an unusual state of affairs to have the seating capacity of 30,000 tested, but in all probability, this will be the case at every performance, this season.

Exploding a Mine In Granite.

~~One of the methods of quarrying~~ granite is to dislodge a huge sheet from the surface of the formation through the medium of a powder mine. A large perpendicular shaft is first blasted to a depth of about thirty feet. At the bottom of this and radiating in all directions horizontally, like the spokes of a huge wheel, long holes are drilled. The extremities of these holes are then shot with light charges of dynamite in order to create chambers large enough to receive large quantities of black powder. This takes weeks of ever increasing charges. Then the final charge is loaded. The now huge chambers at the extremities of the spokes are packed with hundreds of pounds of powder, numerous electric wires attached and the whole mine tamped with fine material. A mighty roar and rumble in the bowels of the earth and the huge sheet is detached from the ledge.—Popular Mechanics.

A Fraudulent Tax.

A well to do German farmer in a western state came into the town of which he was accounted a resident to pay his taxes. The bill was handed to him, itemized as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| State tax | $15.90 |
| County tax | 8.50 |
| School tax | 5.00 |
| Total | $29.40 |

After the German had carefully scrutinized the bill he set his lips tightly and in a very determined manner said: "I pays de state tax, I pays de county tax und I pays de school tax, but I be doggoned if I pays dat total tax. I never had no total tax! I think he is a fraud!"—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Missed the Mark.

A north of England clergyman recently preached against ill natured gossiping and spoke pretty plainly to his congregation on the subject. One of the members of the congregation to whom he was especially alluding came up to him after the service. The vicar thought he had touched her and that she was about to express contrition, but she said, "Ah, vicar, I am so glad you spoke out, and what a good thing it was the Misses —— were there to hear you."—Church Family Newspaper.

Juvenile Logic.

Marie is a very bright kindergarten pupil. She came home to her parents the other day and told them that the kindergarten teacher had said she will grow up to be a very nice looking young lady if she is a good girl, but will grow up to be a very ugly woman if she is a naughty girl. "Is that true, mamma?" asked Marie, and she was informed that if the teacher said so it was true. Marie then sat still for a while, pondering seriously. "But, mamma," she suddenly burst forth again, "why was the kindergarten teacher so naughty when she was a little girl?"—Philadelphia Record.

HARDNESS OF DIAMONDS.

The Stones Can Be Forced by Pressure Into Steel Blocks.

A word as to the hardness of diamonds. They vary much in this respect. Even different parts of the same crystal differ in their resistance to cutting and grinding So hard is diamond in comparison to glass that a suitable splinter of diamond will plane curls off a glass plate as a carpenter's tool will plane shavings off a deal board. Another experiment that will illustrate its hardness is to place a diamond on the flattened end of a conical block of steel and upon it bring another similar cone of steel. If I force them together with hydraulic power, I can force the stone into the steel blocks without injuring the diamond in the least. The pressure which I have brought to bear in this experiment has been equal to 170 tons a square inch of diamond.

The only serious rival of the diamond in hardness is the metal tantalum. In an attempt to bore a hole through a plate of this metal a diamond drill was used, revolving at the rate of 5,000 revolutions a minute. This whirling force was continued ceaselessly for three days and nights, when it was found that only a small point one-fourth of a millimeter deep had been drilled, and it was a moot point which had suffered most damage, the diamond or the tantalum.

After exposure for some time to the sun many diamonds glow in a dark room. One beautiful green diamond in my collection when phosphorescing in a vacuum gives almost as much light as a candle, and you can easily read by its rays. But the time has hardly come when we can use diamonds as domestic illuminants.—Sir William Crookes in North American Review.

Good Reasoning.

"I don't see, madam, how you can expect us to pay any claim under your husband's accident policy."

"Well, you see it was this way: When he asks which it was, a boy or a girl, and the nurse said that he was the father of triplets, he dropped. Now, his death was due to an accident."

"How do you make that out?"

"It was an accident of birth."—New York Press.

Stropping a Razor.

In stropping a razor the blade should be drawn across the strop from the heel to the point, at the same time going the full length of the strop. In shaving this motion should be reversed, the blade traveling from point to heel. The reason of this is that the edge of the blade has tiny, sawlike teeth, and the opposite movements use these to the best advantage.

Greatness Appreciated.

"Katy, who's in the high school," remarked Mr. Dolan, "have been readin' Herbert Spencer to me."

"Who's Herbert Spencer?"

"He's wan iv the smartest min an earth. He could explain anything at all to yez if yez could only be polite enough to stay awake an' pay attintion."—Washington Star.

It is a miserable thing to live in suspense. It is the life of a spider.—Swift.

Driving Men From the Table.

Baptista Porta gives six processes for driving hearty eaters from the tables of great men. The most effective was to give them an hour before eating a glass of wine medicated with belladonna, so that attempts to masticate would occasion spasms of the jaw The most disgusting was to set before the gluttons viands sprinkled with dried horses' blood and pieces of catgut. He says, "If you cut harp strings small and sprinkle them on hot flesh, the heat will twist them and they will move like worms."

PAL OF CAPTURED OUTLAW ESCAPES BUT IS PROBABLY WOUNDED.

"Bad Men" Who Hold Up Hotel and Pool Room are Pursued by Posse and in Encounter Two Combatants Are Hit by Bullets.

Mandan, N. D., Aug. 6.—Two armed desperadoes were met near here by Deputy Sheriff John Anderson, Chief of Police Robey and George Chapin after an all day search, and one of the bandits captured along with three horses but the other escaped.

A bloody battle occurred before the capture was made. It is thought that the bandit who escaped was hit by one of the bullets from an officer's gun.

The men had held up Funk's hotel at Hebron, N. D., Sunday evening and secured but a few cents. They then traveled by horseback to New Salem, and Monday evening entered John Egge's pool room. They rifled the cash drawer and held up about twenty men at the point of revolvers. They secured more than $1 0. Sheriff Bechtold was notified and left at once for New Salem where posses were formed and gave chase.

The desperados eluded the posses and came on to Mandan. They were met a few miles out of the city by the deputy sheriff and his two assistants and a fierce fight ensued. One of the assistants was shot in the hand. The captured man was lodged in the county jail and the sheriff and his men started out to track the other man. Although they found his cartridge belt and other little articles belonging to him, he made good his escape.

GROWTH OF MINNESOTA

REMARKABLE DEVELOPMENT OF FIFTY YEARS.

Everthing Shows a Most Wonderful Growth. All Done in the Last Half Century.

This year marks the fiftieth anniversary of the state of Minnesota, and it is interesting to compare the financial condition of the state, the first year of its organization, with the present year.

Taxes levied for all purposes, state, county, township, city and village, in 1858, were $554,000. In 1907-8 they were $28,000,000. The total assessed valuation of taxable, real and personal property of the state in 1858 was $41,000,000. In 1907-8, $1,050,000,000. From January 1st, 1858, to February 1st, 1859, the total receipts of the treasury were $286,000. For the fiscal year ending July 31st, 1908, the receipts were $12,446,280.64, as compared with $11,250,342.27 in 1907.

In 1861 there were only two classes of state institutions, the state prison and normal schools. For them there was expended that year for support a total of $7,500. Last year for the prison, reformatory, insane hospitals, university, normal schools, schools for the deaf, dumb, blind and feeble-minded, the state public school and soldiers' home, over $2,000,000.

Since the organization of the state there has been disbursed for the support of all state institutions $33,000,000. The total expended for the buildings of the various institutions has been $15,000,000, of which the insane hospitals have received $3,000,000, the university $2,000,000, and the new capitol $4,500,000. This amount ($15,000,000), with the value of the ground where the institutions are located estimated at $5,000,000, makes the institutional property of the state worth $20,000,000.

The permanent school fund now aggregates $18,000,000, and the university fund $1,500,000. The state lands still unsold, including swamp, university and school lands, aggregate about 2,750,000 acres, and when all these lands are sold, when the timber is cut and sold, and when the ore royalties are all recieved, it is fully expected that the general school fund will reach $100,000,000 and the university fund $10,000,000 to $15,000,000, and that is not an idle estimate when it is considered that from one 40-acre tract there will be taken 20,000,000 tons of ore, on which the state receives a royalty of 25c a ton, or $5,000,000. The state has contracted on similar terms over 500 forties.

The bonded indebtedness of the state, represented by the old railroad funding bonds, is now $400,000, and is being reduced at the rate of $150,000 a year. The certificates of indebtedness issued by the capitol commissioners for the building and furnishing of the new capitol which are still unpaid amount to $2,500,000

The large railroad taxes are due and payable the 1st of March, and the June county settlement with the state brings in a large sum to the treasury, so that during the summer months the state's strong box is full to overflowing. The amount on hand dwindles gradually from July to October, reducing the cash balance of about $3,000,000 to a little over a million. In October the legislature has made the school apportionment, which this year will amount to about $1,000,000, and the state aid to school appropriation, which this year was over $856,000, payable. This amount of nearly $2,000,000 is made available at a time when the state's cash balance is only something over a million. As a result each year the state is compelled to borrow from half a million to a million and three-quarters dollars, paying the market rate of interest. A great many people, even bankers and county treasurers, who, perhaps more than any other class in the state, are familiar with finance, do not know that the state becomes a borrower each year about the 1st of November and continues a borrower until the spring months. These loans are only temporary and anticipatory, taxes having in all cases been levied to pay such loans beforehand.

The general administration expenses of the state government are paid out of the general revenue fund, which has various sources, several of which are as follows for the year ending July 31st, 1908:

| | |
|---|---|
| Railroad taxes .............. | $3,425,343.76 |
| General taxation ............ | 1,659,570.41 |
| Insurance companies' taxes .. | 365,294.41 |
| Incorporation fees .......... | 68,650.00 |
| Transportation and express companies .......... | 39,403.70 |
| Vessel tonnage taxes ........ | 16,313.66 |
| Telephone companies ........ | 103,053.87 |
| Inheritance taxes ........... | 43,215.14 |
| Hunters' licenses ........... | 16,464.20 |
| State prison twine plant .... | 1,239,293.60 |
| Other state institutions ..... | 280,959.02 |

It may be of interest to know the amount which has been received from the 2 per cent tax on liquor licenses for the establishment of a state inebriate hospital. There has been received in cash $34,562.87, to which may be added $13,494.42, representing unpaid auditor's drafts in process of collection, making a total of $48,057.29 for the fifteen months during which the law has been in operation.

MISS DELLA STROEBE, 710 Richmond St., Appleton, Wis., writes: "For several years I was in a rundown condition, and I could find no relief from doctors and medicines. I could not enjoy my meals, and could not sleep at night. I had heavy, dark circles about the eyes.

"My friends were much alarmed. I was advised to give Peruna a trial, and to my joy I began to improve with the first bottle. After taking six bottles I felt completely cured. I cannot say too much for Peruna as a medicine for women in a run-down condition."

Body Raw with Eczema—Discharged from Hospitals as Hopeless—Cuticura Remedies Cured Him.

"From the age of three months until fifteen years old, my son Owen's life was made intolerable by eczema in its worst form. In spite of treatments the disease gradually spread until nearly every part of his body was quite raw. He used to tear himself dreadfully in his sleep and the agony he went through is quite beyond words. The regimental doctor pronounced the case hopeless. We had him in hospitals four times and he was pronounced one of the worst cases ever admitted. From each he was discharged as incurable. We kept trying remedy after remedy, but had gotten almost past hoping for a cure. Six months ago we purchased a set of Cuticura Remedies. The result was truly marvelous and to-day he is perfectly cured. Mrs. Lily Hedge, Camblewell Green, England, Jan. 12, 1907."

THE REXFORTH CIRCULATING LIBRARY

By DONMARK LEMON

(Copyright, by Shortstory Pub. Co.)

He handed the beggar a half-dollar, for the pathetic old fellow had made a moving appeal, and was about to return to his pocket the other coins in his hand, when one of them slipped through his fingers and started to roll down the sidewalk.

He saw that it was his pocket-piece, a louis d'or with the image of the Grande Monarque, and made a hasty dash for the coin. It escaped him and shot away at accelerating speed down the sidewalk and just inside the flagstone. He lengthened his stride and made another dash for the coin. Some small silver spilled from his hand, but he let it go and followed the elusive Louis XIV. Suddenly the gold-piece struck a ridge in its downward path and shot around the corner of a public courtway. Baxter followed.

He heard a laugh at his amusing predicament, but did not look up, as his blood was aroused, and he was bound that the coin should not escape down some hole or cranny.

At about three-fourths its length, the courtway lifted a bit, retarding the speed of, the coin, which finally swerved in its track and rocked along the flagstone, to reel at last like a very drunken Louis into a doorway, where it lay in the corner, half-propped against the footboard.

Baxter stooped and picked up the coin, and as he arose to a standing posture, a small, neat brass sign met his eye. It was set into the door before which the coin had come to a standstill, and it read:

THE REXFORTH CIRCULATING LIBRARY.

The courtway or narrow street down which the golden louis had led him was wholly new to Baxter, and as he looked about he saw a couple of ladies across the way smiling at his late predicament.

He would step into Rexforth's and recover his serenity. He opened the door and found himself in a large, well lighted room, fitted up more like a ladies' parlor than a library. Where were the books? He could not see any, and the patrons—all ladies, it would seem—that came and went while he gazed around nonplused did not bring nor take away any object that could have been mistaken for a book.

"Huckleberry Finn!" He Ejaculated.

"This is something new," commented Baxter, mentally: "Must be a bookless library."

Fancies of a new idea in libraries floated through his brain. Perhaps the books at Rexforth's were not printed volumes, but phonographic records, and all the patron needed to do was to draw a wax cylinder of the latest popular novel—the record made by the author himself—take it home and place it on a phonograph, and science, the mother of convenience, would do the rest.

But all this was hypothetical, so he looked about. On the wall near him was a neat typewritten list, headed: "The Six Books Most in Demand by the Patrons of the Rexforth Circulating Library, for the Month of September." His eye ran down the list.

"Third-rail alive!" he murmured, "what kind of ladies patronize this library!"

For the list read:

Izaak Walton's Compleat Angler.
Shakespeare's King Henry The Fifth
Last of the Mohicans
Meditations of Aurelius.
Samuel Johnson's Dictionary.
Huckleberry Finn.

He shut his eyes and tried to puzzle it out, but the more he thought the deeper was his confusion. He studied the ladies waiting to give their orders for books. They all were stylishly dressed, and seemed cultured and well-read. His eye returned to the typewritten list on the wall.

"They're classics, all right," he granted, "But such classics!"

He got up and went over to the secretary's desk. He would join the library and learn something. He was handed a leaflet which informed him that the monthly dues were ten dollars, the members having the privilege of drawing each month two books in class one, three in class two, four in class three, and so on! a fine of two dollars a day being imposed for a book kept overtime.

Baxter whistled mentally. "The books must be bound in vellum and gold-tooled!"

He laid ten dollars on the secretary's desk, and after a little telephoning, by means of which his references were authenticated and approved, he was entered in the books as a member of The Rexforth Circulating Library, and credited with one month's paid-up dues.

He did not remove the sealed wrapper from the catalogue that the secretary gave him, but upon being assured by the young lady presiding over the order desk that a copy of Huckleberry Finn was on the library shelves, he had her make out a slip for that classic.

He thought to get his Huckleberry and take it with him—he was in a hurry to have a look at the binding of the volume—but the young lady calmly informed him that the book would be sent around to his address that afternoon by the first delivery. If he would turn to rule seven in the catalogue, he would learn that such was the delivery regime of the library.

"Very well," he said, and left the building. By following downwards for a short distance the narrow but well-paved courtway, then turning to the right along a similar courtway, thence to the left and again to the right, he emerged upon a busy, familiar street, where a number of carriages were waiting, no doubt for patrons of the Rexforth Circulating Library.

That afternoon a parcel bearing the stamp Rexforth was delivered at Baxter's club room. It was of mammoth dimensions for a book, and he began to fear that the librarian had blundered and sent him, instead of a modest octavo by Mark Twain, a folio Shakespeare, if not the ponderous Johnson's dictionary itself. So he nervously undid the wrapping, and there lay before him in a neat paper box a lady's handsome skirt, with some manner of fluffy pink trimmings or flounces, he didn't know which.

He poked gingerly at the dainty garment. "Huckleberry Finn!" he ejaculated. Then a great, big truth leaped up in Baxter's mind, like the grimacing face of a jack-in-the-box, and hastily removing the manila cover and opening the catalogue he had received at the library, he turned to H. Bracketed with the title of Huckleberry Finn was the description of a lady's fancy ball skirt.

His eye ran over some other book titles, with the things in ladies' dress-wear bracketed against them. Then he sat down weakly. The Rexforth Circulating library was a woman's dress-renting establishment, where ladies, by paying a certain monthly sum, could "draw" stylish dresses for temporary wear.

Each dress, skirt, waist, or hat, bore the name of some well-known book—a kind of code arrangement for privacy, brevity and convenience—and upon examining his library card Baxter found Mrs. prefixed to his name, the secretary, no doubt, having been under the impression that he had acted for his wife in joining the R. C. L., for that establishment made its appeal exclusively to the gentler sex.

NEW PAINT DRYS WET ROOMS.

Engineers Believe Old Roman Secret Has Been Discovered.

A discovery which promises to revolutionize the building and decorating trades and to be of vast importance to the shipping industry has been made by Inspector Simpson of the Blackburn (England) fire brigade. It is a liquid, and the principle of which, after tests extending over many months, has been pronounced by leading engineers to be an old Roman secret, which has been lost to the world for 700 years. When painted with this liquid the dampest room becomes absolutely dry, and freshly plastered walls, after treatment by it, may be at once papered without damage to the paper.

No ironwork painted with it can rust, and it completely prevents that "weeping" of the inner skins of iron ships, which causes so much damage to cargo. When applied to the bottom plates of ships it not only prevents oxidation, but allows no marine growth, barnacles or other parasites to attach themselves. It consequently preserves a glasslike surface, which the discoverer asserts will add several knots to the speed of Atlantic liners and warships.

Hunting Coyotes in Manitoba.

Hunting for young coyotes is all the rage here now. The method of securing them is to take a collie dog and go to the haunts of the coyote here, generally in thick scrubby undergrowth. When the old coyote sees the collie, she runs to the den where the young are and the collie follows and barks at the den. Then the hunters dig out the young.

Alexander Aimo and his son dug out 14 from two dens one day recently. Another man got 35, and this man has brought in in all 94.

There is a bounty of two dollars on each coyote paid by the government agents appointed in several districts of the providence—Carman Correspondence Forest and Stream.

LEADING GERMAN SUFFRAGIST.

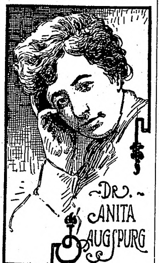
Dr. Anita Augspurg Has Served Many Prison Terms for Her Cause.

Berlin.—Fraulein Dr. Anita Augspurg, leader of the German claimants of votes for women in Germany, has served 70 terms in prison for her insistence in behalf of her cause, and probably holds the record.



"The Anita," as her followers call her, recently attracted attention again by her repudiation of the social democrats in the name of the woman suffrage movement. The socialists have long been looked upon as the especial friends of the advocates of "votes for women."

The movements of no other woman in Germany outside of the members of the royal family are followed more closely by the public than those of Dr. Augspurg. She is a familiar figure in almost every part of the German empire, her mass of short, curly hair, and close-fitting reform garb making her an easy mark for the curious.

It is Dr. Augspurg's tongue which has landed her so often behind prison bars. She is a fearless speaker, and in a country like Germany her opinions on the equality of the sexes are regarded as little short of revolutionary.

Her latest sojourn in prison was the consequence of a few remarks on the Hamburg police, after witnessing an attempt to quell a street riot.

She was a born orator and politician. She has that greatest of all gifts for speaking, personal magnetism.

This German woman is a lawyer. She is practically the mother of the women's movement in Germany. In 1902 she founded the Woman's Suffrage league, of which she is now president.

The career of Dr. Augspurg is an example of the triumph of a strong-minded woman over the conventions that hedge about the sex in Germany. Practically her whole life has been a preparatory school for the unique position which she now holds. She was raised in a family of jurists.

When the Bessemer Pig Iron association was first formed Mr. Butler was chosen as chairman, and he still occupies that position. He has been connected with iron manufacture since boyhood and is considered to be one of the chief authorities in the United States on blast furnaces, coke and iron ore matters. ### Thrift in the Family.

A little girl was playing with a girl friend of her own age on the porch of her home in West Philadelphia.

An elderly gentleman, her mother's father, and an elderly lady, her father's mother, were sitting on the porch talking pleasantly with each other. The little girl had often wished her grandparents were of the same name, like other children's grandparents.

Presently the little guest remarked: "What a nice grandmother and grandfather you have."

"Oh, yes," she said, with a sigh, "but they don't match."

SAVED AT THE CRISIS.

Delay Meant Death from Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. Herman Smith, 901 Broad Street, Athens, Ga., says: "Kidney disease started with slight irregularity and weakness and developed into dangerous dropsy. I became weak and languid, and could do no housework. My back ached terribly. I had bearing down pains and my limbs bloated to twice their normal size. Doctors did not help, and I was fast drifting into the hopeless stages. I used Doan's Kidney Pills at the critical moment and they really saved my life."

OLE MIS' MOON WITH THEM.

No Chance of the Visitors Being Homesick in the City.

Mme. Fairfax was wont to stand on the porch of her old Virginia home and rejoice on moonlight nights in the beauty, says the Youth's Companion. "There's my moon," she would say, as it rose from behind the eastern hills. "Look, Dahlia, see how beautiful it is," and her tiny colored maid, who was ever at hand with shawl or fan for her beloved mistress, would answer, enthusiastically: "Your moon certainly do look pow'ful handsome to-night."

When Mme. Fairfax journeyed to the city to visit her son, Dahlia, looking out of the window with wondering eyes on the first evening of her life away from home, exclaimed, in a voice of mingled astonishment and relief: "Well, I declar' to goodness, if ole Mis' Moon ain't done come along to Washington wif me an ole mis'! We can't be homesick nohow, wif ole Mis' Moon shining on us."

WONDERED WHY

Found the Answer Was "Coffee."

Many pale, sickly persons wonder for years why they have to suffer so, and eventually discover that the drug—caffeine—in coffee is the main cause of the trouble.

"I was always very fond of coffee and drank it every day. I never had much flesh and often wondered why I was always so pale, thin and weak.

"About five years ago my health completely broke down and I was confined to my bed. My stomach was in such condition that I could hardly take sufficient nourishment to sustain life.

"During this time I was drinking coffee, didn't think I could do without it.

"After awhile I came to the conclusion that coffee was hurting me, and decided to give it up and try Postum. I didn't like the taste of it at first, but when it was made right—boiled until dark and rich—I soon became very fond of it.

"In one week I began to feel better. I could eat more and sleep better. My sick headaches were less frequent, and within five months I looked and felt like a new being, headache spells entirely gone.

"My health continued to improve and today I am well and strong, weigh 148 lbs. I attribute my present health to the life-giving qualities of Postum."

August Butter Scores.

In the August Scoring of the six months' Educational contest at St. Paul the other day there was 160 tubs of butter entered and scored. In the Hand Separator Class several northern Minnesota buttermakers made excellent showing and as usual the tub sent in by Lars Haslerud, the Plummer buttermaker, is found close to the head of the list. The buttermakers from this section of the state scoring 90 or better are;

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| H. A. Lidenberg, | Fosston, | 95 |
| O. C. Toftner, | Erskine, | 93½ |
| L. Haslerud, | Plummer, | 93 |
| Geo. L. Austin, | St. Hilaire, | 92½ |
| Paul Kruger, | Gary, | 92½ |
| L. W. Leffler, | Hendrum, | 92½ |
| A. B. Stensgaard, | Ada, | 91 |

None of the buttermakers are holding a uniform high score better than Mr. Haslerud. In June his butter scored 93; in July 93½, and in August 93 again. With most of the others the score is high one month and low the next but the Plummer butter stays close to the same mark, and that mark an exceptionally good one. Every patron of the Plummer creamery should feel proud of this record for their creamery and should use every effort to bring their cream in perfect condition so that the splendid record being made by the buttermaker for this creamery this year shall rather be improved than otherwise as the time goes on.

Leads in United States In Dairy Progress.

Congressman Stenerson has just received advance information from National Dairy and Food Commission of vast importance to the 9th Congressional district in that it shows the wonderful progress made in the advancement of the dairy industry in this section of Minnesota.

In 1904 the dairies in this district produced 2,864,918 pounds of butter, and the patrons were paid $415,431.

In 1906 the creameries of the 9th district made 6,274,971 pounds of butter and the patrons were paid $1,131,032.88, a gain in pounds of 3,400,153 and a gain in cash paid the farmers of $715,601.56.

This is the greatest progress made in any congressional district in the United States during that period according to the official reports of the United States Dairy and Food Department's official statisticians.

The most important part of the showing of these figures however is that they simply indicate the progress made since 1906, which has been three times as great as that of the two years from 1904 to 1906 inclusive. The progress during those two years was over 300 per cent increase, and during the years 1907 and 1908 the increase, will net at least 500 per cent according to State Dairy Inspecter A. O. Storvick and others including M. J. Cort, the recognized authority of creamery supply sales in this territory.—Crookston Journel.

BRYAN HEARS ALL ABOUT IT

HE IS FORMALLY NOTIFIED OF NOMINATION AS CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENCY.

A Crowd of 20,000 People Were Present. Non-Partisan Celebration of the Day is Held by the Lincoln People.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 12.—Under the burning rays of an almost tropical sun and in the presence of a vast assemblage which cheered him to the echo, William Jennings Bryan yesterday received from Henry D. Clayton of Alabama formal notification of his nomination for the presidency of the United States.

Thrice honored by the Democratic party as its standard bearer, Mr. Bryan plainly exhibited the pleasure it gave him to once again proclaim the principles for which he stood. His nomination for third time, he declared in his speech of acceptance, could only be explained by a substantial and undisputed growth in the popularity of the principles and policies for which he, with a multitude of others had contended.

As these principles and policies," he said, "have given me whatever political strength I possess, the action of the convention not only renews my faith in them, but strengthen my attachment to them."

Twenty thousand or more prespiring humans, standing in solid phalanx and packed together as closely as the "bricks in a wall," surrounded the speaker's stand and listened with rapt attention to the address of notification by Congressman Henry D. Clayton of Alabama, and the response of acceptance by Mr. Bryan.

A tumult of cheers broke loose when the presidential candidate arose to denote his acceptance. The sun's rays were wilting in their heat, but the surging crowd proved its loyalty and its zeal by remaining to the end of the ceremony, which consumed an hour and a half, and applauded even more uproariously than at its initial greeting.

TORNADO IN MANDAN

North Dakota City and Crops Are Hard Hit.

Mandan, N. D., Aug. 11.—A tornado struck this place about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and the wreckage will total about $50,000. The gale started with a severe wind which culminated in torrents of rain and hail. Trees were torn up by the roots, at the Inter-Ocean hotel, a big three-story brick building, a large portion of the roof was loosened and fell into the dining room. The Demars hotel, another three-story brick building, had the entire roof torn off and pieces of it were scattered through the city.

A boy was picked up by the opera house and hurled three blocks and seriously bruised, houses were tipped over, window panes shattered and chimneys demolished.

A gravel train crossing the Big Missouri river bridge had its caboose hurled against an upright pier. Had the storm struck a few seconds before the car and its three occupants would have been hurled into the river.

Telephone wires are all down. It is thought that the storm has done great damage to the crops. One of the incidents of the storm was the blowing of a baby out of a baby carriage and clear across the street, but aside from buises the child was uninjured.

Hunting Robbers.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 12.—Posses lead by Sheriff Carter and Erie railroad detectives are scouring the woods east of Crown Point, Ind., for three armed robbers who broke into the Erie railway station at Crown Point and held up the night operator, and stole $500 in cash and tickets.

The robbers then locked the operator in a box car and fled.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Burn Slashings.

Hibbing—The disastrous forest fire in British Columbia has aroused Minnesota officials to a consideration of the necessity of a law requiring lumbermen to burn "slashings."

"Slashings" were undoubtedly the main cause of the Fernie fire, that has cost a hundred lives and millions of dollars worth of property.

"Slashings" made it impossible to fight effectively the terrible Hinckley fire that swept Northern Minnesota in 1894, demanding a sacrifice of 418 lives and 300,000 acres of valuable timber lands.

Minnesota has since enacted legislation to protect its forests from fire, but as yet has no law requiring lumbering companies to burn their "slashings," and there is still a possibility of a repetition of the Hinckley holocaust.

Uncle Sam Is Foxy.

Duluth—The state of Minnesota is inclined to believe that the government of the United States is slipping one over on it. The state has protested to the interior department against the resurvey of the swamp lands in Northern Minnesota. The officials of Minnesota suggest that if the survey of the lands on the Indian reservations is in error, it is very probable that mistakes were made in the entire appraisement, and the governor asks that if any survey be made it include all the lands in dispute and thus settle the entire controversy.

Much Stripping.

Aurora—While mining work is being prosecuted much less vigorously this season than last year, a tremendous amount of stripping is in progress on the Mesaba range. Operators in general and the Steel Corporation in particular are making ready for the time when ore will be needed, and it will be necessary to bend every energy to supply it. Dozens of steam shovels and large forces of men are engaged in removing overburden. Some great holes are being dug. A number of pits that already are producers are being enlarged.

Music at State Fair.

Hamline—Minnesota's "semi-centennial" state fair this year will be a musical event and not a mere exposition of field and factory products. Miss Nellie A. Hope, director of music at the fair, has arranged orchestral concerts for no less than four of the exhibition buildings. From the Minnesota Ladies' Symphony orchestra, an organization of forty-two players, she will select the musicians for these four daily concerts. Several of these players have state-wide reputations as soloists, and all of them are carefully trained in orchestral work.

Butter Contest Ends.

St. Paul—The scores of the third monthly butter contest were not as high as those made in former contests, and the quality of the butter, tho high, is not quite up to the mark for which the North Star state is famed. The scores of the contest just closed are:

| | |
|---|---|
| J. L. Wallstion, Harris | 96½ |
| James T. Pomeroy, Lake Benton | 96 |
| A. G. Schandle, Rapidan | 95½ |
| Ollie Olson, Fairmont R. F. D. | 95 |
| R. Wishart, Le Sueur | 93 |

One hundred and sixty tubs were entered.

Pitchfork Stabs Child.

Rochester—At the farm of Philip Cassiday, three miles north of Rochester, John Cassidy, a 15-year-old boy, threw a pitchfork down from a grain stack, not knowing that his brother Edward had come close under the stack. The fork struck the little fellow on the side of the neck, felling him to the ground. The accident happened in the afternoon, and the boy did not recover consciousness until late in the evening. The fork penetrated over an inch and a half into the child's body, but it is believed that he will recover.

Drowned in Rain Barrel.

Cokato—Jons Paulson, a pioneer resident of Cokato, was drowned in a rain barrel. His body was found in the morning, head foremost in the cask. He was 78 years old and was in feeble health. Early in the morning he left the house to get some water at a rain barrel near the dwelling. Evidently he lost his balance, for later his body was discovered with the legs protruding from the cask.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul—Judge Bunn holds that the city and not the property owner is liable for injuries caused by defective sidewalks, altho the property owner laid the walk.

Hamline—The Minneapolis Automobile club will have charge of Automobile day at the Minnesota state fair. This conclusion was arrived at at a meeting held in the Commercial club rooms. It was attended by President Nelson, of the state fair management, and a number of members of the Automobile club.

Crookston—With the arrest of Martin Hill and Charles Dejournet, both colored, the Northwestern police believe that they have made another haul in the criminal muck that will materially reduce crimes of the petty nature thru this territory.

Winona—The Southern Minnesota Medical association has accepted an invitation to hold its annual convention in Winona in 1909.

Faribault—Harvesting is nearly finished in this part of the state with the exception of some late sown wheat.

BIG ENGINES OF WAR

HOW 13-INCH GUNS OF BATTLESHIPS ARE HANDLED.

Every Member of Crew Has Certain Duties to Perform When in Action — Firing Done with Aid of Range-Finder.

Washington.—If a visitor were to go aboard one of our modern warships one of the first things he would ask to see, probably, would be the big guns.

Should the visitor request, an ever willing bluejacket would gratify the visitor's wish.

But the visitor is not conscious that he is an object of much amusement to the man-o'-war's men. There are things to be seen that the average civilian never dreams of, and his amazed glances when these are pointed out to him cause the lips of the gunner to run up a smile.

Suppose you wish to see one of the big guns. You ask the nearest gunner. He doffs his cap and asks you politely to excuse him for a moment while he obtains permission to show you into the turret where the big gun is mounted. This permission he gets from the officer of the deck.

He returns quickly and asks you to follow him. The only entrance to this turret from the main deck is through a manhole. If you are portly, the chances are that you'll not see the gun after all, for these steel manholes weren't designed for fat persons.

But, taking it for granted that you are thin, you finally find yourself inside the armored walls. You turn about expectantly and are face to face with the death-dealing implements.

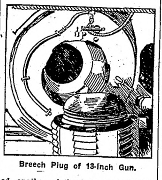
There they stand, silent and grim, twin engines of destruction, peaceful enough in repose, but terrible when manned by their human masters.

The members of a gun's crew are numbered and each man must not only know his own duty, but also that of the others, as they may be called on at any moment for a change of position.

For instance, No. 1, operating the breech plug of the gun, is commanded by the officer in charge, "No. 1 and No. 5 change."

No. 1 must know No. 5's duties, and No. 5 those of No. 1.

This is done so that if while in action a man is killed or fatally wounded, another of the crew will be able to take his place.



Breech Plug of 13-Inch Gun.

After the crew are all at their stations and mustered, the magazines and shell-rooms are opened.

The order: "Stand by," is given, this being a preparatory command for going into action. The next order comes like the crack of a rifle: "Load!"

The instant this command leaves the lips of the turret officer, the interior of the handling-room resembles the climax of a football game, and to a novice perhaps would appear like confusion. But it is far from it. Every man has a certain thing to do, and he does it.

Before you can realize it, 500 pounds of powder and a ton of steel have shot upward to the guns, ready to receive it. The trays containing the shells and powder come up to the breech of the gun. An electric rammer drives the projectile home, recoils, and in the same manner forces the powder in.

The powder charge for a 13-inch gun is incased in four linen bags, the last bag that goes into the gun containing the ignition charge, which is in its base.

The main charge, however, consists of brown prismatic powder, which has the appearance of stick candy, as it has small holes running through it, and about an inch in length. The black, or common powder, is used for an ignition charge, because it ignites quicker than any other.

If firing begins at 5,000 yards, the officer at the range-finder calls out: "Five thousand yards is the range. Begin firing."

If it were possible for a visitor to be inside the turret when one or both guns are fired he would be more surprised than ever, for the concussion is something fearful. The men use cotton in their ears to protect the drum from injury.

A most beautiful sight is the clear and distinct flight of a 13-inch shell. As the gun is elevated more or less, the shell describes nearly a half circle, finally plunging through the target and throwing a volume of water upward a hundred feet. At last, by bursting into small pieces it disappears.

It is claimed by experts that 8-inch 10-inch and 12-inch guns are more effective, but the 13-inch are still mounted. The Indiana carried 13-inch guns and used them with good effect at Santiago. The Illinois, one of our comparatively new ships, also is fitted with a 13-inch main battery.

GOOD CAUSE FOR WRATH.

Art Collector and Irritated Waiter Had the Same Feelings.

A Chicago art dealer was talking about the wrath of William T. Evans, the New York collector upon whom so many bogus paintings have been imposed.

"He's awfully angry," said the art dealer, repressing a smile. "Some of his costliest pictures, you know, have turned out fakes. His blood boils when he thinks of the way he has been duped.

"He told me the other day that he could hardly understand the rage that possessed him against every petty little insignficant dealer that had cheated him. He said it was like the rage of a waiter that he had noted one afternoon at luncheon.

"At luncheon, Mr. Evans said, he called his waiter's attention to a dead fly in some dish or other.

"The waiter, as he took the dish away, muttered with a malevolent look at the limp insect:

"'I'd give a two-dollar bill if I knew for certain that this was the fly that's been buzzing about my nose all the morning.'"

"Yes, lady. You see, folks along de route is too poor now ter hand out free grub!"

SHE COULD NOT WALK

For Months—Burning Humor on Ankles —Opiates Alone Brought Sleep —Eczema Yielded to Cuticura.

"I had eczema for over two years. I had two physicians, but they only gave me relief for a short time and I cannot enumerate the ointments and lotions I used to no purpose. My ankles were one mass of sores. The itching and burning were so intense that I could not sleep. I could not walk for nearly four months. One day my husband said I had better try the Cuticura Remedies. After using them three times I had the best night's rest in months unless I took an opiate. I used one set of Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, and my ankles healed in a short time. It is now a year since I used Cuticura, and there has been no return of the eczema. # The Kiteologist

By Don Mark Lemon

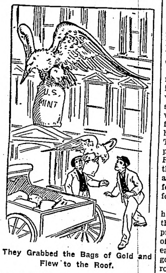
(Copyright, by Shortstory Pub. Co.)

Just come up on the roof, sir, and I'll show you the cage and tell you all that I know about the professor, but before we go a step further let me warn you that I don't believe a word of what the newspapers printed about him. No, sir, I won't and can't believe that such a true gentleman as the professor always showed himself to be could have deliberately set out to rob the government of over $15,000. It's preposterous to think of, but it's just like the newspapers to make the matter as sensational as possible.

Take care you don't tear your coat on that nail. I'll have my boy pull it out when he comes home from school. Now, sir, step this way, and you can see for yourself how innocent the professor was of any evil intentions. Look! Do you think this flat tin roof looks like a robber's roost? It's ridiculous; yet to read the newspapers you would think that we landlords are the friends of robbers, and all manner of thieves. We landlords have a hard enough struggle to live, without the newspapers making it any harder for us.

Yes, sir, this is the cage where the professor kept his three big eagles, and now I'll tell you how he came to stop with me, and why he had such strange-like pets. You see, I had just lately taken this house and had spent the last dollar I had in the world in furnishing it, and was glad enough to have such a nice gentleman as the professor come along the second day after I put up my sign and ask if I hadn't a furnished front room to let, with running water and a good deep closet where he could keep his clothes.

Well, sir, I snapped him up at once, as I could see he was a gentleman, and, besides, he looked neat and prosperous, and I felt I wouldn't have to worry about him not paying his rent on time. But before he took the room he asked if he couldn't go up on the roof and see if it would suit him for a certain purpose. I was somewhat surprised at him wanting to rent the roof, but thinking him a photographer, or something like that, I brought him up here and he was real pleased. So he told me his business, and I rented this roof to him without any hesitation at all. It isn't every day one can rent a scrap of roof for more than a good sunny front room, and you can't blame me for doing so.



They Grabbed the Bags of Gold and Flew to the Roof.

Well, sir, he was a kiteologist, as he told me. He flew kites to study the winds and the temperature at a great height. He wasn't in the employ of the government, but was studying on his own account. He took his silk hat off and sat down right over there, and explained all about it to me. His kites weren't like those that the boys fly, nor were they like I have seen pictures of in the papers—great big box-like things—but they were eagles—real live eagles. He had three of them, and he would attach a strong string to their legs and let them fly up into the heavens with a thermometer and barometer attached, or some such-like scientific instruments, and when he was ready, he would gently draw them down again.

Well, sir, it was a pleasure to hear him talk; he knew everything about eagles and kites and the heavens, and of course I consented for him to bring his birds and fly them from my roof, not supposing the landlord I get the house from would care at all. Which I can say, he didn't. So the next day the professor came with his three eagles and placed them up here on the roof in that big cage, and it was good to see how he did love those birds, and play with them, and teach them all kinds of tricks. My gracious, but they were strong! I really think the smallest of the three could have lifted a big child in its claws; and the professor explained how that they must be strong to carry his scientific instruments so high in the air.

Well, a week passed and he didn't fly his eagles, for he was waiting for them to get accustomed to their new location, so they would return like carrier doves in case the string tied to their legs got broken; and at the end of the week, before the professor could try his experiment at all, that dreadful accident happened, which the papers made so much of, and which frightened the professor, who was timid, like all real scientific men, so that he never came back, even for his clothes.

You see, just across the street from here is the subtreasury, and every little while a wagon drives up to the door filled with big canvas bags full of gold, and the clerks will come out and get the gold and carry it into the vaults. Well, on Tuesday morning, just after I had finished some washing and was going out to get a new handle to my irons, which had got broken, the wagon drove up before the subtreasury door and the clerks began to take out the sacks of gold and carry them into the bank.

I can truly say that I'm not by nature a covetous woman, but, naturally, I paused and watched the men a moment or two, thinking what I could do if I had what was in just one of those sacks. Why, there must have been as much as $4,000 or $5,000 in each sack, and there were dozens of them, I believe.

Suddenly, as I was standing there, a darkness seemed to come over the sun, and at the same time a strange flying sound made me look up, and there were the professor's three eagles broken loose from the cage—I felt real sorry for the professor, to think that his birds had got loose—and down they came and lighted on the wagon full of gold. I lifted up my apron to shoo them back to the roof, when if those three mischievous birds didn't settle right down into the bags full of gold, and each one grab a bag in his claws, like I saw them grab a bag with a dead rabbit in it on the roof one day, and no sooner had they grabbed the bags of gold than up they flew again to the roof.

I was astonished beyond measure, but the clerks who were carrying in the gold were simply dumfounded. And no wonder! Supposing the eagles should spill the gold or fly away with it, why the poor clerks might have to return it out of their salaries, and I hear they don't get paid so much, though they are employed by the government.

Well, sir, the moment I could collect my scattered senses, I rushed back into the house to tell the professor what had happened, for, as I hadn't seen him on the roof, I supposed he was in his room. Of course the clerks followed me, and we all hurried up here where you are standing now. The three eagles were gone, and the professor was nowhere to be found. Poor man, he was out somewhere in the city, and I felt like running down and warning him not to return, for fear they would hold him responsible for the gold.

I saw that the eagles each had lately had a long cord tied to its legs and I thought nothing of it more than proper, but the clerks acted like a lot of wild men. They vowed that the eagles had been let down to steal the gold, and when they saw that this roof leads over to the next building yonder, they said that the owner of the birds had taken the gold and climbed through an open window in that building into an empty room, and that way escaped with the $15,000.

Of course I saw at once how dreadfully dishonest it all might be made to look, and I sat down and almost cried. At first the clerks and the officers paid no more attention to me than if I had been a sick kitten, but when they learned that I was the landlady and knew all about the eagles and the professor, they asked me a thousand questions, and I was dragged off to court like a criminal, and the poor professor's name was mixed up with robbery and thieving, and I don't know what else. But, somehow, he learned about the mischief his eagles had got into, and never returned.

Of course the eagles flew away with the gold bags—poor birds, I don't blame them a bit for making the most of their liberty—and I wouldn't at all be surprised if the police should find that the birds had dropped the gold on some roof, when they discovered that the bags didn't contain rabbit, as they had imagined.

Ethereal vs. Mundane.

Two men sat on a park bench one starry evening recently, says the New York Times. Through powerful glasses they were examining the firmament. It was apparent that one of them was an enthusiastic astronomer. He seemed sufficiently familiar with the smallest star to call it by its first name—that is, if stars have first names.

Drawing his companion's attention to a particular star in close proximity to the handle of the Dipper, he said:

"Perhaps you may be able to appreciate the immensity of distance between that star and our earth when I say it would take more than 100 years for a 40-horsepower automobile running at full speed to reach it."

By the quality of awe in his friend's voice, it was plain that he was unusually impressed, as he said:

"No? A hundred years? Why, man, thing of the gasoline bill."

FARM and GARDEN

DEVICE FOR BERRY GROWERS.

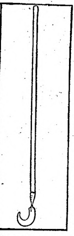
Cutting Off the Runners Made Easy for the Worker.



The problem of disposing of the surplus runners is always a perplexing one to the strawberry grower. Too commonly the runners are allowed to run and form a dense mat at their own sweet will. Placing runners is no easy job, as everyone must admit who has tried that backbreaking labor. Yet it is demonstrated every year in every plantation that it is the only method of raising uniformly large and brightly colored berries. Wherever a spot is found where from some cause the plants are thin on the ground, it is there the best berries are always found. Many plans of placing or spacing runners have been tried, and nearly every grower has his own distinctive way, which he varies from time to time when he thinks he has discovered something better. It really does not matter so much what arrangement of the runners is made, provided they are given plenty of room. Next to spacing them is the labor of cutting off the surplus ones that are not needed. An early-set, vigorous plant will send out a multitude of runners during the growing season and keep it up till freezing weather has stopped growth. Pinching or cutting them off with a knife or scissors is slow work and requires constant stooping, which is relished neither by old nor young. This work may be lightened as follows:

Take a worn-out hoe, says Orange Judd Farmer, and have the blacksmith straighten the blade on a line with the shank. You can have it any width the hoe will admit. For cutting around single plants a narrow blade is best; for narrowing in the side of a row the wider the blade the better. For narrowing the row an ordinary plow counter may be used. It may be fastened to the cultivator or it may be attached to handles, whetted sharp and trundled along by hand.

After the raspberries and blackberries are through bearing is the best time to cut out the old canes. Another simple instrument is also made out of an old hoe for this work, only in this case the hoe blade is turned in a sickle shape, so as to catch firmly around the cane. This allows the man to do all the cutting while standing erect. His left hand should be provided with a strong glove to hold the canes and pull them out. The illustration shows how the cutter looks when completed.

FARM WATER SUPPLY.

Purity of the Source Is of Prime Importance.

Too many wells are sunk in the lowest places around the farm home and barns. I visited more than a dozen different farm homes last week, writes a correspondent of Indiana Farmer, and with one exception, every well was located where surface drainage was sure to get into it. In some places one well supplied both household needs and the live stock. These wells were located where they were most convenient for the stock. That is a mighty poor arrangement. If one well must furnish the entire water supply, sink it where there is no possible chance for seepage or surface pollution. Place it as near the house as possible, and then pipe the stock supply to a tank in the yard. It's a nuisance to have a tank within 30 or 40 feet of the house. It is just as convenient to have it a hundred yards away. It is necessary to have plenty of water during these hot months, but be sure that it is pure.

FARM NOTES.

Cultivation should be mostly to keep down weeds.

Stock barns should be light, dry and well ventilated.

Molasses is proving to be a good feed for farm animals, including dairy cows.

Dairying is the one branch in which no man should engage who has not a real liking for cows.

Weeds are not an enemy. They take possession of waste places and often plow up the soil and make way for the coming of grasses.

When the potato vines are half grown they have filled the ground with lateral roots. Cultivate over the roots and not through them.

The dairy cow requires five times as much of the carbon in her food as of the protein because she must from that produce both heat and energy.

The Sheep Industry.

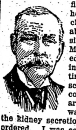
The sheep industry has thriven in spite of dull times. High prices offered for lambs have caused farmers to deplete their stocks. Some of the best lambs should be kept for breeding purposes.



FIVE MONTHS IN HOSPITAL.

Discharged Because Doctors Could Not Cure.

Levi P. Brockway, S. Second Ave., Anoka, Minn., says: "After lying for five months in a hospital I was discharged as incurable, and given only six months to live. My heart was affected, I had smothering spells and sometimes fell unconscious. I got so I couldn't use my arms, my eyesight was impaired and the kidney secretions were badly disordered. I was completely worn out and discouraged when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but they went right to the cause of the trouble and did their work well. I have been feeling well ever since."

SING, BIRDIE, DON'T!

Miss Yellem (about to sing)—What is your favorite air, professor?

Professor—Fresh air—and plenty of it! Good morning!

Mother's Accomplishment.

In the Bohemian set of New York two of the popular members are a well known writer and his wife, who also has written several books. They have a daughter about four years old. Recently the little girl was visiting at the home of a friend and her small playmate asked her: "Can your mamma sew?"

The daughter of the literary pair evidently was a bit chagrined. She could not remember that she had ever seen her mamma sew. She is a truthful child and would not claim any advantages she was not sure of, yet she felt that mamma's honor was at stake.

"I don't know if mamma can sew," she replied, dubiously, "but she can smoke a cigarette."

English Idea of It.

Little things frequently illustrate the English view of American geography very picturesquely. An Englishman had taken the Pacific Express at Philadelphia, and, feeling tired, had retired to his berth. Just before he fell asleep he happened to remember that he had forgotten something, so he put his head out between the curtains and called:

"Portah! Portah!"

The porter came.

"What is it?" he said.

"Please wake me when we get to San Francisco, you know.'

Astonished Great Pianist.

A collection of anecdotes of musical celebrities just published at Leipsic contains this one under the head of Anton Rubinstein. When the great pianist was making his tour of the United States he sat one day in a railroad train looking out upon the scenery. Suddenly a man sitting across the aisle spat over Rubinstein's head out of the open window. The master drew back and gazed in astonishment and anger at the vulgar American, who smiled and said, soothingly: "Don't worry; I know my distance."

ALMOST A SHADOW.

Gained 20 lbs. on Grape-Nuts.

There's a wonderful difference between a food which merely tastes good and one which builds up strength and good healthy flesh.

It makes no difference how much we eat unless we can digest it. It is not really food to the system until it is absorbed. A Yorkstate woman says:

"I had been a sufferer for ten years with stomach and liver trouble, and had got so bad that the least bit of food such as I then knew, would give me untold misery for hours after eating.

"I lost flesh until I was almost a shadow of my original self and my friends were quite alarmed about me.

"First I dropped coffee and used Postum, then began to use Grape-Nuts although I had little faith it would do me any good.

"But I continued to use the food and have gained twenty pounds in weight and feel like another person in every way. I feel as if life had truly begun anew for me.

"I can eat anything I like now in moderation, suffer no ill effects, be on my feet from morning until night. Whereas a year ago they had to send me away from home for rest while others cleaned house for me, this spring I have been able to do it myself all alone.

"My breakfast is simply Grape-Nuts with cream and a cup of Postum, with sometimes an egg and a piece of toast, but generally only Grape-Nuts and Postum. And I can work until noon and not feel as tired as one hour's work would have made me a year ago."

"There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

BEGINNING EARLY.

"I have already promised ten cousins to marry them. I can see I shall never get through all my divorces."

MET ON HIS OWN GROUND.

Dishonest Politician Gets Little Satisfaction from Promise.

Congressman Longworth, at a dinner during the Republican convention in Chicago, talked about honest politics.

"Honest politics alone pays in the end," said he. "Your dishonest politician comes out like Lurgan of Cincinnati. Lurgan was canvassing for votes. He dropped in at a grocer's.

"'Good morning,' he said. 'I may count on your support, I hope?'

"'Why, no, Mr. Lurgan,' said the grocer. 'I've promised my support to your rival.'

"Lurgan laughed easily.

"'Ah, but, in politics,' said he, 'promising and performing are two different matters.'

"'In that case,' said the grocer, heartily, 'I shall be most happy to give you my promise, Mr. Lurgan.'"

Her Reason.

Not long ago there was tried in an Ohio court a suit for damages wherein the principal witness, a woman living near Dayton, was induced to come to court only after several subpoenas had been served upon her.

When the dilatory witness was finally brought before his honor, he said in his severest tone:

"What reason can you assign, madam, for disobeying the summons of the court?"

"I ain't got none, Jedge," answered the woman, meekly, "only we've got small-pox down to our place, an' I thought mebbe you'd be kinder prejudiced agin it."—Illustrated.

He'd Pull Hard.

"Senator Folker, who journeyed to Albany at the risk of his life to cast the vote that doomed racing in New York, had collected a number of instances of race-track trickery," said an Albany legislator.

"Discussing, one day, the way jockeys so often sold races, he said that there was a Gloucester jockey once, the rider of a favorite, who was overheard to say in a saloon, the night before the favorite ran:

"'I shan't win unless the reins break.'"

This sign is permanently attached to the front of the main building of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

What Does This Sign Mean?

It means that public inspection of the Laboratory and methods of doing business is honestly desired. It means that there is nothing about the business which is not "open and above-board."

It means that a permanent invitation is extended to anyone to come and verify any and all statements made in the advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Is it a purely vegetable compound made from roots and herbs — without drugs?

Come and See.

Do the women of America continually use as much of it as we are told?

Was there ever such a person as Lydia E. Pinkham, and is there any Mrs. Pinkham now to whom sick woman are asked to write?

Come and See.

This advertisement is only for doubters. The great army of women who know from their own personal experience that no medicine in the world equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female ills will still go on using and being benefited by it; but the poor doubting, suffering woman must, for her own sake, be taught confidence, for she also might just as well regain her health.

The Moabite Stone.

The so called Moabite stone was discovered by the Rev. F. Klein in 1868 among the ruins of Dhiban, the ancient Dibon. The stone was of black basalt, rounded at the top and bottom, two feet broad, three feet ten inches high and fourteen inches in thickness, but was unfortunately broken by the Arabs, whose cupidity had been aroused by the interest that was taken in it by the explorers. The fragments were afterward collected and laboriously fitted together, and the stone now stands in the Louvre at Paris. The inscription of thirty-four lines is in Hebrew-Phoenician characters and appears to be a record of Mesha, king of Moab, mentioned in II Kings iii, referring to his successful revolt against the king of Israel.—New York American.

Injured in Sawmill.

On Thursday afternoon Alcid Morrisette was painfully injured while working in the Plummer sawmill. In some way his overalls got caught on one of the shafts running close to the floor and his left leg was drawn under the shaft. The tearing of his clothing saved him from more serious and perhaps fatal injuries. Some of the bones in the ankle were quite badly crushed and he had an ugly flesh wound just above the ankle. He was taken to Thief River Falls and placed in the hospital for treatment. The injured limb was to be examined yesterday with the X-ray and the physicians would not state wether or not amputation will be necessary until a thorough examination has been made.

Sunny Brook John Says:

County option is a very much misunderstood term. It is very often confused with Local Option; intentionally, by the Anti-Saloon League, for the purpose of misleading, and unintentionally by many who do not know what the term means.

Local Option regards cities, villages and towns as the "units" and as such they vote on the license question. Local and individual control; this is home rule and stands for Local option.

County Option is not Local Option. There is no community of interests between the inhabitants of remote parts of the county. How frequently do you visit all the towns and villages in your county? Do you think it right or fair for some people in some distant part of your county to determine what you shall do, eat, drink or wear in your territory, town or village any more than they shall dictate what town improvements you shall make?

County Option makes the entire county the "unit"—that is, if the county at large votes dry. But if the county at large votes wet such vote is not binding upon the cities, villages and towns, nor upon any dry territory within the county. To illustrate: The county at large votes "no license" then no license can issue anywhere in the county; but, if the county at large votes "for license" such vote does not change any dry territory within the county, that is, it does not become wet by the county wide wet vote. Neither is the county wide wet vote binding upon the cities, villages and towns of the county. They still vote locally and independently of the county whether license shall be granted or not. Thus under the proposed law cities, villages and towns unfavorable to license have the right to govern themselves without interference from any other locality, while the same right is denied to cities, villages or towns which favor license.

Option means selection, but when you do select, select Sunny Brook Rye and you will never be sorry for it.

Yours as ever,
Sunny Brook John.

Variations in Cream Tests.

(By the Buttermaker.)

One of the common causes for dissatisfaction with selling cream is the variations in the test. It is quite a puzzle to the average man who has not had much experience with cream separators to understand why his test varies when the same separator run by the same man is used all the time, and the cows and feed are not changed. But the test does vary and this fact does not indicate that careless testing is being done as it is practically impossible to run a separator under farm conditions without having the cream vary. In the following the causes of these variatons are enumerated, applied to farm conditions. The causes are:

1. Variations in speed of separator.
2. Variations in rate of feeding separator.
3. Amount of water or skim milk used for flushing bowl.
4. Changes in per cent of butter fat in milk.
5. Changes in cream screw.

Speed of Separator.

A change in the speed of running the separator at once changes the per cent of butterfat in the cream. The higher it is speeded the greater is the amount of skim milk thrown out and this results in giving a smaller amount of high-testing cream. A low speed gives a large quantity of thinner cream.

Inflow of Milk

Many separator users think they always feed the separator at the same rate on account of the float governing the inflow. This is not the case, as at times the faucet is not opened quite its full capacity, or at one time the milk tank is kept full of milk which makes the inflow some faster than at other times when the tank may be allowed to run low most of the time. Whenever the flow of milk into the bowl is increased a larger amount of thinner cream is the result.

Flushing the Bowl.

A common cause of variations in cream tests is connected with flushing the bowl. It is a very easy matter to vary a pint or more in the amount of water or skim milk used for flushing and this alone may be suffiscient to change the test of the cream 2 to 5 per cent.

Variations in Milk.

Variations in milk is another common cause of variations in cream tests. It is a well known fact that the milk of an entire herd may vary in per cent of butterfat from one day to another, more or less. A sudden change in the weather or excitement of any kind may make quite a difference. If the milk of a herd of cows whose average test is separated so cream tests 40 per cent, and the test of the milk suddenly rises to 4.25, which will often occur, the cream would then test about 42.5 per cent.

Cream Screw.

The per cent of fat in cream is readily changed, as is well known, by changing the cream screw. But this is seldom done on the farm and cannot be counted a common cause for test varying.

The idea that the feed of the cow controls the test of the cream is quite a common one but it seems almost unnecessary to state that this is without foundation, except when the cows are fed a starvation ration.

A. R. Jones, the St. Hilaire man who is seeking the republican nomination for Sheriff, was a caller in Plummer on Wednesday. He is making an active campaign and says hhe outlook at present is most favorable.

J. W. McGinty, who is seeking the nomination from the democratic voters for the sheriff's office, was here on Thursday looking into the political situation a little. He was formerly a resident of Poplar River township and has a big list of friends in the southeastern part of the county. Mr. McGinty, if nominated, will give his republican opponent after the primaries a mighty busy session before election day.

Herman F. Anderson, of Sanders township, was a business visitor here on Wednesday morning. His business was along the political lines as he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Superintendent of Schools. In education and experience Mr. Anderson is eminently well qualified for the office and in addition he impesses one as being on the square and a gentleman. He has had some years experience teaching in Norman and Todd counties and recently completed a term as principal of the Perley schools. He is also a graduate of the Moorhead Normal.

Will Applaud From On High.

When William Jennings Bryan addresses the people of Minnesota from his platform on the state fair grounds Monday, Aug. 31, he will be moved to make his remarks, not only to the thousands who will crowd every foot of ground space within hearing distance of him, but also to some several unusually fortunate individuals who will hear him from on high.

There are four airships now entered in the speed, distance and endurance airship races scheduled for each day of the State fair, Aug. 31 to Sept. 5, and of these Strobel's "Columbia," Horace Wilde's "Eagle" and Case's "Flier" will, under favorable conditions, carry one or two men in addition to the operator. Prominent politicians who are versed in things areonautic were acquainted with this fact and began promptly to wire for "accomodations" in the aerial craft during the hour announced for Bryan's speech.

Airship operators do not carry passengers as a pastime and the figure placed upon the "service" was almost prohibitive, but at least four Minnesota men will sail the heavens while Bryan is making the welkin ring at the Minnesota state fair grounds and unless a gale should be blowing, the four airships, with operators and passengers, will hover over the peerless one as he parts with words of wisdom without money and without price.

Although Bryan has had a most climatic career of stumping the various states it is presumed that Aug. 31 will see him for the first time seeking the plaudits of an aerial grandstand.

RACE RIOT NOTES.

Springfield, Ill., was completely in the control of a mob for several hours, the police, sheriff's force and troop D of the First cavalry, and the members of Gatling gun section of the Illinois National Guard being unable to do anything to control the mob, which was rendered furious by the removal from the city of George Richardson, a negro who assaulted a white woman. As the result of the mob's actions one man is dead, another will probably die and several others were injured, while Loper's restaurant was wrecked, the shanties of a number of negroes residing in the "bad lands" burned, and Gov. Deneen called a number of companies of the Illinois National Guard to Springfield to preserve order. Among the injured was R. W. Chafin, candidate for president of the United States on the Prohibition party ticket, who was struck in the head with a brick.

To the death list of the Springfield, Ill., race war were added the names of William Donnigan, colored, killed by the mob, and Frank Delmore, shot. With the arrival of the Second and Seventh Infantry regiments, I. N. G., and two squadrons of the First cavalry, all from Chicago, the entire National Guard of Illinois, with the exception of the Sixth infantry and the Eighth infantry (colored) was on duty in the riot-ridden districts. In all 4,200 guardsmen were in the city. The troopers suppressed several small outbreaks. Private J. B. Klein of the First regiment, who killed a man at Kankakee while guarding the ammunition car, was exonerated by a court of inquiry.

One more death, that of J. W. Scott, was added to the fatality list of the Springfield (Ill.) riots. National Guard patrols were fired on twice from ambush, but no one was hit. Gov. Deneen issued proclamations offering rewards for the arrest of the murderers and urging all citizens who had information about the rioting to present it to the grand jury.

Gov. Deneen ordered the First and Fourth regiments to return home from Springfield, Ill., believing the remaining troops enough to maintain order. Business men in a mass meeting pledged themselves to assist in the enforcement of law and justice and demanded protection for all citizens, whether white or black.

At Huntington, L. I., a negro who attacked a white woman was put under heavy guard in the local lockup, after having been rescued by deputies from a crowd of angry citizens.

MILITARY FORCE AT CAPITAL IS REDUCED

FOUR REGIMENTS ARE ORDERED HOME, LEAVING 1,500 MEN AT SPRINGFIELD.

NUMBER IS AMPLE TO HANDLE SITUATION

Determination of Governor to Restore Order Dampens Mob Spirit—Hard to Get Definite Testimony Against Lynchers.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 20.—With the departure for their homes Wednesday of the First and Fourth infantry regiments, which have been on riot duty here, it was announced that the Third and Fourth infantry will depart Thursday. This will reduce the military force here to about 1,500 men, an ample number to handle the situation, which has been much less threatening since the meeting of the special grand jury Wednesday.

The determination to dispense with two additional regiments was reached at a conference of Gov. Deneen, Maj. Gen. Young and Adjt. Gen. Scott. The reduction of the force will save the state about $20,000 a day.

"I am of the opinion that the departure of the troops will do much to complete the quieting of the city," said Adjt. Gen. Scott. "The presence of the soldiery has the same effect on some people that a brass band has on a small boy. The small boy has to dance to the music. To some men, notably young ones, the sight of soldiers is in itself exciting, no matter what the object of their presence is. The young man feels that he must get into the picture, and sometimes he does it in a way that calls for repression.

Sheriff Can Control Situation.

"Conditions in this city now are such that an active sheriff with a good force of deputies, re-enforced by the police, can be safely trusted with the public security."

The First infantry left over the Chicago & Alton road at ten o'clock. This route avoided Kankakee, where one of the members of the regiment bayoneted Earl Nelson while the command was on the way to Springfield. No official of the state was willing to acknowledge, however, that the change from the Illinois Central had been made because of the trouble at Kankakee.

The Fourth infantry, whose companies are in the principal towns of the southern part of the state, began to break up early in the morning. The various units left Springfield on trolley cars and trains, and the last one did not get away until late in the afternoon.

Mob Spirit Is Dampened.

The effect of the news that the militia had begun to depart was awaited anxiously by the state and city authorities. Since the determination of Gov. Deneen to restore order at any cost was shown by the summoning of 4,200 soldiers to the city, there has been a notable dampening of the mob spirit. At the same time threats as to what would happen when the troops left have been many, and there is a well-defined fear that lawless individuals who have not been apprehended may endeavor to renew the disturbance.

A counterbalancing effect is expected from the special grand jury, which Tuesday indicted George Richardson for the alleged attack upon Mrs. Mabel Hallam, and which Wednesday began to consider evidence against rioters. The appeals of Gov. Deneen, the Chamber of Commerce, the Ministers' association and other civic bodies, that citizens generally furnish information to the state's attorney concerning the riot, have met with such a prompt response that the authorities are led to the belief that the better elements realize the danger unless the mob spirit is quenched.

Hard to Get Strong Testimony.

The inquiry into the lynching of Scott Burton was begun before a coroner's jury Wednesday, but there was a noticeable lack of definite testimony. Most of the witnesses described the scenes in the "black belt," but when questioned as to the identity of members of the mob their memories failed them. If this condition continues, the chance of convicting the persons charged with leadership in the riots is remote.

Wednesday morning was the quietest since the race trouble began. An inspection of outposts after midnight showed that the streets were deserted and that sentries and patrols had little to occupy their attention. Occasionally a shot would be heard, when nervous militiamen had mistaken shadows for lurking marauders. There was no indication of a renewal of the "sniping" at pickets which caused commotion Tuesday morning. The readiness of the militia to return such fire had discouraged those who attempted to terrify the troops by attacks from ambush.

The only untoward incident occurred in Woodside, a mining district, where stones were thrown at deputy sheriffs who had been sent to guard the shafts. The deputies fired in the direction from which the missiles came, and there was no further trouble.

Five Are Burned to Death.

Marshal, N. C., Aug. 20.—The home of Wofford Tweed, on Laurel mountain, was destroyed by fire, and his wife, their three children, and Mrs. Murray Tweed were burned to death.

State Banks.

St. Paul—The 607 state banks in Minnesota have deposits subject to check amounting to $28,667,012, and had $4,228,191 in cash and on hand on July 15, when Public Examiner Scheffer issued a call for the statement of conditions. There were only 466 state banks a year ago, and despite the fact that the Security Bank of Minneapolis, with a capital of $13,000,000, was made a national bank, the total assets of the banks is practically the same, $90,000,000.

The detailed statement as issued by the public examiner follows:

Resources—Loans and discounts, $67,461,307.92; overdrafts, $399,980.19; United States bonds, $6,440; other stocks, bonds and securities, $1,350,682.77; banking house, furniture and fixtures, $3,077,732.71; other real estate, $903,568.24; due from banks, $12,452,604.46; checks and cash items, $519,509.65; cash on hand, $4,228,191.88; other resources, $135,412.82. ### The Old Red River Cart.

Hamline—According to the best authorities and the oldest citizens thirty-five years elapsed between the last appearance of a yoke of oxen and a Red river cart on the streets of St. Paul and a visit by the strange institution of pre-railroad days to the busy Saintly City thorofare recently. The ox cart of the old Red river days, the same old ox cart in which settlers from Pembina used to travel to the state capital, has been recreated by some genius at the state fair grounds so that the picture of the attack on Fort Ridgely, to be given each evening of the Minnesota state fair, Aug. 31 to Sept. 5, may be complete.

During the progress of the great historical spectacle, which will call for the appearance of 300 Sioux Indians and 600 white men, a wagon train of the olden days will be seen wending its way across the prairie to a farm house in the neighborhood of the historic fort of '62, and it is in the building of this farm house and its environs that the amusement department of the state fair has taken the greatest pride. For each detail, from the double bucket well to the rail fence, the haystacks and the chimney built on the outside, is complete, and the yoke of oxen dragging the old Red river cart is to be the principal feature of this part of the picture.

Bad Milk Shipper Fined.

Crookston—Deputy State Creamery Inspector A. O. Storvick, of Crookston, has secured the punishment of the first violator of the pure cream and milk laws recently implicated by discoveries at Crookston express transfer. Charles A. Carlson, of Kennedy, Minn., north of here on the St. Vincent line, pleaded guilty and was fined $15 and costs. Carlson admitted that the milk and cream were a week old before he shipped them and brought them into Kennedy on Saturday. No local trains run thru Kennedy on Sunday, and consequently the cream and milk remained in that station all night, all day Sunday and Sunday night, until late Monday afternoon. The amount was ten gallons. Judge C. V. Johnson, of Kennedy, heard the case.

Oppose R. R. Legislation.

St. Paul—Twin City railroad employes in all branches of service will hold a monster mass meeting at Bowlby hall, Sixth and Robert streets, to take steps to oppose proposed legislation claimed to be hostile to the railroads that it is likely to result in measures seriously affecting the interests of employes.

The purpose of the meeting is to organize employes of all branches of the service to fight hostile legislation from its inception, and the movement is expected to have a considerable influence at the party primaries September 15.

Minneapolis—With threatening revolvers, seven tramps chased Watchman W. Larson, of the C. A. Smith Lumber company in North Minneapolis, from Yard No. 2 to the office, a mile distant, as hard as he could run.

Rochester—While John Pennington and Walter Ewald were busy extracting rocks from the stone quarry here they were buried beneath tons of rock and dirt without a moment's warning.

NO SURPLUS FUNDS THERE.

Beggar Satisfied with Evidence of Poverty in Sight.

Two old Hebrew beggars were traveling together through the residence section of Pittsburg not long ago, in quest of contributions toward their joint capital.

Presently they passed a handsome residence, from which sweet sounds of music issued. It was Ike's turn and hopefully he ascended the steps to the front door, eagerly watched by Jake, who expected quite a handsome addition to their funds.

His consternation was great consequently when he beheld Ike returning crestfallen and empty-handed.

Anxiously running to meet him, he said: "Vell, Ikey, how did you make out with the good people?"

"Ach, Jakey," replied Ike, "there was no use asking in there, because they are very poor people themselves. Just think—two lovely ladies playing on one piano!"—Judge's Library.

OF COURSE HE WOULDN'T.

"You certainly wouldn't marry a girl for her money, would you, Tom?"

"Of course not; neither would I have the heart to let her become an old maid because she happened to be well off."

India-Gestion.

Here is a story the bishop of London told John Morley the other day, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. They were holding an "exam." in an East-end school, and the teacher was explaining the chief products of the Indian empire. One child recited a list of comestibles. "Please, miss, India produces curries and pepper and citron and chillies and chutney and—and—" "Yes, yes, and what comes after that?" "Please, miss, I don't remember." "Yes, but think. What is India so famous for?" "Please, 'm, India-gestion."

"Ladies First."

In this age of leveling up and leveling down, and of attempting to place women on the same plane as men in everything, chivalry is nearly a dead letter. Many wish it were altogether so, regarding it as a bar to the full emancipation of women. There can be no traffic here with such wrong-headed and wrong heart-notions. In the healthy atmosphere of sport such notions wither and fade like exotics in an alien soil. "Ladies first!" is an abiding principle with all who are sportsmen.—Frye's Magazine.

Absorbing.

Silas—Ha! Ha! Reuben got bunkoed again.

Cyrus—Do tell! What was it this time?

Silas—Why, Reuben saw an ad that stated that for one dollar they would send him some of the most absorbing literature he ever read.

Cyrus—And what did they send him?

Silas—Why, they sent him a pamphlet entitled "How Blotters Are Made" and another entitled "Points on Turkish Towels."

SELF DELUSION

Many People Deceived by Coffee.

We like to defend our indulgencies and habits even though we may be convinced of their actual harmfulness.

A man can convince himself that whisky is good for him on a cold morning, or beer on a hot summer day—when he wants the whisky or beer.

It's the same with coffee. Thousands of people suffer headaches and nervousness year after year but try to persuade themselves the cause is not coffee—because they like coffee.

"While yet a child I commenced using coffee and continued it," writes a Wis. man, "until I was a regular coffee fiend. I drank it every morning and in consequence had a blinding headache nearly every afternoon.

"My folks thought it was coffee that ailed me, but I liked it and would not admit it was the cause of my trouble, so I stuck to coffee and the headaches stuck to me.

"Finally, the folks stopped buying coffee and brought home some Postum. They made it right (directions on pkg.) and told me to see what difference it would make with my head, and during the first week on Postum my old affliction did not bother me once. From that day to this we have used nothing but Postum in place of coffee—headaches are a thing of the past and the whole family is in fine health."

"Postum looks good, smells good, tastes good, is good, and does good to the whole body." "There's a Reason."

In Your Youth.

And then there was the time you took Her to the county fair. You wore that new $9.98 suit; had Dewey Munger's best roadster and rubber-tired rig and a new whip with a red ribbon tied around it. She wore a white dress with a blue sash, and a string of blue glass beads about her neck. Mind those entries in your "daily expense" book—candy, 10 cents; peanuts, 5 cents; merry-go-round tickets, 25 cents; side show, 20 cents; weinerwurst sandwiches, 20 cents; lemonade, 10 cents; ice cream, 20 cents; shooting gallery, 10 cents; tintypes—you've got 'em yet, you sitting and she standing with her hand on your shoulder—50 cents. Gee, but you thought you "blew yourself" that day, didn't you? Los Angeles Express.

What a Poultry Man Says About 20-Mule Team Borax.

As I am in the poultry business, I had ten white chicks to wash and prepare for a show. I used "20-Mule Team" Soap for washing the birds, and I can say from years of experience washing white birds, never before have I found a soap or Borax that cleaned my birds so fine and easy. I had a great deal of comment on my birds being so white. J. A. Dinwiddie, New Market, Tenn. All dealers—½, 1 and 5 lb. cartons. Sample and booklet, 5c. Pacific Coast Borax Co., Chicago.

Is Pe-ru-na Useful for Catarrh?

Should a list of the ingredients of Peruna be submitted to any medical expert, of whatever school or nationality, he would be obliged to admit without reserve that the medicinal herbs composing Peruna are of two kinds. First, standard and well-tried catarrh remedies. Second, well-known and generally acknowledged tonic remedies. That in one or the other of these uses they have stood the test of many years' experience by physicians of different schools. There can be no dispute about this, whatever. Peruna is composed of some of the most efficacious and universally used herbal remedies for catarrhal diseases, and for such conditions of the human system as require a tonic. Each one of the principal ingredients of Peruna has a reputation of its own in the cure of some phase of catarrh or as a tonic medicine.

The fact is, chronic catarrh is a disease which is very prevalent. Many thousand people know they have chronic catarrh. They have visited doctors over and over again, and been told that their case is one of chronic catarrh. It may be of the nose, throat, lungs, stomach or some other internal organ. There is no doubt as to the nature of the disease. The only trouble is the remedy. This doctor has tried to cure them. That doctor has tried to prescribe for them.

No other household remedy so universally advertised carries upon the label the principal active constituents, showing that Peruna invites the full inspection of the critics.

The Spider and the Fly.

In the long warfare between the spider and the fly, the latter has had the housewife for its auxiliary and friend. The flies have been tolerated, even fed and nurtured, while the spiders and their webs have been ruthlessly destroyed. This unremitting and unrelenting war against it keeps the spider population down, while the flies increase and multiply by the millions and ten of millions. almost unchecked. The spider is ugly and his web is unsightly in the estimation of most people, but spiders hurt no human creature. They feed on flies, which are the foes of mankind, and do mankind a service.—Philadelphia Press.

JOHNSON —IS— CHOSEN

Nominated for 3rd Term as Governor.

Delegates, Deaf to all Pleas Against the Nomination, Cry "Pick a Winner."

Governor is Non-commital About Acceptance.

THE TICKET.

Governor—John A. Johnson.

Lieutenant Governor—J. J. Reiter, Rochester.

Secretary of State—R. F. Lamb, Slayton.

State Treasurer—P. H. Nelson, Hibbing.

Attorney General—M. E. Matthews, Marshall.

Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners—H. P. Bjorge, Otter Tail county; Robert Mee, Faribault.

Minneapolis, Aug. 20.—John A. Johnson must lead the Democratic party through the Minnesota state campaign.

The democratic state convention today considered no other name for head of the state ticket. In the face of Governor John A. Johnson's positive statement that he would decline son of Duluth, assistant secretaries.

On motion of Frank A. Day, the members of the committees were chosen by judicial districts, and a recess was taken so the districts could caucus.

Frank A. Day made a suggestion that a committee be appointed to make up a list of candidates for state offices other than governor. He said there were usually candidates agreed on for each place, but owing to the demoralized condition of the party as to the nominee for governor, there had been no consideration given. He did not believe it possible to make up from the floor a well balanced ticket. A motion was adopted to have each judicial ditsrict select one member of a committee to consider and report on a ticket, aside from governor.

Hennepin had quite a contest over a place on this committee. Five candidates were named and a vote was taken to eliminate all but the two highest. This left S. A. Stockwell and W. H. Williams, and Williams withdrew in favor of Stockwell.

A recess was then taken till 2 p. m. to give the committees a chance to do their work.

The Johnson tide swept everything before it, from the first gathering of the clans in the hotel lobbies today. Several friends of the governor, including Frank A. Day, A. C. Weiss of Duluth and S. D. Works of Mankato, went through the crowd, declaring that Johnson would not accept and must not be nominated. Their words fell on deaf ears.

"It is no use," said Senator Works. "The more we talk the stronger they are determined to nominate him."

The delegates had their minds made up, and while a few were talking for Armson, the accepted plan was to name Johnson and adjourn, leaving him to handle it.

Nothing else was considered. The making of a slate on the minor offices was deferred till the big question was settled. M. E. Mathews of if nominated, the determination of the delegates was to name him and adjourn.

Hennepin county put up the deal, selecting A. B. Choate to make a nominating speech for Johnson. After the convention had met Aitkin county, which is first to be called on the roll for nominations, was asked to yield to Hennepin and consented.

Frank A. Day made a plea for Governor Johnson in calling the convention to order, declaring that in face of his statements he should not be nominated, but his plea was unavailing.

The rest of the state ticket was selected by a committee of nineteen, chosen from the judicial districts. Nominations were deferred until after the noon recess.

Frank A. Day, as chairman of the state committee, called to order, and asked the convention to keep still while they had a speech from "our great leader, William J. Bryan."

A phonograph was turned on, and gave a five minute talk from Bryan on "The Labor Question." Cheers followed and then the delegates stood and waved flags while the band played "The Star Spangled Banner."

Chairman Day invited all democratic mayors to the platform. Mayor Haynes was not present, but Mayors Lawlor of St. Paul, Armson of Stillwater, Wolf of Staples, Donaghue of East Grand Forks, and Shirley of Breckenridge were cheered as they went up. Mayor Haynes got a hand when he entered a few minutes later.

Chairman Day then delivered his message to the convention from Governor Johnson. He began by saying that his term of office as chairman should and would come to a close after four years.

"You ought to applaud that," he said reprovingly.

Mr. Day said that while he had not been in entire harmony with all elements of the party during his service as chairman, but notwithstanding his mistakes and differences the democratic part had gotten along fairly well.

Richard Tattersfield of Minneapolis was named for secretary, Frank S. Battley of St. Paul and Andrew Nelson of Duluth, assistant secretaries.

Marshall was around trying to head off his boom for attorney general, but had poor success. Declinations did not seem to go today.

Congressman Hammond did not make his appearance at the conventiton hall or around the hotels. He remained in his room at the Majestic hotel.

Governor Johnson avoided the convention and remained at his office in St. Paul.

Some tried to get up a scheme for a committee to wait on Governor Johnson and tell him that the convention was beyond control and he must alter his determination. This was tnrued down, as it was felt that such a step would only bring another refusal and put the governor farther in the hole than ever.

The sixth district held a caucus, but postponed action until after the convention. The only name mentioned for congress was Dr. A. J. Gilkinson of Osakis.

Practically every county in the state was represented in the convention, and in the delegate seats almost a thousand were taken care of. The gallery crowd was small, however.

The first congressional district caucus agreed upon Andrew French of Plainview to make the race for congress against James A. Tawney. Mr. French was a candidate two years ago.

St. Paul, Aug. 20.—Gov. Johnson was seen at the capitol last evening following the reception to the National Editorial association. The question of acceptance was put to him, but only a non-commital reply received.

"I am completely up in the air," said the governor. "I don't know what to do. One thing is certain, I am not going to give out any statement on the matter tonight.

"Will you tomorrow?"

"Perhaps so. But if not tomorrow, probably not for several days. It has all come up to me so suddenly, I want time to think it over. I have nothing to say for publication, in fact, have not yet received official notification of my nomination."

All the Time—Covered with Torturing Eczema—Doctor Said Sores Would Last for Years—Perfect Cure by Cuticura.

"My baby niece was suffering from that terrible torture, eczema. It was all over her body but the worst was on her face and hands. She cried and scratched all the time and could not sleep night or day from the scratching. I had her under the doctor's care for a year and a half and he seemed to do her no good. I took her to the best doctor in the city and he said that she would have the sores until she was six years old. But if I had depended on the doctor my baby would have lost her mind and died from the want of aid. But I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and she was cured in three months. Alice L. ### The Old-Time Boy.

The boy of to-day who complains of anything should be made to read the rules and regulations laid down for boys in old colonial days. He had to stand up at the table. He must go to bed at candlelight. He must not sit down in the presence of a visitor. He must not shout. He must not run without cause. He must not throw stones at animals or birds. He must not idle on the street, and if he had been found trying to stand on his head he would have gone to jail for a week.

The little boy was thoughtful.

Entered at the Post-office in Plummer, Minn. as Second Class Mail Matter.

William Jennings Bryan has received a trained mule as a mascot from the Minnesota State Agricultural Society and intends to have it properly named by the newspaper correspondents. Why not call it "Minne-He-Haw"?

The phrase "pledged to no interests save home interests" most likely means "to —— with everything but my own interests." The politician who uses that kind of doctrine for a platform wont think much of his own good judgement after the primaries.

At the present time the chances seem largely in favor of the re-nomination and election of Representative J. J. Opsahl. It is estimated that he will have a nice plurality in Beltrami and Clearwater counties, and a clean majority of the votes cast in Red Lake county.

The Thief River Falls News is running a display "ad" on behalf of the candidacy of H. E. Ives for representative. At the top and bottom of the reading matter there is a deep, plain black rule. It may be a little early to go into mourning for that particular candidate but the News editor well knows that the black border is very appropriate.

John A. Johnson will run for governor for the third time. He was renominated by the democratic State convention on Wednesday and has announced that he will accept the nomination and make the run. Just a few days ago he announced that under no condition would he accept the nomination again. The present indications are that there will be very few "Johnson Republicans" this year, and they are always necessary to elect Johnson governor.

Was Oscar Sall Murdered?

Charles G. Sall and Louis Sall, of Equality township, are very much worried as to what has happened to their brother, Oscar Sall, who was last seen at a bowling alley in Valdez, Alaska, on July 25th. The missing man has been engaged in mining in Alaska for several years and had accumulated considerable valuable property. He was here for a visit with his mother and brothers last spring and returned to Alaska early in the summer.

The news of his disappearance was conveyed to his relatives here in a letter received by Charles Sall last week from a close friend of the missing man and the circumstances are such as to indicate that he has been a victim of foul play. He had been in a hospital at Valdez for some time and had just been discharged as cured from his illness. He had intended to start for the interior to look after his mines but a close investigation proved that he had not been seen at any point on the inland trail. It was also thought that he might have left Valdez by boat but he was not a passenger on any boat leaving the harbor at that time as was proved by investigations of the passenger lists and officers of all the boats.

The letter and newspaper clippings show that he had been seen as before stated at the bowling alley, but no further clue can be found. Two unknown women and a man had called and asked about him at the hospital on the same day but there is no clue as to their identity. A man and his wife were found who claimed that they had heard cries for help in the night but when the man got out to see who was calling everything was quiet. Further than this nothing is known.

It appears that the missing man was known to frequently carry large sums of money and he had quite recently sold his interest in one mine for $75,000 in cash and $75,000 worth of stock in a company to operate the mine. This mine was sold to what is called the Kudeheimer Company. The papers belonging to the missing man have also disappeared.

On Friday last Charles Sall went to Crookston where he laid all information before Congressman Steenerson who will take prompt action to secure the aid of the United States Marshals in investigating the matter in a most thorough manner. It is suspected that he may have been done away with by parties interested in securing the mines which he had operated and who figured on jumping the claims after he had failed to sustain title to them. This contingency will be closely watched by his relatives with the aid of Congressman Steenerson.

Mayfield Murmurs.

Miss Ingebor Twedten left home on Monday and went to North Dakota where she will work through the fall.

Sever Maaren, accompanied by Gjermund Kleven, left for Hatton, N. D., where they will take in the threshing season.

The Bolstad family entertained a lot of the young girls in the neighborhood last Monday and all had quite a good time

Inga and Minnie Maaren were visitors at the home of G. T. Kleven on Sunday. They had a very pleasant time playing various games.

Rev. Olof M. Wangensteen will have preaching services in the school house in District No. 33, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Everybody is invited to attend.

John Bammerud and son, Elvin, Jens and Sigurd Grothe, Edward and Rangvold Reiersgaard, Oscar Lovaas and Ole Rystad, all in one company, left the first of the week and drove to North Dakota with five teams.

Nick Halvorson made a brief trip to Thief River Falls on Wednesday.

Lenard Brekke left for Russell, N. D., on Wednesday with the Bergan threshing outfit and will work for Mr. Bergan.

Wilhelm Michelet, the Thief River Falls lawyer who aspires to the office of County Attorney, was a political visitor in Plummer yesterday. Mr. Michelet met a lot of people during his visit and made a very good impression. He is a young man with a good record for ability and spuare dealing and during his five years of law practise in Red Lake County has made a host of staunch friends all over the county. At this distance his nomination and election seem almost certain.

THE ENCHANTED MESA.

Story of Great Disaster Which Wiped Out the Population.

The story of the enchanted mesa was but a tradition when in 1541 the Spaniards first visited the pueblo of Acoma, in what is now Valencia county, N. M. Powerful tribes inhabited the region. These tribes or nations were constantly at war with each other, which accounts for the fortified character of the villages of the natives. The Queres, whose descendants now occupy Acoma, held this region and dwelt in small fortified towns, the capital of which was Acoma. It was not, however, the Acoma of today, but a city perched upon the top of the great rock now called Mesa Encantada. It was the magnificent city of the nation, and there dwelt the great men of the tribe, together with their families.

The rock then, as now, was unscalable, save at the one point where a narrow and precipitous trail led up the dizzy height. While not the most convenient dwelling place, for neither water nor vegetation was to be found upon the summit, it was safe from the attacks of foes. One man at the top of the trail could defend the city against the warriors of the entire west. One day, while a large number of the inhabitants were at work in the fields on the plain below or attending to the affairs of the tribe in the various neighboring villages, something within the rock or in the earth beneath it awoke to life and motion. There was a heaving, a squirming and a shivering of the great rock, and, with a mighty noise, it parted in twain, and a portion fell in fragments to the plain below.

Such persons as were carried down in the debris were crushed to death. A worse fate remained for those left prisoners on the top of the mesa, for that which fell carried away the narrow trail, the only means of ascent and descent. The stranded ones perished from thirst and starvation. The present Acoma family are the descendants of disaster. Ethnologists who visited the top of the rock some years ago found unmistakable evidences that it had once been the site of habitation. The story of the disaster had previous to that time been discredited and considered but an idle Indian legend. The discovery of the ancient ruins, however, seemed confirmatory of the tale, and it has since been credited.—Denver Field and Farm.

State Capitol in Butter.

For the first time in its history the $4,000,000 Minnesota state capitol is to be reproduced in butter at the Minnesota State fair. Edward K. Slater of St. Paul, superinteddent of the dairy department, has contracted for the several pounds of butter necessary to produce an immense model of the finest building in the state. This model is to be the big feature of the dairy exhibit this year, and to have the place of honor in the mammoth refrigerator in the new dairy building.

Last year this refrigerator, ninety feet long and sixteen feet wide, and costing $6,000, was devoted to the exhibits of various individual dairy concerns, but this year it is to see an innovation in that the entire space for exhibits in the refrigerator is to be filed by the different exhibits from creameries throughout the state.

In addition to samples of butter in various form, the prize winning creameries of the state will contribute for exhibition purposes during Aug. 31 to Sept. 5th, the one hundred cups, thirteen silver sets the scores of medals, and the five $100 silk banners which have been won at national shows by the products of Minnesota creameries. But seven of these silk banners have been awarded in the United States; five of them belong to the creamery people of Minnesota.

FIRE AND FLOOD AT AUGUSTA, GA.

THE CITY SUFFERS FROM TWO TERRORS AND IS ISOLATED FROM OUTSIDE.

Score of Deaths Caused. The Swollen Streams Take Toll in Human Lives. Wide Territory in South Suffers.

Atlanta, Aug. 27.—Floods have isolated Augusta, Ga., and in the darkness last night resulting from the crippling of the lighting system, fire threatened to destroy portions of the city.

More than twenty lives have been lost and enormous damages done to property by the floods that are prevailing in Western South Carolina and Eastern Georgia.

Railroads are blocked and cummunication by telephone and telegraph has been largely interrupted. The flood is the worst that has prevailed in twenty years.

Nineteen of the persons who perished lost their lives when the steel bridge over the Watree river at Camden, S. C., was destroyed. Twenty-five persons were on the bridge watching the surging waters when the 150-foot span gave away, and only six of those who were on the bridge have been accounted for.

Among those who are known to have been drowned are M. D. Radborn and his son. A Mr. Savage and two negroes were caught on the top of a tall tree and were saved.

Southern railway trains from Asheville to Spartensburg ran into a washout near Saluda and Engineer London was killed and the fireman badly injured.

Ten feet of water is standing in the union station at Augusta, which is three blocks from the river, and not a foot of ground inside the city limits is above water.

The loss will exceed $500,000 and it may possibly go over $1,000,000.

NIGHT RIDERS

South Dakota Towns Are Raided by Masked Men.

Aberdeen, S. D., Aug. 26.—Revenge for the arrest of several suspected horse thieves is believed to be the cause of the raid of the towns of Lowry and Akaska by night riders at an early hour this morning. Both towns narrowly escaped being wiped out by fire.

All the buildings are frame structures and furnished good fuel for the flames. Both towns are in Walworth county on the river extension of the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad and only a few miles apart.

Lowry was the first town raided. Herman's general store was fired by the raiders and the flames spread rapidly to adjoining buildings. Seven masked men were seen riding away but no attempt was made to follow for the town was in danger of being destroyed.

While the citizens were fighting the fire a telephone message was received from Akaska asking for aid and stating that the town had been fired by raiders. Similar messages were received at Hoven and other nearby towns.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Preached His Own Funeral Sermon.

Rev. G. L. Morrill, pastor of the People's church, prepared his own funeral services. He made five phonographic records, heard them played over afterward and then deposited the wax cylinders in a safety deposit vault.

The records made by the preacher consisted of the Twenty-third psalm, the song, "Shall We Gather at the River," verses from the poem "Immortality," "The Lord's Prayer," and Gottschalk's "Last Hope." This last the Rev. Mr. Morrill, who was formerly a musician, played on a piano.

"These verses and music have all been rendered by me at the funerals of my father, mother and two brothers. I wanted to have them said at my own funeral, too, and thought to say them myself was the best way about it. I am 50 years old now, but do not expect to die yet for a great while, but I thought it best to have my services prepared. These records will all be played over at my funeral. I tell you it sounds strange to hear them played over and realize that I had prepared selections for my own funeral."

Dog Adopts a Man.

Minneapolis.—Louis Lienhart, who has charge of the dog pound conducted by the Minneapolis Humane sosiety at Twenty-first avenue N and the river, has been adopted by a big black and white spotted dog.

The dog's days were numbered. He had been picked up as a stray by the dog catcher, and was doomed to die, when one day last week a man came along, and, paying the $2 required for redeeming dogs, took the dog away.

This was in the morning and that night Lienhart was awakened by the touch of something cold on his face. Rubbing his eyes open he gazed into the countenance of the spotted dog he had sold. The dog had not only made the return trip to the pound, but had hunted up Lienhart's apartment and crawled in thru the window which had been left partly open.

Fort Ridgely Anniversary.

Fairfax.—More than 5,000 people assembled to-day in the grassy amphitheater cast up out of the rugged rock by nature at Fort Ridgely, to commemorate the forty-sixth anniversary of the last great battle fought in the historic old post with the Indians. Every village and town in Renville county was represented by a heavy delegation, while spectators traveled from all points of the state to witness the celebration. D. W. Moore, who was located on the Upper Agency at the time of the uprising, and who brought the first news to St. Paul of the surviving missionaries, journeyed all the way from Colorado Springs, accompanied by his wife, to attend the anniversary celebration, and delivered a reminiscent address on the early days.

Polk County Fair Exhibit.

Crookston.—After having been prepared in many different pleasing designs by twenty Polk county girls, the Polk county agricultural exhibit for the Minnesota state fair was shipped from Crookston and will be erected at the fair grounds by Magnus Lundberg, J. By invitation the exhibit will be taken from St. Paul after the state fair to the Illinois state fair at Springfield, Ill., where it will also be shown under the auspices of land men of the Northwest. The exhibition has been on display at the auditorium at Crookston for some time and promises to rate very high.

BRAVE MEN HONORED.

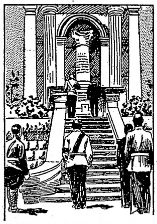
Japan Raises Monument to Russians Killed at Port Arthur.

London.—The peaceful epilogue of a great military drama was given at Port Arthur recently when a curious picturesque and touching ceremony was performed. Through the initiative of Gen. Oshima, governor of Kwang-Tung, Japan has put up a collective monument to the remains of the Russian defenders slain in the siege of Port Arthur. "This measure serves two purposes," says "L'Illustration." "Many of the soldiers, in the first place, had a merely provisional burial. They were buried where they fell, and the place was marked by a cross of wood or uncarved stone.



Inauguration of Port Arthur Monument.

This made of Port Arthur a graveyard that was eloquent but not dignified. In the second place, the proverbial rapacity of the low class Chinese does not spare the poor remains of the dead. To steal a button from a tunic, the scabbard of a sword, if not rings, watches and other valuable objects, the thieves will dig up the corpses and profane them without the slightest compunction. Therefore, for convenience in guarding the graves, as well as for the honor due to the brave, the collective tomb was made and dedicated in the presence of mingled emissaries of the czar and the Japanese authorities."

Gen. Logi was delegated by the emperor of Japan to preside at the function. On his side the czar sent Gen. Gerugrao and Admiral Massevitch, as well as Gen. Tchitchakov, commandant of the troops of Harbin, and many officers and privates, all ex-soldiers of Port Arthur. The wounds and scars of conflict were still to be seen on them.

A PICTURESQUE PRINCESS.

Touring Country with Many Servants and Big Menagerie.

Washington.—Who is now touring this country, and who is quite the most picturesque personage who has visited our shores in many moons? She is at present sojourning in this city, and with her are three maids, by courtesy French; a first, a second and a third attache; a marshal, a courier, a butler, a chauffeur, and, for good measure, three or four other men servants. And that's not all. With her also is one small white, woolly dog, a pair of Guinea pigs, badly in need of a hair cut; a couple of young wolves, an ibis, a falcon, several owls and a family of alligators. And that's not all. With her also are several drays of the gaudiest luggage that any hotel here has ever sheltered. It is all painted red, white and green, the Hungarian colors. The princess is a Hungarian by birth and Russian by marriage, but that did not last long. Like any American girl, she had to get rid of her Russian prince. The princess is said to be a painter of some note in Europe.

Among the fishes at the aquarium likely to catch the eye of one strolling along the banks is an alert and vigorous channel bass about three feet long and weighing probably about 30 pounds. Friday found the Immam Abdullah squatted cross-legged upon the platform of the mosque. Before him, on a little stand, lay the open Koran upon which his eyes were fixed, while his chubby forefinger was energetically gesticulating to the group of excited women about him. From the expression upon his face, and the sharp interruptions from his audience, it seemed that at last, in his old age, after a life filled with the thousand theological battles, and crowned with a thousand victories, he had met his Marathon, for the longer he argued the louder grew the expostulations of the women.

"The Prophet—peace be upon him—" repeated Abdullah for the tenth time that day, and with an expression of increasing despair, "received from Paradise a message that man might have four wives. You, ladies of Mecca, demand that if a man has four wives, a woman may have four husbands. Had that been Allah's will be would long ago have revealed it."

"But Allah did not say that we should not have four husbands," cried the women. "O great Abdullah," they continued, "Allah has revealed many things through the Prophet, and we are obedient to all his laws; other things are yet to be revealed. Therefore, learn for us Allah's will. Pray that he may reveal to you, you who remember the Prophet, you who were among those to welcome him back to Mecca, you through whom Allah has already revealed so many things, if a woman may not have four husbands as a man has four wives."

"I will ask Allah to reveal his will," he sighed. "Next Friday I will impart it to you."

Abdullah's past history had been an interesting one. He was a small, barefooted boy when the prophet Mohammed returned to Mecca, and now of all the people left in the Holy City, he alone had seen him. Inspired by that rare privilege, he marked out for himself the career of a holy man. When his chin was first fuzzy with the down which evolved into the largest of patriarchal beards, he wandered as a dervish, but to suffer from hunger and thirst, and to lacerate his own body, soon ceased to be pleasures, and finally he settled down as an immam in the Holy City to gain an easier livelihood by fleecing the visiting pilgrims. In his profession he prospered. He alone was intrusted with the keys of the Kaaba, and so great was his reputed piety that he was consulted in every religious controversy. All his decisions were law, and now he was passing his last days recording for the benefit of posterity his theological views.

During his long life Adullah had seen but one sorrow—his wives had died one after another, yet that was not the cause of his grief, for never for long did he lack his full quota of wives which, both living and dead, he could count to a score. The one thorn in his flesh was that this score or more of wives had presented him with but a single offspring, a daughter, whom he had named Hanifa. This solitary plant of the harem grew and blossomed into a dark, slender, large-eyed Arab maid, sending out her tendrils of love until they entwined about the old man's heart, as if to compensate him for his lack of sons. She was the only child of 20 passing wives.

"Baba," tenderly said Hanifa, as her father, leaving the crowd of angry women in the mosque, had returned home and squatted before the dish of pilaf, which he left untasted, "are you ill?"

"No, child," replied Abdullah, with an audible sigh, yet, without paying his customary visit to the harem, he retired.

The next morning when Abdullah appeared, his eyes were sunken, for he had passed a sleepless night. During the dark hours his audience of clamoring women was ever before him, and although he had a thousand times successfully interpreted the laws of the Koran, now he had failed; his wits had deserted him, and no revelation came; his reputation as an immam would be ruined and all the wisdom displayed in the past would be in vain.

Thus tortured, he slept none and ate little. Half a dozen times daily Hanifa urged him to impart to her the cause of his sorrows, and as often did he deny that he was afflicted, yet before the week was half ended, Abdullah had become so feeble that he even neglected the book which was to perpetuate his name; he remained in the corner, silent and thoughtful

"Baba," said Hanifa, again stroking his old bald head, "tell me your troubles—perhaps I can help you."

"I have none, child," was the holy man's prevaricating reply. A deep groan followed.

Hanifa was too solicitous of the old man's health to be silent. Long she stood over him, stroking his head, yet finally when the abundance of sighs and groans seemed to be well nigh exhausted, he explained in a feeble voice how the women of Mecca had demanded a special, impossible revelation. Concluding his explanation in utter despair, he covered his face with his hands and wept.

Hanifa laughed. "Poor Baba," she said, still stroking his bald head. "Your troubles are slight."

Abdullah raised his tear-filled eyes reproachfully.

"Yes, Baba, if you will write my name just once in your great book, I will bring your troubles to an end."

Abdullah, with the eagerness of the sinking man who grasped at the straw, promised. While Hanifa was explaining the special revelation which on the appointed day he should communicate to the women in the mosque, the tears suddenly disappeared from his eyes. Fortified with a new hope and courage, he arose and shouted to his slaves to immediately bring a large tray of pilaf.

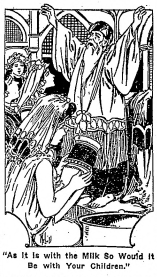
It was early Friday morning, earlier than usual, when Abdullah seated himself upon the platform of the mosque. His face was beaming with happiness, and his eye had never been more bright, for he had an important communication from Allah to reveal to the wives of the Faithful. At his side upon the platform stood an immense copper kettle which his waiting slave had brought him. One by one the rebelling women came and squatted about, anxious to hear the special revelation promised by the beaming expression upon Abdullah's face.

Finally, when they had all congregated, Abdullah, in a voice deep with mystery and awe, commanded that each woman present should go at once to her home and immediately return with a jug of milk. The women demurred. They had come, they said, to hear the revelation. Abdullah explained that no revelation was possible until his command had been obeyed, and in a few moments two score women, each with a jug of milk balanced upon her head, stood before him.

"Pour the milk into this kettle," said Abdullah, with a voice suggestive of still greater mystery, yet in his eye was a twinkle of delight which he could not conceal.

The women filed past the kettle, poured the milk into it, and returned to their places upon the floor before the great teacher. Abdullah, solemnly stroking his long beard, looked silently at the foaming camel's milk, and then slowly turned to the wondering women before him. His morning's discourse upon the perfect wisdom of Allah, and the wonderfulness of his revelations, was prefaced with a longer introduction than usual. Never had he been so eloquent—never had he spoken with such confidence.

"Now, O wives of the Faithful," he said, in concluding his long discourse, "I shall impart the revelation which Allah has sent to you through me, his faithful servant. Allah bids that each of you approach this kettle of milk; he bids that each of you take from the kettle the milk which you poured into it but a moment ago. When you shall have done this, he bids that each of you who will, take four husbands, as a man may take four wives. But," he continued, as the sparkling of his eyes increased, "Allah bids me say that if one of you shall take the thousandth part of a drop of the milk which another has poured into the kettle, it shall be accounted unto you a theft, and you shall be delivered to Iblis for eternal punishment."



"As It Is with the Milk So Would It Be with Your Children."

"O great Abdullah," finally suggested an innocent one in the audience, "we do not know which our milk is—it is all alike—it is all white and foamy."

Abdullah sprang to his feet and with his arms wildly and supernaturally waving above his head, shouted with a monstrous, prophetic voice, which thundered throughout the mosque, the special revelation from Allah:

"As it is with the milk, so would it be with your children," were the few intelligible words amid the resounding echoes. "As you can not distinguish which drop of milk you poured into the kettle, so you could not distinguish the fathers of your children. Trouble me and Allah no more with your idle words."

Abdullah's revelation must have met with Allah's favor, for the Hanifah sect has increased in numbers and in all things worldly. Prominent among its members is Abdul Hamid, the sultan, who, with millions of others speak reverently of the good old Saint Hanifa.

FARM and GARDEN

A WATER GATEWAY.

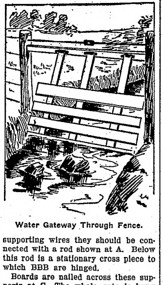
Keeps Stock In, But Does Not Obstruct Stream.

When farmers have trouble with a fence passing over a ditch or small stream they may be able to get an idea to fix their fences so as to turn stock in, from the accompanying illustration.

Posts are set at a point near the edge of the stream and if there are supporting wires they should be connected with a rod shown at A. Below this rod is a stationary cross piece to which BBB are hinged.



Water Gateway Through Fence.

Boards are nailed across these supports at C. The whole gate is hung that it swings out with the current of the stream. When the water is high the current carries the gate out and allows the passage of debris, but when the water is down the gate naturally swings in a normal position.

WEEDS IN THE PASTURE.

Mow Them Before They Have Chance to Go to Seed.

From this time on weeds will be in evidence in the permanent pastures as well as in the meadows. The weeds of the permanent pasture are mainly ragweed, dog fennel, iron weed, and the different varieties of docks. As we have pointed out for some years, the main reason for their existence, especially in the permanent pasture, lies not in the fact that the weed seeds are abundant in all soil, but that the stand of grass is not thick enough to keep them down.

Of course it is folly to allow these seeds to increase by neglect to mow them, and, therefore, one of the first after-harvest jobs is to take a mower and go over every pasture, whether permanent or in rotation, and then go over every stubble field that has been seeded to clover and while clipping back the clover and thus thickening it up prevent the development of weed seed.

The great point we wish to impress upon our readers, however, is that the reason why these weeds appear is because the stand of grass is deficient. We have seen permanent pastures this year in which there is no sign of weeds. These pastures are superb. Every available spot is filled with grass roots, and there is feed enough for two animals and only one to eat it. This means a long, late fall pasture and fat stock.

How prevent this weed growth? You can not do much now, says Wallace's Farmer. All you can do is to keep these weeds mowed down to prevent further seeding. Then next spring provide yourself with a good disk drill and drill in clover and timothy just when the frost is going out of the ground. This will thicken up your stand of grass; thicken it up to such an extent, if the land is rich enough, as to double the pasture and do away with the unsightly weeds without the trouble of keeping them mowed down.

POINTS TO REMEMBER.

Do not cultivate soil when it sticks.

Every farmer's family should have all the good fruit it can use the year around.

There is no danger of overdoing fruit growing if the marketing facilities are right.

The condition of the highway in front of a farm has very much to do with the appearance of the farm

Sunscald does not come in summer, but comes in winter. Therefore, foliage does not protect from sunscald.

The man that tries to grow pears should study pear blight in all its phases; because that is the great obstacle to pear growing in this country.

Alsike Clover on Low Land.

Alsike clover is especially adapted to low land. This gives it a great advantage over the common red clover for low localities. Many a meadow on which it has been impossible to get a catch of red clover could be made clover producing if the alsike clover is sown. It will pay to make a trial of this, for many a low piece of land is deficient in nitrogen and needs to have grown upon it a few crops of legumes.

Chicks should not be allowed to go on the roosts until they are about three months old.

SHE WAS NO HASBEEN.

Smoking Car Just the One Old Woman Was Looking For.

"Madam," said the brakeman as the train stopped at a village station and a little old woman started to enter the smoking car, "the car back is the one you want."

"How do you know?" she tartly asked.

"Because this is the smoking car."

She pushed past him and climbed up the steps, and after taking a seat she pulled out and filled a pipe, struck a match on the sole of her shoe, and after drawing a few puffs she said to a man smoking a cigar across the aisle:

"That young feller out there don't know half as much as he thinks he does."

"How so?" was asked.

"He took me for an old woman that had never rode on the cars before, and told me this was the smoking car."

"And you wanted this car?"

"Why, I never ride in any other—not unless my pipe is broke, my tobacco all out and none o' you menfolks will lend me a cigar."

ECZEMA FOR 55 YEARS.

Suffered Torments from Birth—In Frightful Condition—Got No Help Until Cuticura Cured Him.

"I had an itching, tormenting eczema ever since I came into the world, and I am now a man 55 years old. I tried all kinds of medicines I heard of, but found no relief. I was truly in a frightful condition. At last I broke out all over with red and white boils, which kept growing until they were as big as walnuts, causing great pain and misery, but I kept from scratching as well as I could. I was so run down that I could hardly do my work. I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment, Resolvent, and Pills for about eight months, and I can truthfully say I am cured. ### Sporting Offer.

As he entered the restaurant the cut of his clothes betrayed him as a member of the sporting fraternity. Choosing a corner seat, he ordered oyster stew. When the dish was brought to him, he looked at it with a critical frown, and then he began excitedly to peel off his coat and vest.

"What's the matter? What's the matter?" said the landlord, hurrying to the table.

The man looked at the stew, then at the landlord, and said:

"Bet you a dollar I can swim from one oyster to another.

FRIENDLY TIP

Restored Hope and Confidence.

After several years of indigestion and its attendant evil influence on the mind, it is not very surprising that one finally loses faith in things generally.

A N. Y. woman writes an interesting letter. She says:

"Three years ago I suffered from an attack of peritonitis which left me in a most miserable condition. For over two years I suffered from nervousness, weak heart, shortness of breath, could not sleep, etc.

"My appetite was ravenous, but I felt starved all the time. I had plenty of food but it did not nourish me because of intestinal indigestion. Medical treatment did not seem to help, I got discouraged, stopped medicine and did not care much whether I lived or died.

"One day a friend asked me why I didn't try Grape-Nuts, stop drinking coffee, and use Postum. I had lost faith in everything, but to please my friends I began to use both and soon became very fond of them.

"It wasn't long before I got some strength, felt a decided change in my system, hope sprang up in my heart and slowly but surely I got better. I could sleep very well, the constant craving for food ceased and I have better health now than before the attack of peritonitis.

"My husband and I are still using Grape-Nuts and Postum." "There's a Reason."

OPEN DEALING IN PAINT.

Buying paint used to be like the proverbial buying of a "pig in a poke." Mixtures in which chalk, ground rock, etc., predominated were marked and sold as "Pure White Lead," the deception not being apparent until the paint and the painting were paid for. This deception is still practiced, but we have learned to expose it easily.

National Lead Company, the largest makers of genuine Pure White Lead, realizing the injustice that was being done to both property owners and honest paint manufacturers, set about to make paint buying safe. They first adopted a trade mark, the now famous "Dutch-Boy Painter," and put this trademark, as a guaranty of purity, on every package of their White Lead. They then set about familiarizing the public with the blow-pipe test by which the purity and genuineness of White Lead may be determined, and furnished a blow-pipe free to every one who would write them for it. This action was in itself a guaranty of the purity of National Lead Company's White Lead.

As the result of this open dealing the paint buyer to-day has only himself to blame if he is defrauded. For test outfit and valuable booklet on painting, address National Lead Company, Woodbridge Bldg., New York.

NATURE AND A WOMAN'S WORK

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Nature and a woman's work combined have produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known.

In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers they relied upon the roots and herbs of the field to cure disease and mitigate suffering.

The Indians on our Western Plains to-day can produce roots and herbs for every ailment, and cure diseases that baffle the most skilled physicians who have spent years in the study of drugs.

From the roots and herbs of the field Lydia E. Pinkham more than thirty years ago gave to the women of the world a remedy for their peculiar ills, more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is now recognized as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

Mrs. Bertha Muff, of 515 N.C. St., Louisiana, Mo., writes:

"Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my troubles public.

"For twelve years I had been suffering with the worst forms of female ills. During that time I had eleven different physicians without help. No tongue can tell what I suffered, and at times I could hardly walk. About two years ago I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice. I followed it, and can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice restored health and strength. It is worth mountains of gold to suffering women."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Muff, it will do for other suffering women.

SHOE SIZES.

The Way They Were Arbitrarily Fixed by a Frenchman.

Stockings have always been measured by the inch from heel to toe, but the numbering of shoes was fixed a long time ago by a Frenchman, and it's so long ago that only one New York dealer could be found who knew anything about it. Even he didn't know the inventor's name.

The Frenchman permanently fixed the numbers of shoes for all Europe and America. He arbitrarily decided that no human foot could possibly be smaller than three and seven-eighths inches, so, calling this point zero, he allowed one-third of an inch to a size and so built up his scale. Consequently a man cannot find out the number of his own shoe unless he is an expert at exact arithmetic. And even then he is likely to go wrong, because all shoe experts allow for the weight of the individual and the build of his foot before they try to determine what size shoe he ought to wear.

As far as women's shoes are concerned the problem is still more difficult, because many of the manufacturers, instead of keeping to the regular scale, have marked down their numbers one or two sizes in order to capture easily flattered customers. For this reason most dealers ask out of town customers to send an old shoe with their orders.

The system of measuring hats is much simpler. Any man can tell what size he wears by simply adding the width and length of the inner rim and then dividing by two. Orders can also be sent to the storekeeper by stating the circumference of the head.—New York Sun.

HOME ADDRESSES.

Britons Have to Use a Lot of Words to Write Them.

Have you ever observed, asked the man who crosses twice a year, how we have it on the British in the matter of addresses? For instance, a New Yorker will give his address in this compact fashion:

Philip Robinson,
200 W. 81st street, N. Y.

But your traveling Briton may have to inscribe himself somewhat after the following style:

Mr. Herbert R. Eustace W. Plunket-Ferguson,
Q. C., G. C. M. G., C. B.,
The Shrubbery,
3 Tankerville Terrace,
Blenheim road, Mowbray street,
Kensington, W., London, Eng.

In olden times, before the system of street numbers had been introduced at all and cities were still a maze of little streets, addresses were a very complicated affair. I once saw an authentic specimen of a professional card of the year 1769. It was that of a celebrated French engraver. It ran like this:

Papillon,
Engraver on Wood of the Society of Arts,
Paris: Bievre street, near the place Maubert,
Next door to the porte cochere on the right,
In the long alley,
On the second floor up the grand staircase.

—Harper's Weekly.

Marlin

For shooting the swift flying, heavily feathered ducks and geese the Marlin 12-gauge repeating shotgun has no superior. This gun is exceedingly strong in construction and yet is not heavy. It is bored to throw an excellent pattern with great penetration. The solid top keeps out the weather and the brush and twigs of the blind, and the side ejector prevents the empty shells from being a nuisance to the shooter. It's the best bad weather gun.

Accidental Shooting.

On Tuesday morning Victor, the 13-year-old son of P. S. Medchill, had a narrow escape from death by the accidental discharge of a shotgun. As it was he sustained a very painful and serious wound in the right arm.

It seems that the boy was helping his father put up hay and was carrying the shotgun on the hayrake to shoot crows. The gun slipped down and he was pulling it up by the muzzle when the hammer was snapped and the weapon discharged. The entire charge struck the arm tearing the flesh from the bone above and below the elbow. His cries brought his father to him and he hastened with the boy to town and telephoned to Thief River Falls for a physician. Dr. Bockman responded and came down as qnickly as his automobile could bring him. The wound was temporarily dressed and the boy taken to the hospital at Thief River Ealls for treatment. Reports yesterday state the boy is doing nicely as the bones are not injured.

Taking the Wrong Path.

Harry Colby, age 15 yeare, who had been working in this office for a short time, made a very silent move away a week ago last Monday and for two or three days had a number of Plummer people wondering whether he had got lost in the woods or had simply left for parts unknown. The editor's revolver disapeared with him and it was feared he might nave met with an accident. As he had left all his personal effecfs behind this idea seemed to be the only reasonable one to account for his absence. The police at Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls' Erskine and Fertile were notified by phone to be on the lookout for him and on Thursday afternoon he showed up at Fertile and was promptly arrested on a charge of petty larceny. He was brought back to Plummer on Wednesday of this week and admitted his guilt before Judge Rothsten. He was given an indeterminate sentence in the State Training School at Red Wing and commitment suspended during good behavior.

Storm was a Corker:

On last Sunday evening this section of the country was visited by the worst storm in its history. The rain poured down for about three hours and during that tims more rain fell than has fallen altogether during the entire preceding months of the year. The rain was accompanied by a fierce wind and some hail and the lightning was continuous. Quite a number of people report having been damaged more or less.

Octave Lafave, of Garnes, lost about thirty acres of oats which was uncut and pounded into the earth. C. D. Whaley, of Mayfield township, sustained a similar loss. A. C. Mayfield also reports some damage to his uncut grain.

At L. T. Bergh's place in Mayfield lightening struck his big new barn which was filled with hay. This bolt was just out for fun as it only smashed the lights in one window and split a studding without damaging the contents of the barn in the least.

THE MAGIC PAINTING

When the Room Was Darkened the Cow Went to Sleep.

IT WAS A VERY SIMPLE TRICK

How the Transformation Was Effected and How Some Other Seemingly Wonderful Effects May Be Produced by the Aid of Chemicals.

The Chinese Emperor Tai Tsung possessed among other treasures a picture known as a magic painting. It represented a pastoral scene with a cow standing in a field and mountains beyond. When the picture was shown to strangers or guests and they admired it, the emperor would say:

"Yes, this is a remarkable painting. The cow, as you see, is standing, but if the room was darkened the cow would think it night and would lie down."

Then the emperor would order the room to be darkened, and the cow would be seen to be lying down, apparently asleep.

The picture was a water color, over which was painted in colorless phosphorescent paint a similar picture representing the cow lying down. In the light the standing animal was seen, but at night or in a darkened room only the phosphorescent picture was visible. So the magic picture was, after all, a very simple trick.

A Dresden chemist named Schade discovered a method of imitating it which can be accomplished as follows:

First paint in ordinary colors the picture of the cow standing. Then melt some Zanzibar copal over a charcoal fire and dissolve fifteen parts of it in sixty parts of French oil of turpentine. Filter this and mix with twenty five parts of pure linseed oil which has been previously heated and cooled.

Now take forty parts of the varnish so obtained and mix with six parts of prepared calcium carbonate, twelve parts of prepared white zinc sulphide and thirty-six parts of luminous calcium sulphide, all of which can be obtained from any chemist.

This emulsion should be ground very fine in a color mill. The result will be white luminous paint, which should be used to paint the cow lying down.

Many seemingly wonderful tricks can be performed with the use of a few simple chemicals. One of them is the ball of fire. Take for this barium sulphate (CP) one part, magnesium carbonate (CP) one part, gum tragacanth q. s. This should be mixed and rolled into marbles and kept at a red heat for about an hour, then allowed to cool slowly and placed in a glass stoppered bottle. A few hours before using place in the sun, and the marbles at once become luminous.

At the entertainment ordinary marbles are passed among the audience, one or more of the luminous marbles being concealed in the hand. The exhibitor then takes a marble from some one in the audience, holds it between his thumb and forefinger, blows upon it and asks to have the lights turned down. As this is done he substitutes the luminous marble, and the mysterious light is seen. This is handed around and changes again as the light is turned on, when the magician presents to the audience several of the ordinary marbles as souvenirs.

Another trick is very effective. Take two similar bunches of artificial flowers. Brush one over with glue or mucilage and powder it with the dust from one of the marbles described. Then place in the sun. When taken into a darkened room, luminous flowers are seen. The magician exhibits the flowers that have not been prepared and shows that there is nothing peculiar about them. Then as the light is turned down he substitutes the concealed bunch, blows upon the flowers and, presto, displays to the astonished observers a luminous bunch, each flower of which stands out as if at white heat.

Luminous letters can be written and exhibited in the dark to the wonder of the audience. Luminous ink is made by placing a piece of phosphorus about the size of a pea in a test tube with a little olive oil. Place the tube in a water bath until the oil becomes heated and the phosphorus liquid. Shake well and pour into a bottle with a glass stopper. Admit air just previous to using it, and the fluid will become luminous tracery in the dark.

Water can be rendered luminous in a very simple manner. Dissolve a small piece of phosphorus in ether for several days in a glass stoppered bottle. In this place a lump of sugar, then drop the sugar in water, which will at once become luminous.

Luminous paints can be made any color—green, yellow, violet or blue—and if applied to various objects make a wonderful display at night.

One Exception.

"You know," began Lovett, "it is said that 'love levels all things.'"

"Yes," remarked the crusty bachelor, "it may level all things except the lover's head."—Philadelphia Press.

To the voters of Red Lake County

I am a candidate for the Rebublican nomination for Superintendent of Schools. Since the voters have the selection to make, they naturally desire to know the professional qualifications of those seeking the position.

As a young boy, I came here with my parents from Indiana in 1883 and in 1895 began teaching in the district schools of this county. Since then during the greater part of thirteen years, I have taught in the district and graded schools.

In 1907 I graduated from the advanced course of study of the Moorhead State Normal School and was employed as principal of the graded school at Burtrum, Minnesota, the same year.

My experience in all kinds of school work has made me thoroly familiar with our educational system and its needs.

As it is impossible for me to meet all the voters in the county, I respectfully submit my application to you with the assurance that if nominated and elected, I shall do everything in my power to increase the efficiency of our schools.

Truly yours,
HERMAN F. ANDERSON.

25,000 WITNESS SAD TRAGEDY

AERONAUT JONES FALLS 500 FEET TO DEATH WHILE ASCENDING.

The Accident Occurred at the Central Maine Fair. Fire Destroys the Gas Bag. The Motor Frame Drops. Wife Witnesses Death.

Waterville, Me., Sept. 3.—In full view of 25,000 horrified spectators assembled on the Central Maine fair grounds here late yesterday, Charles O. Jones, a well known aeronaut of Hammondsport, N. Y., fell a distance of five hundred feet to his death.

Among the witnesses of the frightful plunge were Mrs. Jones and her child, and they were almost the first to reach the side of the dying man. The aeronaut died an hour and a half after the accident.

Jones had been at the fair grounds with his dirigible balloon "Boomerang," known as a Strobel airship, since Monday. Today he arranged to make a flight between 3 and 4 o'clock, but such a high wind prevailed that a delay was necessary. At 4:30 conditions had modified and he gave the word to release the machine.

When the aeronaut reached a height of more than 500 feet the spectators were amazed to see small tongues of flames issueing from under the gas bag in front of the motor. The balloon had passed out of the fair grounds. Many persons in the great crowd endeavored to apprise Jones of his danger, but several minutes elapsed before he noticed the fire. Then he grasped the rip cord and by letting out gas endeavored to reach the earth. The machine had descended but a short distance when a sudden burst of flame enveloped the gas bag, the frame work immediately seperating from the bag.

Jones fell with the frame of his motor and when the horrified spectators reached him he was lying under it. The big gas bag was completely destroyed.

Jones was injured internally and his spine was broken.

Jones was one of the younger aeronauts but his work had marked him as one of the most successful.

MAN FOUND MURDERED

Marks on Face Show That Life Was Clubbed Out.

Grand Forks, N. D., Sept. 1.—A case of murder was discovered Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock when the body of an unknown man was found floating in the Red river by Capt. Hayes of the government boat Ogama.

Indications that the man had been murdered were found in his face, which bore evidences of a severe beating. Some instrument had been used to club out the life of the deceased. There was no water in the lungs, as is the case when a person is drowned. That the man is a laborer was evident from his hands. Some of the officials believe that the body had not been in the river over three days.

One peculiar circumstance is not explained. The man's shoes are missing. Some are inclined to believe that he was killed by heartless thugs, who even took his shoes before throwing the body into the river.

HISGEN IN THE SADDLE

New York, Sept. 2.—There was not room enough in the new clubhouse of the Independence league to hold the large crowd that gathered Monday night for the dual purpose of being present at the notification of Thomas L. Hisgen, Independence party candidate for president, and the housewarming of the club.

William R. Hearst and Mr. Hisgen entered the clubhouse shortly after nine o'clock and were greeted by an outburst of cheers. Hisgen was enthusiastically referred to as "the trust buster" and "our next president." These titles brought forth more cheering.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

New Laws.

St. Paul—New laws to provide for accurate public records of all corporations doing business in Minnesota by a plan that would materially increase the state revenues without hardship to the corporations will be recommended to the legislature by Julius A. Schmahl, secretary of state, in his annual report now in preparation.

Briefly stated, Mr. Schmahl's plan is that all corporations operated for pecuniary gain, whether they be state or foreign corporations, shall be required to file in the office of the secretary of state annual statements of their business status and to pay a filing fee of $5 or $10 each year.

He suggests that this annual statement should show the officers and directors of the company at the time of filing the report, the principal place of business, and the location of its plants and warehouses, and should state the amount of stock sold or transferred in the year and give a list of the stockholders. The proposed law, he says, should contain a clause giving the secretary of state the right, in case no statement be filed within a reasonable time after the date fixed, to declare the charter of a corporation forfeited.

Habits of Deer.

Duluth—"It seems rather odd, but it is a fact, nevertheless, that the best deer hunting in northern Minnesota is within ten or fifteen miles of the limits of cities, towns and villages in this section of the state," said S. T. Austin of Bemidji, a timber cruiser who passed through Duluth yesterday. "The farther one gets from civilization, the better moose hunting he finds, and the fewer deer. In what I consider the best moose districts of the state there are no deer at all. In some sections where there were none of these animals five or six years ago, the hunting is now good. The deer seem to have gone in with the settlers.

"I don't know how to explain this, unless by saying that the deer are attracted by the gardens of the settlers. There is nothing dearer to a deer's heart than a turnip patch, and he will travel miles, and take all kinds of risks, to get into one. I know men who make it a practice every spring to plant turnips out in the woods, or somewhere in a burning, so they may hunt deer there in the fall. All they have to do is to watch along about dusk, and the animals come in to feed."

Dock Is Damaged.

Duluth—The almost finished new steel dock of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad, at Two Harbors, and the machinery used in constructing the dock, was damaged to the extent of $15,000 during the night by unknown men. The men escaped without being detected.

No dynamite or other explosives were used. The damage consisted in bending, twisting and breaking machinery and ironwork of the dock, and throwing whatever could be worked loose into the water.

This outrage is believed to be directed against the bridge company, which furnished material for the Two Harbors structure, and which, it is opposed to labor unions.

Increased Valuation.

St. Paul—From the preliminary reports of the state tax commission, as compiled from the returns of the county auditors of the state, it appears that the taxable property of the state has increased about $80,000,000 during the past year. The total amount is now $1,155,000,000. This will probably be cut several million dollars by the state board of equalization which meets next month.

The increase this year is but slightly larger than that of a year ago, although the increase in some counties has been remarkable. Isanti county shows the largest increase, it appearing that there has been an increase of $9,000,000 in the value of property there. This increase is largely on mineral lands.

Costly Ore.

Aurora—It was decidedly costly ore that was sent out some days ago, when for the first time this season a shipment was made from the Canisteo district of the western Mesaba. It is estimated that already $8,000,000 have been expended by the United States Steel Corporation in opening the new mining field, yet to date there have been forwarded only 13,000 tons of ore, of which 600 tons comprised the latest shipment.

NEWS NOTES.

Duluth—Supreme court holds that St. Louis county may issue bonds for erection of courthouse.

Crookston—A well known authority on paving material states that he believes the clay that exists in this section can be used for the manufacture of an excellent quality of paving brick.

Hamline—For the forty-ninth time since its inception and organization, the gates of the Minnesota state fair swung open for the Northwest's annual outing week at 8 o'clock Monday morning.

St. Paul—Hugo Ecklund, 19 years old, and a visitor from Red Wing, was stabbed during a fight between several Greeks at midnight near Seventh and Jackson streets.

St. Cloud—Minnesota postal clerks are tired of laboring on Sunday, and of handling second-class matter which is not properly labeled.

WATCH OVER 300 YEARS OLD OWNED BY CHICAGOAN.

Said to Have Been Made Without the Aid of Machinery—Still Ticking Off Minutes with Commendable Accuracy.

Chicago.—One of the most remarkable heirlooms in the possession of any Chicagoan is a watch made more than 300 years ago in England and brought to this country in 1634. It is owned by Reuben S. Price, a retired traveling man, living at 756 East Seventy-second street.

Although this is the sixth generation of the family in America that has owned the watch, it is still recording faithfully Father Time's hours and minutes with the most commendable accuracy.

The watch was made near the close of the fifteenth century, and there is an indisputable record of its ownership from the year 1634, when it was in the possession of Mordecai Price, who was among the very earliest settlers in Anne Arundel county, Maryland. The watch was handed down from father to son from Mordecai the first to his son Mordecai, and his son's son Mordecai, the latter bequeathing it to his son Elijah, who in turn intrusted it into the hands of his son John K., the father of the present possessor of the relic.

The various owners and the dates of their acquisition of the watch are engraved upon the back as follows:

I was brought to St. Mary's, Maryland, in 1634 by Mordecai Price.
1662 his son, Mordecai Price, Jr.
1723 his son, Mordecai Price, Jr., Jr.
1781 his son, Elijah Price.
1830 his son John K. Price.
1862 his son. Reuben S. Price.

Continuing the custom from the first Mordecai down through six generations, Reuben S. Price will some time give the valuable curio to his own and only son, Reuben S. Price. Jr.

Dial and Back of Ancient Watch.

Mr. Price naturally prizes it above price, having recently refused an offer of $1,000 for it.

The watch, in the opinion of a well-known Chicago watchmaker, was made entirely by hand, probably the only one in existence made without the aid of machinery. Even the tiny chain, which age does not seem to have worn, was put together by the patient fingers of its maker over three centuries ago. The movement is incased in a solid silver covering which fits inside another case, the outside case being open on one side and the inner case containing the crystal.

The dial contains two rows of figures, an inside circle bearing Roman characters to denote the hours, and an outside row set with the Arabic figures to indicate the minutes.

The watch has a very peculiar tick, the sound caused by its vibrations resembling very much the noise produced by the light tapping of a pencil point on an inverted tin cup. Around the outer edge of the center circle (which is countersunk) of the dial is the imprint of the maker of the watch, as follows:

RD. BANNER.
LIVERPOOL.

Mr. Price bases his estimate of the date of making of the watch upon investigations he made concerning this Richard Banner, while on a recent visit to Liverpool. On consulting the archives of the city he found that one Richard Banner was engaged in the watchmaking business there prior to 1600, but after that date all records of him ceased, evidently showing his death at about that time.

During the time in which it was handed down from one descendant of the Price family to another the watch was permitted to lie dead for a period of a full century, after which it was repaired and coaxed into its old ways of keeping good time, which it still continues to do.

In size the watch is something less than the dimensions of a modern timekeeper.

The record obtained from the family genealogy shows that the watch was carried through many momentous periods of our country's history, including the eight years when in the revolution, and it ticked off the weary some hours and minutes through which our fathers struggled for American independence.

What is Pe-ru-na.

Are we claiming too much for Peruna when we claim it to be an effective remedy for chronic catarrh? Have we abundant proof that Peruna is in reality such a catarrh remedy? Let us see what the United States Dispensatory says of the principal ingredients of Peruna.

Take, for instance, the ingredient hydrastis canadensis, or golden seal. The United States Dispensatory says of this herbal remedy, that it is largely employed in the treatment of depraved mucous membranes lining various organs of the human body.

Another ingredient of Peruna, corydalis formosa, is classed in the United States Dispensatory as a tonic.

Cedron seeds is another ingredient of Peruna. The United States Dispensatory says of the action of cedron that it is used as a bitter tonic and in the treatment of dysentery, and in intermittent diseases as a substitute for quinine.

Send to us for a free book of testimonials of what the people think of Peruna as a catarrh remedy. The best evidence is the testimony of those who have tried it.

CURED HER CHILDREN.

Girls Suffered with Itching Eczema—Baby Had a Tender Skin, Too—Relied on Cuticura Remedies.

"Some years ago my three little girls had a very bad form of eczema. Itching eruptions formed on the backs of their heads which were simply covered. I tried almost everything, but failed. Then my mother recommended the Cuticura Remedies. I washed my children's heads with Cuticura Soap and then applied the wonderful ointment, Cuticura. I did this four or five times and I can say that they have been entirely cured. I have another baby who is so plump that the folds of skin on his neck were broken and even bled. I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and the next morning the trouble had disappeared. Mme. Napoleon Duceppe, 41 Duluth St., Montreal, Que., May 11, 1907."

When the Little Man Scored.

A meek-looking little man with a large pasteboard box climbed on the car. As he did so he bumped slightly into a sleepy, corpulent passenger with a self-satisfied look and two little dabs of sidewhiskers. As the car rounded a curve the box rubbed against him again and he growled: "This is no freight car, is it?" "Nope," returned the meek little chap with the box, "and when you come right down to it, it ain't any cattle car, either, is it?"

Special Test of Timber.

An example of the progress of the science of forestry in this country is furnished by the co-operation just arranged between the University of Idaho and the United States forest service for testing the timber growing in the State of Idaho. The tests will be specially directed to determine the fitness of these timbers for use as bridge stringers, railroad ties and paving blocks.

Politics Their Only Support

Professional Politicians' Only Visible Means of Livelihood.

By ERNEST McGAFFEY

Between Elections This Type Is Everything from Ghoul to Aeronaut.

THERE had grown up in our city an army of men who followed politics strictly as a means of earning a livelihood. They either expected to make a living by holding office of some kind or another, or they figured on making both ends meet by attaching themselves to the train of some "boss," who would dole out crumbs to them in some way, direct or indirect. Sometimes they figured on getting business of some kind through their connection with politics. But at any rate, there they were, with "no visible means of support" excepting politics. They might be in the directory as taxidermists, astronomers, chemists, ratcatchers, lawyers, aeronauts, plumbers' helpers, grave-diggers, clerks, or what you like, but as a matter of fact they depended on politics for a living.

Sometimes they were in one business, sometimes another, but you could find them always at the ward meetings, always at the primaries, always at the conventions, caucuses (when they could get in) at the city hall, at ward headquarters, at downtown headquarters, in the saloons where politicians might occasionally be found, at the funerals, dances, picnics, and all social gatherings, and, indeed, wherever acquaintance might be made or self-interest fostered. They were very busy individuals, and simply whirlwinds of energy around about election time.

If they had held a paying "job" for some time, and a change of administration had brought with it the disagreeable necessity of "resigning," they were usually "waiting" until the next municipal election. As these occurred every two years, in my time, the wait was over before the enforced "hand-to-mouth" existence entirely broke their spirits. Meantime, they skated about, working every avenue to keep alive and hold their own in "the organization." Give them credit, you with the three square meals a day, for their superb nerve. If you tackled one of these "captains of hope" he was as cheerful as a bumble bee on a thistle top. Everything was lovely, things never looked better, "the organization" was in elegant shape, "we" were going to win next time, etc. How he would lay down the assurance of victory with various tremendously suggestive chunks of wisdom, culled from his ever-effervescent "bonnet." How sanguine he was of glory and offices in the future. Well, even if it was straight "bunk" there was a gleam of possibility in it.

And his airy, insouciant, diffident "by the way, Bill, let me have a dollar till to-morrow" when the glittering "dope" had been exhausted—well, if you had it why not let him have it? The sands of every lucky office holder's career are strewn with the wrecks of dollars that were cast away to such siren invitations.

The evolution of such a politician might be from the bench of a bright young mechanic, ambitious to shine in the difficult calcium glare of publicity. He might get elected as a delegate to a city convention and get the "political bug" lodged under his hat. He might read up on the election laws and get so he could raise "a point of order" at a ward meeting. He might electioneer for some alderman, and, after the victory, get a bran new ten-dollar bill, which seemed like money off a Christmas tree. He might get elected secretary or president of the ward club. He might get to be a sort of political jackal to the "boss" who controlled his district. There were a great many ways in which he might distinguish himself in this way, but usually at the expense of his trade.

Or he might be some young lawyer with a gift for "the gab," who had attracted the attention of the leaders as having the nucleus of a "speaker" in him. If he was making money in his profession, so much the better. In that event was "milked" for contributions to the party and sent broadcast at night to split the tobacco-enveloped empyrean of the halls where the voters gathered to hear about the "burning issues." These "voters," I may remark in passing, were confined to the garbage-wagon drivers, the sewer-pipe extension men, the city employes and others who had a real interest in politics, and who could stand all sorts of oratory if they could only smoke.

Such a victim as I have described was often held close to work and disbursement by promises, half-promises or suggestions of some prominent gift in the party nominations. Sometimes as the years rolled on and he never realized his ambitions, even in the shape of a nomination, he drew out a sadder and a wiser man and let the political will-o'-the-wisps alone.

But strange things happened in politics sometimes. One young lawyer, whose legal qualifications were meager to attenuation, had been nominated and elected to a certain office, and at the end of his term craved still higher honors official. So he got a lawyer of his acquaintance, a venerable attorney of marked ability, to circulate a petition urging his nomination for a still higher position. The old lawyer circulated among the members of the bar of his acquaintance, and it was considered such a good joke that he got many prominent and influential names of lawyers who never gave a thought to the possible nomination of the young fellow. The petition aided the aspirant substantially; he got the nomination, and what's more, he was elected. He retired from office with fees of his office aggregating about a quarter of a million dollars.
